COLLECTORS' CLUB HAS NEW QUARTERS

Forty-eighth Street Building Will Be Future Home of Stamp Collectors.

ORGANIZED THIRTY YEARS

Early next month the Collectors' Club, which is the centre of philatelic activity in this section of the country, will move into its new and what is expected to be permanent home at 51 West Forty-eighth Street. Founded thirty years ago by a small coterie of dealers and private collectors of that much-ridiculed hobby, postage stamp collecting, the organization has grown steadily and has been influential in educating the public to the view that postage stamps are as worthy of general interest and intensive study as the collecting of old books, autographs or fine paintings.

The leading experts of philately in Europe and other foreign lands are members of the club, as are most of the prominent collectors in America and Canada. One of the leading members of the club is Charles Lathrop Pack, who is perhaps better known to the public as the outstanding exponent of forest preservation.

He was recently honored by receiving the Lindenberg medal awarded annually by the Berlin Philatelic Club for particular merit in philatelic work. Mr. Pack is the only American who ever received that award, which was established in 1905 and named from the founder of the Berlin club. It was presented chiefly for his able monograph on the early stamp issues of New Zealand, generally known as the "Queen Enthroned" series.

For several years the club has occupied a floor in the remodeled building at 120 West Forty-ninth Street. A few years ago steps were taken to raise a building fund. About $20,000 was raised among the members, and with this as a nucleus, supplemented by the purchase of bonds secured by the long leasehold value of the property and the ownership of the building by the club, the trustees took over the forty-seven-year lease on the Forty-eighth Street plot.

The fee to the land is owned by Columbia University, being a portion of the early Botanic Garden associated with the activities of Dr. David Hosack. Several thousand dollars has been spent in remodeling the old residence, formerly the home of Mrs. Helen M. Hoyt. Ford, Butler & Oliver were the architects, and from their design a three-story extension has been constructed in front of the house out to the building line.

The ground floor has been arranged for retail store. Three well-known stamp dealers have rented offices on the second floor, being Herman Tozaparn, whose specialty is accumulating rarities for auction sales; George B. Sloane and Marshall Hancock. The rear of the third floor will be occupied by the J. C. Morgenthau Company, probably the largest auction stamp firm in this country. The firm has been in the Nassau Street postage stamp centre for many years. The uptown removal, with that of Mr. Sloane, who also has Nassau Street offices, indicates that the stamp dealers, like so many other trade interests, are showing an inclination to move to the uptown Forty-second Street area.

Another important stamp move which took place recently was the leasing for a long term by the Scott Stamp and Coin Company, the leading dealers in the United States, of the entire second floor of the new Brentano Building in Forty-seventh Street, near Fifth Avenue.

The Collectors' Club will occupy for its general meeting room and offices the greater part of the third floor, and on the fourth floor ample provision has been made to house its philatelic library, which ranks among the most complete and valuable in the world, containing several thousand volumes and pamphlets. Each floor has fireproof vaults. An elevator has been installed and the new building will provide an attractive business and club addition to the Forty-eighth Street block between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, which has recently undergone a radical transformation from a select residential thoroughfare to a commercial block.

The Collectors' Club at the present time has 624 members. Nearly 100 were added during the past year. Theodore E. Steinway is President. He held that office several years ago and succeeded, at the last annual meeting John N. Luff, the leading postage stamp expert in this country, who declined a re-election and was made an honorary Life Governor. Charles E. Curie is Vice President, Dr. J. Brace Chittenden, Secretary, and Harry M. Lewy, Treasurer.

The Board of Governors consists of Charles J. Phillips, Colonel J. Philip Benkard, Dr. Chittenden, Charles E. Curie, Charles M. Ams, Harry M. Lewy, K. M. Hall, Harry L. Lindquest and Joseph S. Rich. Alfred H. Lichtenstein, one of the well-known students of philately in this country as well as a prominent collector, is Chairman of the Board of Trustees, the other members being Julius C. Morgenthau and President Steinway.

The Collectors' Club took the initiative in organizing the International Stamp Exhibition, which will be held in the Grand Central Palace next October. The leading stamp experts from more than twenty foreign countries, including Japan, will be among the judges and most of the prominent European collectors will be exhibitors.

The new building has a frontage of 21.6 feet on Forty-eighth Street.

SYNDICATE BUYS BUNGALOWS

Group Takes Over Houses at Far Rockaway.

Thirty-two bungalows on Beach Twenty-fourth Street, Far Rockaway, being approximately 100 feet on the ocean and widening to 140 feet, and running a stretch of 800 feet, upon which 400 feet contains the bungalows and the other 400 feet being undeveloped, were purchased by a syndicate composed of Nathan M. Abramson, Jules Corn and Mark Knobel from the C. D. R. Realty Corporation, Saul Singer, President.

It is the intention of the syndicate to build about twenty additional bungalows in front of those already on the premises. The thirty-two bungalows are stuccoed and completely furnished. The land adjoins the Brooklyn Children's Aid Society, and the proposed boardwalk will cross the property.

FRENCH AND SPANISH MEET RIFF ENVOYS, BUT FAIL TO AGREE

Moors Will Be Sent Back Today by Airplane to Submit Armistice Terms.

PLEAD LACK OF AUTHORITY

Spanish Insist That He Be Not Allowed to Reside In Any Moslem Country.

TAOURIRT, Morocco, April 18.—General Simon and his French and Spanish collaborators met the Riff representatives today at Fort Berteaux, ten miles from here, to discuss armistice terms preparatory to the peace conference which was to have been held at Oudja tomorrow.

The upshot was that Abd-el-Krim's emissaries asked for five days in which to return to the Riff to consult their Emir on whether or not he is willing to concede the French and Spanish the demand that he retire his forces five miles behind the present line over a distance of twenty-five miles as a guarantee of good faith and security during discussion of the peace conditions.

French Lend Airplane to Riffians.

The conference was held after lunch, and at 6 o'clock this evening, when it ended, the question being discussed was whether the French would help hasten action by lending a military airplane to carry the Riffian envoys back to Agadir. This request was granted by the obliging French and tomorrow Abd-el-Krim's delegates will return to the Riff on a French airplane to hold consultation with their chief.

Their contention was that they had not sufficient powers to take such an important decision affecting the military situation. Even during the preliminary discussions of the past few weeks so important a step had not been discussed and in the friendliest way possible the above decision was arrived at. Whenever they return with Abd-el-Krim's assent—if they ever return—they will begin again at the beginning the discussion of how peace is to be managed.

The setting for today's discussions was in rugged contrast to the mirrored halls in which peace terms usually are discussed, or the Forest of Compiegne where France imposed the last armistice. Camp Berteaux is a small advanced French post set in the midst of the most desolate regions in all Morocco. Its glaring white bastioned walls shelter a garrison of thirty-five native soldiers and enclose a space only of some 200 yards square. It stands on a little plateau of rock and yellow clay looking out across the sparse drab valleys of Oued Mouloya and Oued Za.

Two hundred yards north is the Spanish line and a little way beyond it the brown verdureless mountains of the Riff rise like giant ash heaps at the edge of the barren plain. To the south stretches a yellow desert of clay, streaked with white alkali.

Native Villages Near By.

Just outside the fortress is a dirty little native village of low thatched huts with naked half-breed children sprawling before them almost under the feet of goats and donkeys. Clinging to the fortress wall is a little civilian street of Arab teashops and vendors of various supplies for the Moorish soldiers.

Life is listless and intolerably dull—a matter only of food and sleep and endurance of the scorching sun. The place is as remote as the moon from our world, and the nearest town worth a passing thought is Fez, 200 miles westward.

Cars bearing the delegates approached this morning from Taourirt, where the Riffian representatives had spent the night along the rough trail winding across the beds of dry rivers between flat expanses of arid plain dotted with mounds of clay and alkali. The sky was cloudless, the sun scorching.

Three kilometers in advance of the post's mounted guards, Spahis under a Moorish sergeant, guarded the passage from the civil area into the military zone surrounding the post. At the fort itself a guard of native foot troops in Turbans and baggy brown trousers stood with fixed bayonets on either side of the gateway. In front of them Captain Pisani, commander of the post, and Commandant Denis, commander of the region waited, watching the road with field glasses for the arrival of the delegates.

Far down the road a car appeared in a cloud of white dust. A crowd of newspaper correspondents of half a dozen nationalities began pouring into the little town. At eleven o'clock the outpost guard came sharply to attention as the car passed with the white robed Riffian envoys and escorted by M. Gabrielli, one of the chief French agents in the pourparlers which preceded today's meeting. The Riffian delegates are Azerkane and Ahmen Cheddit, of the Beni Ouriaghel, Abd-el-Krim's own tribe, and Hityi, of World's First Radio Parish Organized in Portland, Me.

PORTLAND, Me., April 18 (AP).—The First Radio Parish, non-sectarian, believed to be the world's first radio parish, was formed here today, when the Rev. Howard O. Hough was installed as pastor.

Representatives of nine denominations were present, either in the studio audience or as participants in the program, when the services were broadcast from WCSH. Shutins and others throughout New England and the Middle Atlantic States listened to the service, which was on the air from 1:30 to 2:36 P. M.

The Rev. Mr. Hough has been broadcasting a weekly service since November and because of the responses received has resigned as pastor of the Advent Christian Church here to assume the pastorate of the Radio Parish.

Business men and others interested have pledged financial support. A violinist, a pianist and a mixed quartet assisted at the service today.

TURKS CALL TROOPS FROM FEAR OF ITALY

"Security Measures" Are Laid to Mussolini's Speech in Tripoli.

GREEK DEAL IS REPORTED

Compact With Italy Is Said to Have Included Loan Spent on Arms and Munitions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 18—Reports from Constantinople that the Angora Government has called to the colors all 1926 classes of recruits and all recruits exempted from service in previous years, has aroused a considerable amount of speculation in diplomatic circles.

According to the Constantinople dispatches the "security measures" taken are the result of apprehension caused by Mussolini's speeches in Tripoli and by a reported compact between Italy and Greece. An Italian attack on Anatolia is said to be feared and also the possibility of Greece attempting to recover the territories in the neighborhood of Smyrna which she lost in the 1922 disaster.

The existence of the compact between Italy and Greece is denied by the Italian Government, but The Daily Express says:

"What is known to exist is an agreement whereby Italy gave Greece a loan of £2,000,000 to be expended in Italy on armaments and other provisions.

Mussolini Bid to Rule Arabs Seen.

That Mussolini is making a bid for leadership in the Arab world as one of the preliminaries to his program of colonial expansion in Northern Africa and Asia Minor is a fact, according to The Westminster Gazette. It publishes an article by a "well-informed" correspondent who declares that Mussolini hopes to obtain a footing in Asia Minor by force majeure and later on, perhaps through the mandatory system of the League of Nations, to obtain control of the territories in Northern Africa and elsewhere at present within the French sphere of influence.

Saying that to obtain both these objectives Italy would need to win over the Arabs, the article continues:

"Now that Turkey is a secular republic and no longer the spiritual centre of the Moslem world, Turkish and Arab interests are no longer identical.

"Turkey can no longer appeal to the Arabs on the basis of Islam. The French are hard put to it to hold their own against the discontent of the Arabs throughout their overseas possessions and mandated territories. All this is to Italy's advantage."

Turks Watch Mussolini Closely.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 18 (AP).—Though rumors have been current of a possible conflict between Turkey and Italy, the Constantinople newspapers declare there is nothing abnormal in the situation and refuse to credit the suggestion that Italy would make an unprovoked attack on Turkey.

They express satisfaction, however, that the Government is taking all necessary precautions.

There is considerable nervousness among the people because of the urgent action of the Turkish Recruiting Bureau in calling up the classes aged

WEISBORD SET FREE AS SHERIFFS MASS MEN TO GUARD MILLS

Bail Reduced to $5,000, Leader Returns to Direct Strikers in Today's Picketing.

SAYS WRIT WON'T STOP IT

WISE ASSAILS EMPLOYERS

Rabbi Says They and Officers of Law Have Dishonored Their State —Criticizes Moore.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 18.—Albert Weisbord, leader of the textile strikers, was released today from the Bergen County Jail at Hackensack, where he was locked up yesterday in $25,000 bail. He came immediately to this city to confer with other strike leaders on plans for the resumption of picketing despite an injunction obtained by the Forstmann-Huffman Mills, which with other plants will open tomorrow.

The release of the strike leader was accomplished by the reduction to $5,000 of the $25,000 bail fixed by Recorder Richard F. Baker in Garfield. The order for the bail reduction was signed by Judge William M. Seufert of the Bergen County Court of Common Pleas on the recommendation of County Prosecutor A. C. Hart.

Weisbord declined last night to say what he would recommend to the strikers in regard to picketing in violation of the injunction, but asserted that "workers who have not been deterred by tear bombs, by fire hose and by Cossacks will not be deterred by a piece of paper called a restraining order."

Prosecutor Hart said he would not present to the Bergen County Grand Jury, which will convene on Wednesday, the charges on which Weisbord was arrested at Garfield. These charges were that the strike leader "did unlawfully by speech encourage and incite to riot in Belmont Park, Garfield, by exclaiming among other things: 'No scab will be allowed to enter this plant. Stop all scabs, bosses, foremen and pencil pushers. As they say in France, "They shall not pass." 'Even if you have to use force, stop them.'

"I have carefully examined the papers in the charge," said Mr. Hart, "and I am frank to say that I could not recommend to the Grand Jury his indictment on the charge as presented."

Sheriff and Force Arrive.

Meanwhile Sheriff Charles W. Morgan of Passaic County came to Passaic from Paterson tonight with 150 deputies, all former service men, to protect the Botany, the Gera and the Forstmann-Huffmann Mills in this city. He said he would enforce the terms of the injunction. Sheriff Nimmo of Bergen County also was preparing to have his deputies at the Forstmann-Huffmann plant at Garfield, and to depend in a measure upon the Rio act, which he read last week, to aid the injunction in preventing mass picketing. Sheriff Morgan also said that, if read the Riot act tomorrow.

The principal regulations which, it is understood, the deputies will enforce, will be to prohibit any save workers entering a restricted area within one block of each mill and restrict the number of pickets at each of the three mills to twelve persons. The Sheriff received the assurance of the strikers, it was said, that these rules would be observed by them.

While Weisbord was conferring with his lieutenants and issuing his statement, which Sheriff Morgan said he believed was in contempt of the injunction, several hundred strikers heard an address at the Russian Greek Catholic Church, Monroe and Third Streets, by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, condemning the attitude of the employers, the police and the courts against the strikers. He asserted that the strikers were the victims of low wages, unsanitary working conditions and espionage while employed in the mills. He accused the mill owners of raising a false issue, of communism and refusing to heed offers made by himself and other citizens to mediate the strike.

He said the "American people have looked with horror upon the debasement of police and judicial power to the purposes of strike-breaking" and called upon the Bar Association of the State to "protest against strike-breaking practices of the courts and redeem the honor of their Commonwealth."

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, April 18—The Soviet authorities have decided to organize an expedition for a systematic search for the treasures of Alexander the Great and Tamerlane.

The expedition will explore tumuli in Turkestan which are alleged to contain not only the treasures which Alexander hid during his great campaign but also fabulous wealth in gold and precious stones which Tamerlane extracted from the monarchs he conquered.

No mention is made in authorities on the campaigns of Alexander the Great of his hiding the spoils taken in the cities and provinces which he subdued. In the campaign which took him and his hosts triumphantly through Turkestan in 328-330 B. C. it is known that he accumulated astounding booty, chiefly taken from the Persian kings.

The fabulous wealth of the Persian dynasty, for instance, concentrated at Susa in the exigencies of the flight before Alexander, fell into the hands of the Macedonian virtually intact.

No estimate of the extent of the spoils obtained at Susa appeared to be available. Additional treasures were taken by Alexander when he reached Persepolis and yet more at Ecbatana.

Upon his return through Bokhara he was laden with the riches harvested in the conquest of the provinces north of Hindu Kush. In connection with the belief that Alexander cached some of his treasures in Turkestan tumuli some authorities indicate that his regular custom was to send back to Macedonia the booty obtained rather than hide it for recovery later. The shifting fortunes of war made the dispatch back home the wiser policy.

The treasures taken by Timur, the great Oriental conqueror, better known as Tamerlane, were enormous in value. He came before the world as a roving leader of victorious armies in 1368, setting forth from Kesh, near Saimarkand.

He spent thirty years in various wars and expeditions. His conquests led him among the Moguls of the Caspian and to the banks of the Volga and to the Ural. He fought his way through almost every Persian province, including Bagdad, Kerbela and Kurdistan, and with each victory his armies stripped the city and its inhabitants of everything portable and valuable.

In 1396 he directed a campaign into India and historians agree that his booty was immense. Long lines of elephants laden with gems and with gold were brought back by Tamerlane upon his return to his native city. With Tamerlane, however, as with Alexander, no record is made of instances where treasure was diverted for hiding.

ELEVENTH MAN SLAIN IN REVIVED GANG WAR

TWO ASSASSINS ESCAPE

Max Goldberg, who was shot and killed by two men in his restaurant at 86 Orchard Street early yesterday, was identified later in the day as a member of the notorious "Little Augie" gang on the lower east side. According to the detectives, his murder indicates that the old feud between the "Little Augies" and the "Kid Dropper" gang has broken out again. He was the eleventh man to be killed in that guerilla warfare, which started over a woman, within the past three years.

Goldberg was a partner of "Big Louis" Gitzler and Samuel Goldstein in the Orchard Street restaurant. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning a woman called Goldberg on the telephone. The police think that this call was a lure to get Goldberg into a position where the gunmen could approach him unawares. He was standing at the telephone in the hallway outside his restaurant with his restaurant door closed behind him when his Chinese cook saw two men creep into the hallway. They got right up behind Goldberg before he noticed them and then each fired a shot into the back of his head. He spun around, threw the telephone receiver at them with his last movement and then fell dead on the floor. The assassins ran out of the hallway and disappeared. No one could tell the police what they looked like.

Had Patrolman Removed.

Goldberg was one of twenty men discharged in the Essex Market Court last Tuesday after being arrested on the charge of gambling in his restaurant. He obtained an order in the same court last Friday directing that a patrolman who had been stationed in his hallway be removed.

The police made public Goldberg's criminal record, showing that he had been arrested eleven times in the past fourteen years—three times for homicide—but that he had "beaten" virtually every case. His record follows:

Under the name of Max Goldberg:
Oct. 7, 1912, grand larceny; one year Blackwell's Island.
Jan. 8, 1914, felonious assault; discharged.
April 20, 1915, felonious assault; suspended sentence.
Under the name of Max Gold:
April 20, 1925, homicide; discharged.
July 7, 1925, Sullivan law violation; discharged.
Oct. 14, 1925, homicide; no disposition.
October 21, 1925, homicide; no disposition.

History of the Feud.

The war between the "Kid Dropper" and "Little Augie" gangs began three years ago when Louis Schwartzman, "the midget," stole "Kid Dropper's sweetheart, Edna Churgin. "The midget" was shot dead in May, 1923, as he sat with Edna Churgin on the steps of his home at 22 Rutgers Street, with his mother and sister sitting at an open window looking at him.

"Kid Dropper," whose real name was Jack Kaplan, was arrested for the midget's murder, but was discharged in Essex Market Court. As he left the court with detectives and got into a taxicab he was shot and killed by Louis Cohen of the "Little

SPITZBERGEN READY NOW FOR THE NORGE

AMUNDSEN DUE THIS WEEK

Warship With Landing Crew Aboard Will Leave Hammerfest for King's Bay Thursday.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGS BAY, Spitsbergen, April 18.—After a week's work the thirty-five-meter mooring mast for the dirigible Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile polar expedition has been finally completed. It seemed at first impossible to raise it with the means at the disposal of the workers here, but they started yesterday when the midnight sun for the first time this year mounted the heavens, and at 12 o'clock noon today the mast was erect, with the Norwegian flag unfurled on top.

Everything is now ready to receive the Norge, so Captain Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth will find all complete when they arrive this week.

The gunboat Heimdal, whose crew will assist the Norge in landing, leaves Hammerfest, Norway, on April 22, and is due in Kings Bay on April 25 or 26.

Ready Ahead of Schedule.

The erection of the mooring mast at Kings Bay marks the successful overcoming of one of the greatest problems that the leaders of the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition faced. This, with the building of a huge wood hangar, establishes a base where the Norge can be repaired in the event of any minor defect developing, and a place where she can ride out any storm sweeping down from the Pole, giving the daring explorers far more than a fighting chance for success in their flight across the Pole.

Amundsen and Ellsworth are due to arrive at Kings Bay within the next day or two and they will be followed in about a week or ten days by the Norge, which is now having its motors overhauled outside Leningrad after the flight from Rome. Neither of the two leaders expected that the mooring mast would be in position by the time they arrived, and one of the reasons for their making the trip to Kings Bay by boat instead of on the Norge itself was so that they could superintend the final arrangements there to receive the dirigible.

More than 100 men worked almost night and day, as the hours go—but, on account of the long Arctic Winter, actually through long hours of almost complete darkness—in hastening the erection of the mast and the construction of the hangar in which the Norge will be housed.

Some of the men are sailors detailed to the job by the Norwegian Government and the others are employes of a Spitzbergen coal company.

The mooring mast was constructed in Italy under the supervision of Italian air officials. It was shipped to Kings Bay in sections and is set up in three forty-ton blocks of solid concrete. The mast is for use in case heavy gales prevent the housing of the Norge in the hangar. The hangar itself, the largest building within the Arctic Circle and the largest wooden airship hangar in the world, is about 250 feet long, 100 feet in width and the same in height. Work on it commenced last November, the men plying their task under the glare of incandescent electric lights.

Virtually all the material had to be shipped from Norway. The walls are wood and the roof is canvas. Under its shelter the Norge should be able to withstand any unfavorable weather. In one corner is stacked 5,000 bottles of hydrogen—more than 300 tons—to be used in refilling the Norge's gas bag.

With the arrival of the Norge the explorers will be ready for the final stage

LAVA RIVER ENGULFS HAWAIIAN VILLAGE, BOILS INTO THE SEA

THREE CRATERS SPOUTING

Fountains Leap 400 Feet and Three Rivers of Lava Zigzag Down the Mountain.

PLANES FLY OVER SCENE

KONA, Territory of Hawaii, April 18 (AP).—The village of Hoopulos, on the southwest shore of the Island of Hawaii, was completely wiped out this morning by an avalanche of lava that burst forth from the volcano Mauna Loa. Ten to fifteen homes were engulfed, but there is no report as to what became of the inhabitants.

Plunging into the water, just south of Hoopuloa, the lava turned in the direction of Kona, filling the bay and completely burying the landing and from ten to fifteen homes located in the vicinity.

All houses and the wharf at Hoopulos were engulfed under fifty feet of lava, the postoffice being the last building to go. It burst into flames at 8:30 P. M.

A the stream of lava, which flowed from an 8,000-foot level in about four days, approached the ocean Saturday afternoon it split into two branches. When 800 feet from the water one stream turned toward Hoopulos and the other started in the direction of Miloli.

Old Hawaiian Kahunas started incantations in the ancient form of appeal to Pele (a Hawaiian goddess associated with the volcano Kilauea) not to destroy their homes any more.

Army airplanes arrived a few hours after the village was wiped out, but were unable to locate the flow definitely because of the dense steam and smoke.

The aviators reported that the heat was intense at an elevation of 3,000 feet. Huge clouds of steam hung over the ocean, rising to a height of several hundred feet.

As the lava struck the water, tremendous rockets of steam shot into the air, showering the entire region about the bay.

So far as can be learned there were no casualties. The head of the superheated flow had been hovering above the village for more than thirty-six hours. Last night a heavy flow from the mountain stirred the great pile of cooling slag into action, and the giant moved forward over the village and into the ocean.

A Gorgeous Sight at Sea.

ABOARD S. S. HALEAKALA, ISLAND OF HAWAII, April 18 (AP).—Several hundred passengers gazed awe-stricken today while the great volcano Mauna Loa, rising into the clouds from the Island of Hawaii, belched forth a fiery river of lava. As the vessel cruised along the south coast the flow coming down the slopes of the mountain presented a most gorgeous picture.

Viewed from the ocean, the upper half of the flow appeared as a molten river, which broke at various points into lakes of fire, sending up an incandescent glow of tremendous beauty.

At 8 A. M. today a new outbreak appeared on the Kau side of the mountain, two distinct actions being visible.

Three Rivers of Lava.

HILO, Hawaii, April 18 (AP).—The flow of lava moving in the direction of Kahuku was within three miles of the Government road today, crackling and sizzling on an 1,800-foot front. As the molten stream rolls on it gathers momentum and is expected to reach the road by Monday.

The volcano Mauna Loa, ablaze with fire, presents the most spectacular show it has offered in the memory of man.

Fountains estimated to be 400 feet high leaped from three different craters last night, while three rivers of

SOFIA, April 18 (AP).—Last Friday a year ago the Sveti Kral, or St. Nedelia Cathedral, was wrecked by the explosion of a bomb, which killed more than 150 persons and injured about 300 others who were attending the funeral of General Georghieff. Arrangements have now been completed for rebuilding the church and the work is to begin soon.

The church authorities offered a prize for the best design for the new edifice. These plans will be turned in on May 1, when the jury, made up of members of the Church Building Society, will meet, to decide upon the winner of the prize, which is 10,000 leva (normally about $2,000).

ARMY MEN STIR ROW AT CADMAN MEETING

He Attacks Military Training in Schools and Reserve Officers Protest.

CALL IS SENT FOR POLICE

A telephone call was sent for the police to quell a disturbance at the Bedford Branch of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon when the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, attacked the Reserve Officers Training Corps as "encouraging belief in violence as the final resort in international differences." The trouble occurred when a group of Army Reserve Officers, who had obtained advance copies of Dr. Cadman's speech, objected to certain passages of the address.

They attempted to put several questions to the speaker and while trumpeters on the platform drowned out the officers' protests Halsey Hammond, Executive Secretary of the Bedford Branch of the Y. M. C. A., telephoned to the police of the Gates Avenue Station, who promptly sent a patrolman to handle the situation.

Dr. Cadman spoke on "Disarmament and World Peace," and while at the outset of his remarks he declared he was not "an out and out pacifist," his speech was a direct attack on the Army Reserve system and the introduction of military training in high schools, universities and other institutions of learning.

Officers Ejected for Protest.

The officers who objected to Dr. Cadman's remarks were Colonel Robert Star Allyn, President of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association and Commanding Officer of the 807th (Reserve) Coast Artillery Regiment; Lieut. Col. Howard L. Campion, Chairman of the Citizens' Military Training Camp Association of Kings County; Lieutenant James Holton, Secretary of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association, and Herman R. La Tourette, Supervising Patriotic Instructor of New York of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

All were ejected from the Y. M. C. A. by ushers, aided by Patrolman Patrick Carey of the Gates Avenue police station, but as those in charge of the meeting declined to press any charge against them no further action was taken after they reached the sidewalk.

There were several hundred persons in the auditorium when Dr. Cadman was introduced by Mr. Hammond. The Reserve officers occupied seats in the rear and in accordance with the customary procedure a number of questions were written out and handed up to the platform to be answered by Dr. Cadman at the conclusion of his address.

Dr. Cadman briefly reviewed the cause, effect and history of some of the great wars and then launched into his attack on the introduction of military training in schools and colleges.

He said the present system of military training was established by the National Defense act of 1916 and amended in 1920. Then he continued:

"Under its provision army regulations have been issued by the War Department; manuals have been prepared by army officers and reserve officer training corps have been established in many civilian educational institutions. Some 1,750 officers and enlisted men now serve as instructors and commanders in these institutions.

Sees War Department Control.

"The War Department with the cooperation of the institution concerned is given direct and complete control of

Plan to Introduce Statements by Industrial Leaders of Prohibition's Benefits.

WILL QUOTE FORD AND GARY

TELLS WETS TO 'FACE FACTS'

Anti-Prohibitionists Propose to Use Their Remaining Time In Arguments.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—With a fraction over fourteen of their allotted twenty-four hours remaining, the dry forces will resume tomorrow presentation of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee against any modification of the Volstead law and in favor of strict enforcement.

Among the witnesses taking the stand will be Bishop Cannon of the Anti-Saloon League of America, Mrs. Ella Boole of New York and Ida May Smith, both of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and probably Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General, since 1921 in charge of the division handling cases under the prohibition laws.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, who has command of the dry witnesses, is saving some of his big guns for the middle of the week, with the object of ending presentation of the dry side of the controversy in a "Garrison finish." It is also understood to be Mr. Wheeler's intention to submit testimony and statements in an effort to convince the committee that the effect of prohibition upon business and industry has been most salutary, and that American captains of industry are opposed to modification.

Among these will be statements attributed to Henry Ford, Judge Elbert H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and others that the effect of prohibition upon workmen in industry generally has been good.

In a radio speech, broadcast from Washington last night, Mr. Wheeler indicated that he had such statements, declaring that many leading industrial leaders were indorsing prohibition. He ridiculed the "Face the Facts" slogan of the wets, and charged that, while it was "a clever slogan," it was "but a bluff."

Quotes Industrial Leaders.

Mr. Wheeler gave THE NEW YORK TIMES tonight a statement in which he embodied some of the statements which, he said, had come from industrial leaders, and to which he referred in his radio speech last night.

"This is no time to raise the white flag to the liquor interests," said Mr. Wheeler. "Prohibition is at its Gettysburg. The fight can be and is being won."

The truth was, Mr. Wheeler asserted, that nobody who wanted booze would ever be satisfied with anything that could not intoxicate, and if modification were granted so as to permit light wines and beer the law would not be observed by the liquor interests. Considering the difficulties of enforcement, he declared, it was a great tribute to the American people that "prohibition has succeeded so well."

The wets still have a fraction over two hours of their allotted time remaining for presentation of testimony. They do not contemplate the introduction of further testimony, but Colonel Julien Codman, marshal of the wet forces, desires to utilize the remaining time of the wets in an argument to the committee.

"The drys do not care whether the wets do or do not make an argument before the committee," Mr. Wheeler said tonight. "So far as we are concerned, we do not think it makes any difference whether we or they have the last word."

Indications tonight are that the Senate subcommittee will allow both sides to submit arguments, Mr. Wheeler closing for the drys and Colonel Codman for the wets.

General Andrews also will take the stand this week, appearing for the third time. He will then have an opportunity to clarify his statement of last week that making of beer, under Government control, for home use, might be "helpful" to enforcement. Later, Mr. Andrews issued an explanatory statement saying that he was not "advocating" such a course.

In a statement tonight on "padlocking" under the prohibition law, the Department of Justice disclosed that from July 1, 1925, to Jan. 1, last, 2,666 padlock injunctions had been issued, and that proportionately this was a larger number than in the preceding fiscal year, from July 1, 1924, to July 1, 1925, when 4,313 places were enjoined. The department stated that during two months forty-six places were closed in the Southern Judicial District of New York for one year, eighty-one places for six months and one place for three months.

Text of Wheeler's Statement.

Mr. Wheeler's statement in full regarding the attitude of Henry Ford, Judge Gary, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and other industrial leaders reads:

"Face the facts as to this matter. Face Henry Ford. I am giving you testimony not heretofore released. Mr. Ford authorizes the statement that he knows very well what has been the

ATHENS, April 18 (AP).—General Pangalos was installed as President of Greece at the Cathedral today. He took the oath of office before the Holy Synod and the Ministerial Council. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired at dawn in honor of the occasion, and a similar salute was given at the conclusion of the ceremony. This afternoon General Pangalos received the congratulations of officials at Government House.

On assuming the Presidency, General Pangalos ordered the liberation of all political prisoners and journalists accused of attempted sedition, including M. Papanastasiou, former Premier, and General Condylis, former Minister of War, and others who were sent into exile.

From tomorrow, General Pangalos announced, he will relinquish all his dictatorial rights, which he assumed early in January of this year.

In the first part of the Greek Presidential elections, two weeks ago, General Pangalos polled an overwhelming vote, and in the continuation of the elections last Sunday, the opposition candidates having withdrawn, he was chosen Chief Executive of the Greek Republic.

The Savannah liner City of Atlanta rescued seven men from the sinking trawler, Bonita, off Barnegat Light, early yesterday morning. The coastwise steamer, bound from Savannah, had approximately 100 passengers and general cargo.

A wireless message sent by Captain L. G. Dalzell of the City of Atlanta to the offices of the Savannah Line in New York City told of the rescue of the trawler's crew. It follows:

"1 A. M., April 18. Latitude 39.57 north, longitude 72.52 west. Rescued seven men, crew of sinking trawler Bonita of New York. Trawler is abandoned with all lights burning. Captain reports she will sink within half an hour."

BOSTON, April 19 (AP).—Seven men of the crew of the trawler Bonita, rescued off Barnegat Light by the steamship City of Atlanta of the Savannah Line, were brought here this morning.

The trawler had sprung a leak to the stern and was listing badly in a heavy sea when the rescue ship sighted its flares early yesterday. Its engine was still running, however, and it managed to manoeuvre alongside of the steamer, from which rope ladders were let down and the men taken off.

The Bonita had cleared from New oYrk Tuesday and was returning with a load of fish. It had no wireless equipment.

effect of prohibition upon the men employed by the Ford industries. Prohibition, he said, had worked great good both to the Ford industries and their employes.

"'Prohibition,' he continued, 'has reduced the liquor problem, so far as it relates to our men, to a point where we can easily handle it. Before prohibition there were in each group of 5,000 men about 100 who gave us trouble because of the liquor they drank. Now in each group of 5,000 there are not more than ten whose tendency to drink makes us trouble. There are not ten—ten is too high a figure.

"'Before prohibition,' said Mr. Ford, 'we had to investigate absences from work to find out whether the men had been or were drunk or whether the men had good reasons for laying off. In a large proportion of such cases we found that drink was the cause. Now we do not have to investigate, because we have learned from observation that liquor is no longer the trouble. When a man lays off a day or two we think nothing about it. As a result of prohibition our men are working more, working better, wasting less and saving more. Now when we raise a man's pay we know the increase will go to his wife or to his savings account instead of to a saloonkeeper.'

"In reply to another question, Mr. Ford said:

"'I am not in favor of the repeal or the modification of the Volstead act. Let it stand as it is. I am in favor only of enforcing—and it can be enforced.'

"Before prohibition about 4,000 men failed to report for work in the two Ford plants each Monday morning. They would lay off a day or two and then drift back. Fewer than half that many are absent now, and investigation has disclosed that they remain away not because they have been drinking, but for a variety of other reasons.

Quotes Judge Gary.

"Again face the facts, liquor gentlemen. Face Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation. You will perhaps concede that he, too, knows something about industry in this country. Ask him if he subscribes to the statement that nobody knows what has been the effect of prohibition upon industry. Read the statement that Judge Gary authorized Allen Benson to make in his behalf:

"'I have no hesitancy in saying with emphasis that the Volstead act and State laws for prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors have been very beneficial to the industry of this country and to the workmen connected with it and their families.

"'I would not favor the modification of the law to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

"'I made a statement about prohibition three years ago that states accurately the conclusions that I hold today, based on recent information and present conditions. I said then, and I repeat now, that while there have been violations of these laws, particularly in the larger cities, yet as a total result of the prohibitory laws there has been a large decrease in the use of liquor, at least in the vicinity of our various plants throughout the country. There has been a noteworthy decrease in the number of jails, asylums and hospitals. There has been an increase, and a large increase, in the bank balances of savings deposits. The health of the people has improved.

"'That families of workmen are better clothed and better treated. The attendance of the workmen and their families at church, of the children in schools and of all of them at clean, legitimate, healthful resorts and places of amusements has materially increased.'

"'The sale and use of automobiles has been largely increased by the fact that a large majority of the workmen now prefer to take excursions with their families by automobile instead of spending their time at the saloons or other places and wasting their money in practices that are physically injurious instead of beneficial.

"'At a meeting of steel men recently it was stated by one of those present that the families of the workmen in the steel mills would vote with practical unanimity in favor of total prohibition, although some of the husbands might perhaps be in favor of the sale of light beer and wines.

"'All in all, however, there is no doubt that a large preponderance of the workmen of this country are in favor of the prohibition of the sale and use of all intoxicants, from the standpoint of good morals, good economics and peaceful social relations.'

Gives View of John D. Rockefeller Jr.

"'There has been a very general impression,' said a statement issued by authority of John D. Rockefeller Jr., 'that the effect of prohibition has been a great increase in the savings of the men and a general improvement of their morale.'

"W. B. Storey, President of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway system, said that his company had long had a rule against drinking. 'We feel,' he continued, 'that there has been less drinking among our rank and file since the prohibition law went into effect, although there is still a great deal of bootlegging.'

"'As far as our industry is concerned,' said George M. Verity, President of the American Rolling Mill Company of Middletown, Ohio, 'prohibition has been 100 per cent. effective. It has ceased to be a problem on the inside of industry.'

"H. B. Smith, Secretary and Treasurer of the McInnes Steel Company, Ltd., of Corry, Pa., put it this way: 'Prohibition has given us better employes, and they are more interested in their home life and their children and take more of an interest in civic affairs.'

"W. T. Beatty, President of the Austin Manufacturing Company, Chicago: 'The effect of prohibition upon our employes has been most wonderful.'

"R. H. Scott, President of the Reo Motor Car Company, Lansing, Mich.: 'Since we have had prohibition there is no difference between the day after pay-day and the day before. We have no trouble whatever because of employes who fail to report because of drunkenness. The American working men do not want booze, and it is an injustice to them to say that they are opposed to prohibition. It may be true that foreign-born working men insist upon having intoxicating liquor, but our company has almost 100 per cent. American workingmen.'

"Harry H. Willock, Waverly Oil Works Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.: 'There has been a tremendous betterment among our employes, due to prohibition.'

Says Employes Are Better Clothed.

"David D. Lupton, Vice President of David Lupton's Sons Company, Philadelphia:

"'Our employes are better fed and clothed now than they were before the prohibition law was enacted. The majority are enjoying life on a scale that was before impossible. Seldom do we find men with even the appearance of being in liquor, whereas formerly not a day passed without at least one drunk applying for a job. There are fewer accidents and greater efficiency.'

"'The effects of prohibition upon the employes of this company have been uniformly beneficial. Efficiency is higher, earnings are larger, the employes are more punctual in appearing for work, average work is better with a slight decrease in seconds and defective products, the labor turnover is less and there is a happier and more contented attitude toward the job and society. In general, the workers have benefited more largely from prohibition than any other part of our population.'

"'I am satisfied,' says William A. Vawter, President of the Baker-Vawter Company of Benton Harbor, Mich., 'that prohibition has been a good thing for our employes, and the merchants here tell me that it has not only increased their business with the workingmen but has enabled them to do a larger volume of business in shorter hours. The efficiency of our workingmen is now at the highest point that is has ever been.'

"'The good effects of this law,' says J. S. Bachmann, superintendent of the Anchor Duck Mills of Rome, Ga., 'have been such that we would not for anything return to the old method of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors.'

Declares "Blue Mondays" Gone.

"'There can be no question,' says Mr. Arthur R. Baxter of the Keyless Lock Company of Indianapolis, 'as to the effect that prohibition has had upon the health of workingmen, their regularity in reporting for duty and their efficiency. We no longer have "blue Mondays" or men off for long periods because of drink. The effect has not only been good, but remarkably good.'

"Mr. James R. Risk, Treasurer of the Dairy Cream Separator Company of Lebanon, Ind., says:

"'Prohibition has greatly benefited industry everywhere; it is the greatest economic reform that our nation has ever expefienced.'

"'The effect of prohibition upon our employes,' says Mr. W. E. Mack of the Carborundum Company, Niagara Falls, 'has been beneficial.'

"'From the standpoint of the manufacturer,' says Mr. John W. Sibley of the Birmingham (Ala.) Clay Products Company, 'prohibition has been of incalculable benefit because of the increased efficiency of labor, the better quality of the product, and the absence of the strife that prevailed in the old days of the saloon.'

"'Prohibition has had a good effect upon our employes,' says Mr. W. A. Rogers, President of the Bates & Rogers Construction Company of Chicago.

Says Liquor Interests Were Lawless.

"They tell us, for instance, that the present reign of lawlessness should be ended by legalizing the sale of light wines and beer. Did the liquor interests ever obey the law? Did they obey it before prohibition? They violated every provision of the law that stood between them and maximum profits.

"If it was worth while to remain open after hours, they remained open. If it was worth while to sell liquor to drunkards and minors, they sold to drunkards and minors. They observed the law only when it was not worth while to break it. They know it, everybody knows it. What a fat chance there is that these interests which were always lawless would be lawabiding if they were permitted to sell light wines and beer. When did they change their spots?

"'The truth is that nobody who wants booze will ever be satisfied with anything that cannot intoxicate.' The 'kick' is the thing, and the whole thing. That is why near beer and grapejuice are not popular. It is as absurd, in the opinions of boozers, to have drinks without a sting as it would be to take a small boy to a circus that had no elephant.

"But we may be sure that if saloons were authorized to open with light wines and beer they would not compel their customers to be content with such trifles. They would break the law and sell everything. As long as they were permitted to exist they broke the law. Liquor dealers are still breaking it. There is no reason to believe they would obey the law they seek and confine themselves to light wines and beer.

"Considering what Federal enforcement has been, and notwithstanding the difficulties in enforcement, it is a great tribute to the American people that prohibition has succeeded so well. Millions have ceased to drink because the saloons are gone and they are not enough interested to take the trouble to find out where they can get liquor.

"Others have quit because they do not believe in violating the law; others, because they have some regard for their health and place some value upon their lives.

"This is no time to raise the white flag to the liquor interests. Prohibition is at its Gettysburg. The fight can be and is being won."

CITES SEVEN REASONS 'WHY DRY LAW FAILED'

Rabbi Lyons Calls It Product of Politics, Born in Deception and Morally Pernicious.

Seven reasons why prohibition has failed were advanced yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Alexander Lyons, rabbi of the Eighth Avenue Temple, Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn. Explaining why in his opinion the Eighteenth Amendment was not a success, he said:

"1. It was born in deception. It was put upon the American people during the exigencies of the World War as a martial measure.

"2. Prohibition as it obtains among us is largely a product of politics perpetrated in numerous instances by men to whom office is more than principle.

"3. The Eighteenth Amendment is largely a failure because it is a poor and pernicious psychology. The prohibitionists need to learn that you may lead a horse away from drink and yet not thereby necessarily keep him dry.

"4. The Eighteenth Amendment as it has been carried out is poor moral therapeutics. Failure to take a wider and more inclusive view in treating human perversities is largely responsible for the failure of the amendment.

"5. The insincerity and lack of consistency and persistency of morality in American life is contributory to the failure of prohibition.

"6. The religious life of America is not a soil for the production of these results morally that many of us would like to see with our vision of human duty and possibility.

"7. Finally what has greatly helped to discredit and cause the failure of the Eighteenth Amendment is its notorious consequence in class distinction. It has proved to be a law favorable to the rich or to those who with unscrupulous desire are willing to become rich while the vast multitudes are compelled to suffer a sense of unjust distinction. Prohibition has demoralized and to a certain extent partially prostituted large numbers of young men and young women."

FEAR REFERENDUM IN STATE CAMPAIGN

No Matter What the Outcome, Republicans Expect Party Dissensions Will Follow.

PASSAGE OF BILL IS LIKELY

But Week-End Pressure by Home Folks May Turn Back Some Dry Deserters.

By W. A. WARN.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 18.—The Karle-Phelps prohibition referendum bill, destined to become this week the outstanding subject for legislative action, is to a great many influential Republicans on Capitol Hill the proverbial small cloud, growing bigger and bigger, which they fear some day will discharge a devastating storm.

In the minds of the Republican dry leaders those who first suggested the introduction of the referendum bill in its present form have been sowing the wind and will reap the whirlwind at the Republican State Convention in the Autumn. As they view the situation, if the referendum is voted for submission at the general election the wet and dry issue will be the dominant one in the State campaign. With this a foregone conclusion, the same question will become an outstanding issue in the State convention, where there will be a dry majority.

The drys admit that a referendum might have the psychological effect of making it possible for some wet and dry Republicans, since they had registered their vote on the issue itself, to approach the task of voting for candidates with less rancor. A referendum, they likewise say, in the absence of a demand from extreme drys in the convention, might eliminate the need of reference to prohibition enforcement in the platform through the expedient of a party pledge to abide by the answer given at the polls on the referendum.

Fear for Convention Harmony.

Nevertheless they insist that the presence of the referendum as an issue in the campaign would render the selection of a nominee for Governor and the election of Senators and Assemblymen more contentious. And they profess to believe that the only way to take prohibition out of State politics is not to say anything about it.

In the convention wet delegates from New York and other big cities inevitably will be arrayed against dry delegates from country districts. Certainty of a referendum, as the drys view the situation, would tend to accentuate rather than bridge over their differences.

The referendum proposal in its present form was presented partly to take the "dry curse" off the party and bring back to the fold wet Republicans in the cities who for many years have deserted their party candidates at the polls.

What the Republicans most need now is some master mind to work out a formula through which the differences between the urban wets and the rural dry can be reconciled. The consensus among Republicans here is that Charles Evans Hughes could have done it, but he is beyond the reach of those who would have him assume the leadership and there is no man in sight who would be equal to this exacting task, an apparent requisite to party victory.

Outlook for Referendum Bill.

The outlook relating to the referendum bill is the engrossing topic of discussion at the Capitol. Today everything looks promising for it. A somewhat casual survey indicates that its supporters will be in a position to develop sufficient strength to take the measure from the Rules Committee by a small majority tomorrow or Tuesday and to pass it by a larger vote, once it is on the floor.

But a prediction that it will pass caanot be made without reservation. The drys are agressively active, and some Republican Assemblymen who on Friday were committed to the bill may have heard from the "folks at home" over the week-end and have shifted their allegiance. That is precisely what happened over the last week-end when the fate of the Wales-Jenks prohibition enforcement bills hung in the balance in the Assembly. There were at least three votes cast in favor of those measures which came as a surprise to Speaker McGinnies. But the bills, even with the Speaker voting, were passed by a bare majority and with not a vote to spare.

Speaker McGinnies has not decided what course to pursue in the Committee on Rules with regard to the referendum bill. Undoubtedly entirely out of sympathy with what he regards as a measure that at the best will prove futile, he is waiting to let the dry forces exert their influence to the utmost in the dry up-State districts today. There is reason to believe, however, and the Speaker is fully alive to the fact, that the pressure against a mere referendum, which can do the drys little harm, is likely to be less strong and persistent than was that in favor of the enforcement bills, even though these were foredoomed to defeat in the Senate and would have been vetoed by Governor Smith.

Bill Discussed in Washington.

It was learned today that the Karle-Phelps bill has been a topic of grave discussion on the part of the Republican delegation to the House of Representatives from this State. This discussion occurred in Washington one evening last week. According to the report which has reached the State Capitol, the delegation was divided about fifty-fifty on the bill. However, chiefly up-State sentiment was reflected. Of the twenty Republican Representatives from this State only two at present speak for constituencies in New York City.

On the eve of the forthcoming visit of United States Senator Wadsworth, who is expected here tomorrow afternoon, there is a great deal of speculation regarding the extent to which he will exert himself in the present situation and as to what extent he will be in a position to make his influence felt.

The Karle-Phelps bill must depend for success in the Assembly on up-State votes. In influencing these there is little doubt that Speaker McGinnies can exert a stronger influence than Senator Wadsworth, despite the eminent position the latter occupies in politics and public life.

Senator Wadsworth of late has done so little to assert himself when the party has been in a critical position here that many Republicans on Capitol Hill are inclined to look upon his leadership as titular rather than real. No one, however, looks for an open conflict, even though the Speaker is against and Senator Wadsworth in favor of the referendum bill. Every one believes that differences which may arise will be susceptible of easy adjustment with an important election so near. If there is to be a reckoning, this will come after election.

Assembly Must Act.

The fact is that even Republicans who are opposed to a referendum are fully alive to the fact that to drop the proposal after it has gone so far and given rise to so much discussion would be fatal. Far-sighted drys whose prejudices have not carried them to a point where party considerations do not count realise that even though the referendum might prove hurtful, no matter whether passed or defeated, it will be necessary to take action in the Assembly this week.

Aside from wet and dry differences, the Republicans feel that with the legislative session drawing to an end they are in a better position than they have been in any recent election to make a winning fight—in the event, of course, that Governor Smith holds to his decision not to become a candidate for his present office again. The consensus of opinion among a majority of the Republicans here is that with the Governor out of the race they could win with a standard bearer not too pronouncedly dry but willing to pledge himself to sign an enforcement bill if the Legislature should pass one.

The Republican leaders in the Legislature feel that barring any unforeseen development during the closing week of the session, which will begin tomorrow, they will be in a strong position, because of their ability to point to the passage of a great deal of constructive legislation with which even Governor Smith has been unable to find sufficient fault to brand it with his disapproval.

DRYS WARN WADSWORTH.

Two Mass Meetings in Rochester Condemn Referendum.

ROCHESTER, April 18 (AP).—Resolutions urging United States Senator Wadsworth and Representatives of Rochester districts in the State Legislature to bring all possible influence to bear against the passage of the Prohibition Referendum bill in the Legislature were passed tonight at two mass meetings conducted by prominent Rochester dry leaders.

At a church meeting conducted by Clinton N. Howard, Chairman of the United Committee for Law Enforcement, the referendum was branded "illegal" and the audience voted to hold Senator Wadsworth and the representatives "individually responsible" if the measure was passed. The second meeting, adopting a similar resolution, was led by the Rev. Albert W. Beaven, a dry leader.

Raid Atlantic City Speakeasies.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 18.—A campaign to rid this city of its many alleged "blind-tigers" has been started by the police, under Chief Patrick Doran, who raided a dozen establishments over the weekend, and made fifteen arrests. Practically all of the places involved were on the north side. The defendants were held under $2,000 bail each and will get a hearing in the Recorder's Court on Tuesday.

Andrews to Add 175 Men to Dry Force Here If Congress Will Give Him $2,900,000 More

Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, conferred here yesterday with United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner, and announced he would add 175 agents to the local force if Congress granted him the $2,900,000 appropriation he wanted for the stricter enforcement of prohibition.

General Andrews said he would like to add 100 inspectors to the New York force to look after the drug stores and manufacturers of alcohol and add the remainder to the group of agents who investigate bootleggers and the criminal complaints referred to the office of the United States Attorney that result from the enforcement of prohibition.

While declining to go into details regarding his conference with Mr. Buckner, General Andrews said he discussed problems growing out of the local enforcement. He laughingly admitted that while favoring modification of the regulations controlling the sale of beer, he would be glad if Congress would give him sufficient funds for more agents who would get evidence to put the breweries out of business.

Asked if he had any comment to make regarding his recent testimony before the Senate committee investigating prohibition, General Andrews said he had nothing to say. He declared that his views on the question had been made public and that he had nothing more to add at this time.

The situation in New York, according to General Andrews, is as good as can be expected with the means the Government has for enforcement. He said the great need here is additional agents in the inspection and investigating branches. Until he could get the appropriation and the necessary men the local force would have to get along the best it could, he said.

The General came here early Saturday morning. He said he would leave for Washington on a late train. While here he visited a brother who is an official of a rubber company and who just returned from a year's absence in the Orient.

Mr. Buckner said he had talked with General Andrews, but would not say what had been discussed.

DRY DELEGATION MUST USE WET SHIP

WILL GO ON A CUNARDER

American delegates to the World Convention of Christian Endeavor Societies in London this Summer will have to travel across the Atlantic in a "wet" ship because of inability to obtain bookings on a dry vessel.

This was made known yesterday in the reply of the Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, co-minister of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, at 1 West Twenty-ninth Street, to a question from a person in the congregation following the services. The question was:

"Why will the Christian Endeavor delegates ride to London on a ship which serves liquor?"

Replying from the pulpit, Dr. Poling, who is President of the United Christian Endeavor Society in this country, said:

"The delegates will do so because and only because no ship of the United States Lines was available for our large party.

"We had to sail at a particular time because of the date of our World Convention to be held in London under the auspices of the British Christian Endeavor Union. General Secretary E. P. Gates of the United Christian Endeavor Society at 41 Mount Vernon Street, Boston, communicated first with the United States Lines. The Boston representatives of the company were most courteous and gave us their offers of assistance; but with only six ships available and the July congestion then in full swing, they could not handle our party.

"We have since made clear to the line which will carry us the prohibition principles and practices of our organization. Each individual, furthermore, will receive a personal communication dealing with the matter before going aboard. Let it be understood that we have had from the company the finest consideration and cooperation.

"As far the Christian Endeavor is concerned, this liner will be bone dry. We wanted to sail on a ship of the United States Lines—we tried to—but there were not enough dry vessels to take care of us."

The ship on which the delegates, numbering 700, will sail, it was learned, will be the Carmania of the Cunard Line. The delegates will depart on July 7.

Harold P. Borer, Passenger Traffic Manager for the Cunard Line, said last night that, due to the fact that the delegates had not chartered the ship for their use alone, it would not be possible to bar the sale of liquor to other passengers.

"We are making no special provisions to keep any one from drinking," said Mr. Borer. "It will just have to be a self-control proposition with the Christian Endeavor delegates."

Augies," who is now serving a life term for murder.

Other s killed in the gang warfare were:

Johnny Spanish, Charlie Cutler, Charles "Lefty" Kantor, Charles Rosenhaus, Meyer Albert, Morris Grossman and David Bran.

Goldberg was an intimate friend of Meyer Albert, who was shot in front of 163 Attorney Street last May, when he was contending for the leadership of the "Little Augie" gang. One of Goldberg's arrests for homicide was in connection with the murder of Rosenhaus, who was shot and killed in front of 113 Rivington Street last May.

Grossman was arrested but discharged in connection with the Albert murder. Grossman's body was found dead in a burning automobile in East Eighty-first Street last September. He had been shot five times. Three weeks later Bran was found dead in an automobile at Ninety-first Street and First Avenue in an automobile which apparently had collided with another car while his body was being ken to the East River. He had been an informer who had tipped off Federal agent in liquor and drug raids.

RADIOS PLEA OF INNOCENCE.

Printer Reads Letter From Boy in "Cake Eater" Murder Gang Case.

Gustave W. Fisher, who received a sentence of from twenty years to life in Sing Sing last week in connection with the "Cake Eater" gang murder, declared himself innocent of the crime in a letter read yesterday afternoon from Radio Station WMCA by Donald Flamm, proprietor of a printing shop at 230 West Fifty-fourth Street, where Fisher worked up to the time of his arrest.

Mr. Flamm said he believed Fisher had been led astray by evil associates, but refused to concede that the boy was really implicated in any of the crimes committed by the gang.

"Gustave was drunk at the time of the murder committed by Koebler," said Mr. Flamm, "and didn't know what was going on. He was only a pawn in the hands of his companions, none of whom was an intimate friend of his."

In the letter written by Mr. Flamm, Fisher said that he only pleaded guilty to the murder charge to save others, Green and Daunt, from following Koerber to the chair. The letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Flam:

"Well, I guess it sure is a surprise to see me going away to prison for from twenty years to life, but the Assistant District Attorney faithfully promised my mother that if I keep myself out of trouble he will do all in his power to see that my sentence will be just as short as it is in his power to make it.

"Mr. Flamm, because I pleaded guilty to a lesser degree, I am asking you please to keep faith in me, as I swear to the Lord I am innocent. But, owing to the circumstances being as they were, it was the only way to keep two boys from following the same fate as Koerber.

"I hope you have no bad feelings against me, and I wish you could see the situation, not as the papers explain it, but as it really was.

"There is little more to write, but when the time comes I am sure my mother can depend on your wholehearted cooperation for a pardon, and I sure appreciate all the fruitless attempts on your part to get out of the terrible mess I so foolishly got into. With love to all the boys and girls in the shop, I remain,

"Sincerely yours,
"GUSTAVE W. FISHER."

"I will always hold a job for Gustave," said Mr. Flamm over the radio. "During the eight months he worked for me as a pressman's assistant he was willing and capable. He never shirked and was always willing to work overtime to finish up a job. During the whole eight months he was only absent from work one day, and that was because he had worked all of the previous night."

WELCOMES INQUIRY ON LIQUOR PROBLEM

The Rev. F. S. Idleman Says Discussion Is Needed to Vitalize the Issue.

WANTS CHURCH TO FIGHT ON Religion Must Busy Itself With All That Vitally Affects Life, He Declares.

The Senatorial investigation of prohibition is to be welcomed, and, whatever may be its result, the interest and activity that it is arousing will be of great benefit in the final solution of the liquor problem, according to yesterday's sermon by the Rev. Dr. Finis S. Idleman, the pastor, in the Central Church of the Disciples of Christ, 142 West Eighty-first Street.

"It is well that we have not grown complacent and self-satisfied about the Eighteenth Amendment," he said. "Anything that is good must be watched and cultivated, for only evil grows out of neglect. We cannot plant a crop of grain and then fold our arms and expect it to ripen by itself; we would have only weeds, for they do not require care to flourish. It is the same with any controversial piece of legislation such as prohibition. We cannot make it part of the Constitution and then, without any further activity on our part, expect it to function automatically and successfully. There must be discussion and investigation, and the careful thinking and suggestions that result help to vitalize and make real the problem before us.

"It may be asked by people, the good ones as well as the bad, whether or not the Eighteenth Amendment is a suitable topic for religious discussion. They may inquire as to the propriety of religion's interest in prohibition. The liquor question, however, is an important part of life and human society, and that fact alone would be sufficient reason for the Church's concern in its solution.

"Religion must be a religion of life and not of death, and it must busy itself with anything that vitally affects life.

"Religion should seek to wipe out the causes of war and the causes of poverty and tenements. We should not wait at the bottom of a precipice and bandage those who fall off, but rather should build a wall at the top of the precipice and make it impossible for others to fall off.

CALLS THE PRESS BIASED.

Dr. Reisner Says Papers Print Far More Wet Than Dry Evidence.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of Chelsea M. E. Church, Fort Washington Avenue and 178th Street, in his sermon yesterday condemned New York newspapers for their reports on the Senate investigation into the dry situation. He said the reports were biased.

"Those of us who delight in fighting aginst outsiders who paint our wonderful city as a modern Sodom," he said, "have a hard time defending many newspapers in this city who print two whole pages of 'wet' Washington testimony and two columns of 'dry' evidence, and then make dishonest claims in the headlines as to what is contained in all the news that follows. It looks like they are afraid of the facts.

"The Kansas City Star poll showing a big 'dry' majority, was ignored by most dailies here. What answer can we give the maligners of New York? Is that the way a good sport, much less an honest newspaper, should play the game?"

DR. GRANT DEFENDS DRY ACT.

The Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, who preached yesterday in the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Second Avenue and Tenth Street, vigorously defended prohibition and ridiculed those who oppose it on the plea that drinking is not a natural crime.

"There is no such a thing as a natural crime," Dr. Grant said. "Crime is determined by the State.

"The opponents of prohibition claim that the talk of law enforcement is trade talk on the part of ministers. They are greatly mistaken, for the plea to enforce the Volstead act comes from 18,000,000 organized women. A woman's worst fear is that her men folk become drunkards. When her son goes to college or when her husband telephones saying he must entertain buyers from Texas, a woman's heart trembles lest they take in the habit of drinking and lose control over their reason and actions.

"The enemies of prohibition speak of the difficulty of enforcing prohibition because people will not give up their personal liberties, yet, we all know that during the war, millions submitted to the draft and even volunteered. Then there was a good chance of being killed, now the sacrifice asked is much less and the goal set before our eyes much higher. Why not be hundred per cent. Americans and mount the water-wagon?"

WANTS BRITAIN TO HELP.

Dr. Young Suggests Cooperation With Canada on Prohibition.

The newspaper reports on the Senate committee's hearings on modification are furnishing the people with a "university course on the subject," said the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young in his sermon yesterday in the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Nostrand Avenue an. Dean Street, Brooklyn.

"As a resident of Canada a portion of each Summer for more than twenty years," he said, "I bear witness that prohibition in Ontario, where I resided, and elsewhere in the Dominion, greatly advanced sobriety until the modification of the prohibition law in Ontario.

"What is needed to give prohibition a fair trial is for Canada and this country, and Great Britain also, to lean in this matter for a few years. It would be a pity, after all the effort and expense, to drop a movement that marks a steady progress in temperance sentiment and legislation for over a generation in this country and an ever intensifying fight throughout the Anglo-Saxon world for four generations."

RELIGION IN PLACE OF WINE.

Rev. H. E. Clarke Advises Drinkers to Turn to Spiritual Thrills.

Spiritual thrills embodied in the Christian religion were advanced as a substitute to persons deprived of liquor by the Rev. Howard E. Clarke in his sermon yesterday morning in the Mount Morris Baptist Church, Fifth Avenue and 126th Street.

Mr. Clarke protested against the statement that wine served only as a thirst quencher and cited those persons who counseled George Fox, founder of the Quaker sect, and Cardinal Newman to drink beer and wine to revive their depressed spirits.

"Men drink not for satisfaction," he contended, "but for exhilaration, for thrills, to dissolve aches and to remove inhibitions. It delivers them out of themselves. But there is always the morning after. Christ has the lasting exhilaration and it is not in wine: He does the thing that men say wine will do and men find in religion the lasting escape they sought in wine."

Three armed men held up Louis Cohen and two others in Cohen's butcher shop at 202 West Eighty-fifth Street yesterday morning, locked them in a refrigerator, but got only $20 for their pains. Cohen's companions were his nephew, Morris Ruditsky, and Benjamin Kale. Ruditsky let himself and the others out of the refrigerator by smashing the glass door panes with a meat cleaver.

Two armed men held up Alfred Erber, a clerk in the Long hat store at 103 Canal Street, and robbed the cash register of $400 yesterday morning. They threatened to "blow out his brains" if he called for help.

Just after Philip Flax opened his delicatessen store at 142 East 112th Street, about 7 o'clock yesterday morning, a man entered and ordered a sandwich. Flax leaned over to make the sandwich, and was hit on the head and knocked down. He came to in time to see the stranger rifling the cash register. The man ran out, Flax chasing him and yelling.

Patrolman Arthur Weiss, who was being shaved in a barber shop at 110th Street and Park Avenue, heard the noise, and ran out with lather still on his face. He caught the fugitive, who identified himself as Harry Jones, 25 years old, of 2282 Merchant Street, Astoria, L. I. He was held without bail by Magistrate Weil in the Harlem Court.

Captured after what they said was their first hold-up, in which they used imitation automatic pistols, two youths were locked up in the Oak Street station yesterday morning. They were Benjamin Desanto, 18 years, old, of 146 Ludlow Street, and Angelo Salde, 17, of 329 Water Street. They were identified by Philip Kravitz, a second-hand clothing dealer with a shop in the basement at 147 Park Row, as the robbers who took $4 from his pockets and beat him on the head with their toy guns.

Claire M. Halley, 22 years old, a writer, said she was disappointed because she wasn't held up early yesterday morning when three men robbed her escort in the hallway of the apartment house in which she lives at 929 West End Avenue.

The robbers forced the negro hallboy to let them in the outer door and took $90 from William Gilman, 238 Beach 119th Street, Rockaway Park, as the couple were waiting for the elevator. The thugs did not molest Miss Halley.

Simon Solow, a clothier at 49 Essex Street, was bound and gagged in his store last night by three young men who took $30 from him.

FIND COMPLETE RUM PLANT.

Troopers Discover Stills, "Foreign" Labels and Guns in House.

Special to The New York Times.

SMITHTOWN, L. I., April 18.—A completely equipped outfit for manufacturing "imported" liquor, including labels of well-known Scottish and English brands, was seized by State troopers at Hauppauge, near here, this morning. After watching the house for several hours Corporal Charles Kemmler and Trooper E. M. McLaughlin entered and found three stills of 150 gallons capacity each, loaded shotguns and 100 rounds of ammunition.

The house was vacant. The troopers learned that the owner was in Italy, but that it had been leased to Julius Dunn. He was arrested this afternoon and held in $500 bail by Justice of the Peace Roy B. Davis for examination by the United States Commissioner at Brooklyn on Wednesday.

The troopers said that in the yard they found 100 boxes of dynamite, sufficient to have wrecked the surrounding countryside had a still exploded. The explosive, they learned, was owned by Joseph Dunn, a brother of the prisoner, who does commercial blasting.

QUEBEC CRISIS CALLS HAYS.

Will Try to Have the Censorship of Films Modified.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, April 18.—N. L. Nathanson, Managing Director of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, which has several houses in Montreal, made a statement tonight regarding the report that motion picture producers propose withdrawal of films from Quebec Province next August owing to the censorship.

"My understanding," he said, "is that there is no thought of boycotts or threats of withdrawals, but that the producers want to make an honest effort to improve conditions that have become intolerable in recent years.

"I understand producers only ask that the standards be in keeping with those of other provinces and that the theatre-going public be given an opportunity to see their productions without the mutilation and unnecessary changes demanded by the local Censor Board.

"I trust that some basis of understanding will be reached through the efforts of Will H. Hays, who is coming to Montreal.

"It is the theatre owners who have most at stake. The producers have obtained but very little revenue from the distribution of their films here on account of the drastic censorship, the high cost of operations and the heavy duty."

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—The framing of a second Deficiency bill, carrying supplemental appropriations of approximately $23,000,000 for this fiscal year will be started this week by the House Appropriations Committee.

The principal items will be $10,000,000 for pensions for veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars; $3,831,000 for prohibition enforcement, and $3,000,000 for refunds of automobile and cigar taxes under the new tax revision law.

The bill also is to include several items for reclamation and other projects in the Western States which have been stricken from the annual supply bills for the next fiscal year.

These items include $480,000 for the Coolidge Dam in Arizona and $25,000 for the survey of the Columbia River basin, which were eliminated from the Interior Department appropriation bill by the House and Senate conferees.

CAILLAUX URGES NEW FRENCH EFFORT

He Expresses View That Nation Has Not Yet Recovered Her Financial Equilibrium.

PEOPLE REPROACH LEADERS

Are Disappointed That Voting of New Taxes Failed to Sustain Franc.

BUSINESS MEN PROFFER AID

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, April 18.—Speaking in the Champagne today, former Finance Minister Caillaux predicted that the worst of the French financial situation is yet to come.

"I do not wish to dramatize the situation," he said, "but two years ago, speaking at Mans, I warned that the hour of economic and financial penitence had sounded. I will add today that you must admit that I was not wrong. We have without doubt not yet submitted to the hardest of this penitence. In any case we must suffer for years to come. However, a notable step has been taken—we have balanced the budget.

"Yet the results which some people—not I—expected from voting the new taxes have not come. Some thought it would suffice to vote haphazard several billions of new taxes to make our money get better. And now there is some resentment that things have not worked out that way. When will we decide to handle the matter comprehensively, to consider the economic situation of France at the same time as our financial situation?

National Effort Needed.

"What I fear is that France, the creditor of the whole world before 1914, levying tribute on the whole world through her loans abroad, having seen the great wind of the war blow away her great foreign investment and having at the same time borrowed heavily abroad, has not yet regained her economic equilibrium. If I see rightly, France is in the position of a big business institution whose credits have been transformed into debts by unfortunate events and whose directors, employes and workers ought to toil without ceasing to restore the old prosperity.

"In the meanwhile there is only one way to continue, and that is by credit. And this credit the French can obtain from their neighbors, who are generally their rivals, only by the hardest work and sincerest union.

"We have got to get down to coordination of effort. If the franc has just dropped instead of rising, it is because Parliament talked so much before voting that abroad they do not believe we have constructed a solid foundation. That is unjust, but our continual changing of men and direction, our instability, troubles even those disposed to help us—and their number is not large with the franc at 30 to the dollar and 145 to the pound sterling."

Chamber Resumes Tomorrow.

The Chamber of Deputies is due to resume its sittings on Tuesday and the first duty before it will be to consider the minor changes the Senate has made in the 1926 budget. The hope of the country appears to be that the lower House will approve the financial bill and then adjourn until the end of May pending the meetings of the Councils General. It is generally feared that if the Chamber indulges in any of the political gymnastics by which it has distinguished itself in the last seven months the effect will be serious on the international value of the franc. Therefore great pressure is being brought to bear on M. Herriot and M. Blum to delay putting into effect their ambition to oust Premier Briand and have the Left Bloc try for the fifth time to govern the country.

Due to the political advantage of not shouldering the weight of the present situation caused by the new drop in the franc and to the fact that it is too late now to take away from M. Briand the credit for the Moroccan negotiations, the Left leaders will leave the Premier alone until the end of May.

The budget as it will come before the Chamber on Tuesday stands balanced, so far as it was possible to calculate at the time the calculations were made four weeks ago. However it remains true that the Government expenditures incorporated in the 1926 budget were figured when the franc was 130 to the pound, whereas it has since lost 10 per cent. of its gold value. This has caused some critics to estimate that the budget is not really balanced and that the fall in the franc may cause a corresponding increase in Government expenditures, which will disturb the balance.

But such criticism calls for closer examination of the budget, which will show that this reasoning is only partially sound. In other words, the fall in the franc will not be directly reflected on the whole budget. The total 1926 budget stands at 36,117,000,000. Of this sum 24,558,000,000 goes to the Ministry of Finance, all but 1,000,000,000 of it for the domestic debt service. On this the fall in the franc will have no immediate effect.

One-third of Budget Affected.

There remains 11,500,000,000 francs for running the Government, of which 5,684,000,000 francs go for the military establishment. Add to this the 1,000,000,000 francs it costs to operate the Finance Ministry and it is seen that only about one-third of the French budget faces danger from the quick effect of the fall of the franc. Therefore, if one tries to figure the result of the fall of the franc on the equilibrium of the French budget he should make his calculations apply to only one-third.

With respect to that third it remains true that the fall in value of the franc internationally, which in due course results in a fall domestically in its purchasing value, may affect the French budget. There will be more demands for raises of pay and in so far as the Government makes purchases abroad the cost in paper francs will rise.

However, it should be pointed out that there is a factor which will go part way to remedy this. As the cost of living rises in France, due to the fall of the franc, business taxes increase, due to the fact that more francs must be spent. Records of the yields of the turnover tax in the last few years show that its product in paper francs increases as the number of paper francs in circulation rises.

Of course, if there should be a débâcle of the franc comparable to that of the mark—a possibility which Frenchmen are unwilling to discuss—the budget would certainly become unbalanced. But on the other hand, there are reasons against presuming that a 10 per cent. fall in the value of the franc makes a 10 per cent. difference in the French budget.

From all parts of France there continue to pour in expressions of bitter disappointment that the voting of the recent new taxes was followed by a fall in the franc. This is understandable when one recalls that the political leaders of the country promised that the new burdens would bring a betterment in franc value, and therefore a fall in the cost of living, which interests the vast majority of the French much more than the technical international gold value of the monetary unit.

Many varieties of explanations are being given, but those most generally accepted are that the changing tide of French foreign trade and domestic political uncertainty are primarily to blame.

OFFER TO IMPROVE CANAL.

French Business Men Will Raise Funds for Rhine-Rhone Waterway.

PARIS, April 18.—A noteworthy indication of the determination of French business to help the Government by shouldering the task of developing the country's equipment is given by a decision yesterday of the representatives of fifteen Chambers of Commerce and eight departmental Councils to offer their services and funds to widen and improve the Rhine-Rhone Canal between Strasbourg and Lyons.

It was pointed out in the course of the discussion that the canal must be made available for barges of 300 tons capacity. In order to do this two more rivers must be used to maintain the water level and the canal must be widened and deepened in many places.

A resolution was passed asking the Commerce Ministry to authorize the Chambers of Commerce and the Councils to combine their efforts and assume the task. The departmental Councils intend to raise funds by asking payments immediately or over a period of years from their departments. The Chambers of Commerce intend to use similar methods and also to devote a part of their own resources to the work.

All the experts called in consultation pointed out the necessity of immediately improving the canal on account of the growing trade of Alsace and Germany with the Rhone industrial region.

PERET NOT COMING HERE.

Ambassador Berenger Has Full Power to Arrange Debt Terms.

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—Ambassador Berenger has full power to negotiate settlement of the French war debt to the United States and Finance Minister Peret will not come to the United States, the French Embassy announced today.

Reassurance of the Ambassador's full power to negotiate the settlement was received today, it was said.

"The French Embassy is duly authorized by the French Government," the statement said, "to deny some news published in the last few days, according to which the French Finance Minister, M. Peret, would come to the United States.

"Nothing has ever been said about it and it is out of the question.

"The French Ambassador, Senator Berenger, has received from the French Government full power to negotiate with the American Government the settlement of the French war debt."

WON'T DISCUSS CLINIC ROW.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University refused yesterday to comment on the resignation of twenty-six members of the staff of the department of dermatology of the Vanderbilt Clinic and the College of Physicians and Surgeons during the last week. The physicians resigned, it is said, because the Faculty of the college selected Dr. Joseph Gardner Hopkins as successor to Professor John A. Fordyce, head of the department, who died last year, instead of Dr. George M. MacKee, senior member of the department.

Dr. Hopkins has been Dr. MacKee's assistant and is a bacteriologist and roentgenologist. Dr. MacKee is said to have had a great deal of clinical experience.

Dr. William Darrach, Dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at his home in Greenwich, Conn., said last night that the members of the staff who resigned would in the ordinary course of events be replaced. He added he did not care to comment on the alleged controversy regarding the naming of the new head of the department of dermatology.

FUEL GAVE OUT IN DESERT FLIGHT

Spanish Airmen Quit Plane to Fight for Lives in Raging Sand Storm.

HOPE GONE AS RELIEF CAME

Esteves Dropped First and His Aid Went Ahead Till Collapse—Both, In Hospital, Want to Fly On.

After being missing since last Sunday on their flight from Cairo to Bagdad, when they were compelled to make a landing in the Syrian Desert, Captain Esteves was found yesterday by Flying Officer Coghill of the British Air Force and Calvo was come upon in an exhausted condition about twenty-five miles further along the road to Amman.

Scanty details are available regarding their adventure, although Captain Estevez is reported to have recovered sufficiently to express a desire to continue the flight and Calvo was strong enough this morning to be carried by airplane to Amman.

Fuel Gave Out 140 Miles From Aid.

It is understood that after leaving his comrades, Captain Loriga and Captain Gonzalez-Gallarza, and ineffectually endeavoring for several hours to strike the Bagdad track, Captain Esteves was forced to land, owing to lack of fuel. His machine was found short of fuel five miles outside the track usually followed in traversing the desert.

The landing was apparently made toward the evening of Sunday, April 11. Presumably the men stayed throughout the night by their machine, departing after dawn Monday on the long walk to Amman, not aware that that city was 140 miles distant.

It was early in the morning of April 13 that British airmen discovered the machine and were greatly disappointed to find that the Spaniards had failed to adhere to the inflexible rule not to quit the plane. From that time on nearly a dozen British airplanes searched for the wanderers.

On Thursday, Captain Esteves was unable to continue, owing to blistered feet, and his mechanician decided to push on alone, in the hope of gaining Amman or finding succor on the way. But after a heart breaking struggle through the drifting sands, Calvo collapsed the following day and was rescued only in the nick of time, when he had abandoned all hope.

The trails of the men had been obliterated by a sandstorm which had been blowing for two days. Both felt that they were hopelessly lost, and their thirst increased as their water supply decreased with the barren desert still before them.

CALCUTTA, April 18.—Captain Loriga and Captain Gallarzo, two of the Spanish airmen flying from Madrid to Manila, arrived at Calcutta [illegible] noon from Agra, covering more than 700 miles in seven hours. After resting till Tuesday, they will go on to Rangoon.

Both aviators joyfully received the news from Cairo that Captain Esteves, the leader of the expedition, was safe.

THREE WOMEN END LIVES, TWO IN LEAPS

Charlotte Miller, 42 years old, of Flemington, N. J., jumped from the bathroom of the third floor of the Neurological Institute, 151 East Sixty-seventh Street, yesterday morning. She landed in an areaway adjoining the East Sixty-seventh Street police station and was dead when Dr. Perry of the institute reached her. She had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had been sent to the institution by the Red Cross chapter of Flemington.

Sarah Jagodinik, 21 years old, 561 Driggs Avenue, Brooklyn, jumped to her death from the fifth story apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Freedman, 9 East 117th Street, where she had been visiting. She left a note saying, "I'm tired of living, there's nothing worth while in life for me." Miss Jagodinik had formerly been a roomer at the Freedman home.

Mrs. Edna Wallace, 23 years old, 8,816 Ninetieth Street, Woodhaven, Queens, arose before her husband yesterday morning and went to the kitchen, where she opened the jets on the stove. Her body was found by her husband when he awoke. She was asphyxiated.

Mrs. Helen Kinsella, 19, of 1,194 Sherman Avenue, the Bronx, drank a bottle of lysol because, she told police, she was "unhappy." She was taken to Lincoln Hospital, where it was said she would recover.

Speakers Debate Future of American Poetry; Divided on Its Surviving Modern Civilization

"Can Poetry Survive Modern Civilization?" was the question discussed by four speakers yesterday afternoon at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, and the conclusions reached were that it might, and again it might not.

Opening the symposium, William Carlos Williams, author of "Sour Grapes," "In the American Grain," and a contributor to the Dial and S-4-N, said that America must develop a poetry of its own comparable to its skyscrapers, machinery and jazz. "To flourish, American poetry should be local, and should take pains to avoid deracination," said Mr. Williams, who was promptly controverted by Maxwell Bodenheim.

Mr. Bodenheim, employing trenchant and ironic language, challenged the theory that poetry should be of a time and place. "Poetry," he said, "should dwell in an intangible domain of its own."

Saying that only one in ten appreciated a poet of "subtlety, intellect and skepticism," Mr. Bodenheim scoffed at those who would make verse a vehicle for emotional dishonesty.

Chard Powers Smith, author of "Along the Wind," feared that "scientific conventionality," engendered by such subjects as "radio, gland rejuvenation, complexes and sex expression," might suppress poetry of the subjective sort, specifically the introspective type of sonnet.

Gorham B. Munson, former editor of Secession, spoke of two tenable beliefs, one holding that culture was headed for the tailing piles, and the other prophesying a renascence of interest in the fine arts. He made no predictions as to the ultimate triumph of either.

Dr. George J. Smith, President of the Poetry Society, presided.

JAIL VIENNA DAIRYMAN FOR SYNTHETIC CREAM

Health Authorities Found That He Reversed Separator and Mixed Suet in Milk.

VIENNA, April 18.—Frank Hufnagel went the orthodox fraud of the milkman one better—so much better that he has been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. Hufnagel, one of the biggest dairymen in Vienna, did not stop at the mere watering of milk. Through an ingenious machine invented by Rudolph Lachnitt, who was sentenced to six months in jail, he succeeded during the past two years in selling his cream and having it too.

Hufnagel ran all his milk through separators and sold the cream. Then, reversing the process, he added melted beef suet to the separated milk and ran it through a "homogenizing" machine, which, working on the opposite principle of the cream separator, so thoroughly mixed in the substitute cream that the liquid resembled the original product. He sold this as unseparated milk, even advertising its high percentage of butterfat.

The fraud was undetected by customers, whom it is estimated Hufnagel cheated out of $40,000 worth of cream. It was discovered only when a curious milk inspector began to wonder how Hufnagel could sell more cream and unseparated milk than his herd of cows could possibly produce.

The manager of the Hufnagel dairy and his assistant were sentenced to one year and ten months' imprisonment, respectively.

This is only one of numerous milk scandals in Vienna. The directors of another dairy were sentenced to four and six years for a much simpler fraud. They connected the city water supply to a milk basin in the city market, so that by opening a valve they could water the milk before the eyes of inspectors and customers.

Another milkman was discovered adding river water to his milk because a tadpole was found swimming in it. He succeeded in convincing an innocent urban customer that this was quite natural, due to the cows swallowing tadpoles while drinking the river water.

STALIN DENOUNCES REVELRY AND THEFT

MOSCOW, April 18 (AP).—Michael Stalin, recently elected to the important Presidium of the Communist Party, and one of the outstanding figures in the Bolshevist world, made a fiery denunciation today of the waste, revelry and theft rampant in Communist industrial and buying organizations. He was addressing the Leningrad Communist Conference.

The State business must be cleansed and made honest and efficient, he declared. He cited an instance where the overhead charges of a grain purchase organization amounted to 13 kopecks per pood, when it ought to have been only 8 kopecks. This was because every responsible grain buyer had a large staff of stenographers and helpers, bought automobiles and heaped up expenses, making export unprofitable.

"We must declare a fight to the finish on all excesses, all criminal practices with the people's property," he said. "We have a reign of revelry and all sorts of jubilees and unveiling of monuments, requiring millions to cover expenses.

"The manager of the Hufnagel dairy and his assistant were sentenced to one year and ten months' imprisonment, respectively.

"Comrades, we must put an end to such practices. We cannot afford revelries. We must abolish corruption, theft in public service, and create a moral atmosphere rendering life for thieves impossible."

100,000 NOW IN PALESTINE.

The completion of the first stage in the development of Palestine as the Jewish homeland was announced yesterday by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, following receipt of a cablegram from Dr. Chaim Weizmann, President of the World Zionist Organization.

"Immigration figures just compiled show that 100,000 new Jewish settlers entered Palestine from 1919 to 1925, a fact of prime historic importance," said the cablegram. "One hundred thousand released from Ghetto bondage to free national life and absorbed in growing industries and agriculture. Cannon Hebrew language established despite many tongues of origin; school system and university growing. The second 100,000 now on the way."

Commenting on the message, Dr. Wise said: "It stirs the imagination not only of the Jew, to whom it spells the beginning of Jewish redemption, but of all men who are endowed with an historic insight and with the capacity to apprehend that an important stage has been passed in a movement which is bound to have a profound effect on the destiny of mankind.

RUSSIA SURPRISES FLIERS.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Co. and The St. Louis Globe-Democrat. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENINGRAD, April 18.—The crew of the dirigible Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile Polar Expedition got an extraordinary cross section of life in Soviet Russia in the first forty-eight hours of their stay.

At the Trotsk aerodrome they told your correspondent that they had obtained an impression of a much higher efficiency than they had expected of the great numbers of troops, well clad and well disciplined, upholding the Red dictatorship. Just as the fabled English traveler visiting France for the first time and being served a drink at Calais by a red-haired waitress solemnly wrote in his notebook, "French barmaids are all red-headed and can't speak English," the crew noticed the extreme poverty and rough, poor clothes of the people at the aerodrome and at Gatchina.

Wearied by the long trying flight they experienced the horrors of the three-mile drive through the deep snow in peasant sleds, which are like wide canoes on runners, seatless and with hay or straw to lie on, they slept late in the magnificent rooms in the Imperial Palace on gilt beds, authentic Louis XIV and Louis XV.

Then yesterday evening they came en bloc to Leningrad—where they found to their surprise that the soldiers were few and far between, and that the scanty blue-coated policemen were amply sufficient to maintain order and direct traffic. They went to a reception at the Norwegian consulate and came for a night to the Hotel Europe, which compares favorably with any hotel on this side of the Atlantic.

Picture them sitting, a score of Norwegians and Italians, at one arm of the long dining salon, brilliantly illuminated with colored lights. At the far end is a small stage where there is a cabaret performance, singing, dancing, comic monologues, &c., being given to the accompaniment of an excellent band. The salon is crowded with men and women, apparently without a care in the world.

They throw colored streamers about, and play with large blue and red rubber balloons, according to the celebrated Montmartre tradition. They eat rich food, served by clever, polite waiters, dressed in white. They drink champagne and old French wines and applaud uproariously when a turn on the stage takes their fancy.

The crew of the dirigible cannot conceal their surprise—the day before they saw the proletarian of Russia, poor, ignorant, half Asiatic, yet orderly organized; tonight they are suddenly transferred to Paris with a more genuine gayety than Montmartre, and the only apparent difference that neither men nor women wear evening clothes.

Then some of them went to the Vladimirski Club, which is open twenty-four hours of the day. Here, too, there is a cabaret in a vast glittering dining room, the cabaret beginning at 3 A. M. There is an adjoining dining room with the sweet murmurs of a central fountain and roof of high rockery aglow with colored lights and softly falling water. Beyond that is a gambling hall with a dozen tables of baccarat, boulé and other games.

No one here is in dress clothes. Their chips are cardboard instead of ivory and the game is extremely low—two dollars for a bank at the baccarat table—but for the rest it might be Deauville, or Monte Carlo.

Rabot Praises Amundsen.

PARIS, April 18.—Charles Rabot, the French explorer, paid a tribute to Captain Roald Amundsen today when he said, "Where there is a man such as Amundsen at the head of an expedition, one may have faith in its success."

M. Rabot said it was impossible to assure beforehand that the attempt to fly over the North Pole in the Norge would be achieved because it depended upon so many things.

The first real test the dirigible would meet, he said, would be between the north shore of Norway and Spitzbergen, which is a particularly wind-swept area at all times of the year.

"The powerful receiving apparatus of the Norge," M. Rabot added, "will be extremely useful in determining the best time to make the attempt, however, as the ship will be able to get radio weather bulletins from nearly every point, from the Eiffel Tower in Paris as well as from Spitzbergen."

M. Rabot said it would be hard to keep the North Pole permanently discovered, declaring it was located in a floating ice field which was continually shifting.

"The great thing will be to explore and fly over the region where the Pole is at the time," he said.

BYRD EXTOLS SPIRIT OF VOLUNTEER CREW

Commander Praises the Good Nature Shown Under the Heavy Drudgery of Routine.

HE FINDS THE CHANTIER FIT

ON BOARD THE S. S. CHANTIER, BOUND FOR SPITZBERGEN, April 18.—We have had a rough following sea for a week and the ship is quite low by the stern and consequently difficult to steer. We had no expert helmsmen when we started, but now after diligent training we have two helmsmen from among the volunteers as seamen, R. W. Kanper and J. S. Zenpepery.

One of the volunteer messmen broke so many dishes in the pantry that we transferred him to deck duty and gave him a trial as helmsman. He did very well for an hour or so but just as Captain Brennan came on the bridge he found himself at right angles to his course with the ship rolling thirty degrees in the rough of the sea. The West Pointer lost his job as helmsman and is now back on deck.

We have had several snowsqualls and have passed near the vicinity of icebergs, with icefields around them.

The spirit of the crew continues splendid under the drudgery of routine. No one considers seasickness any cause to give up. There is a lot of very hard work, especially for the last two days, when we have been shifting coal from the after hold to the midship coal bunkers in order to prevent the ship from being so low by the stern.

The good nature of the crew is typified by an incident that happened to our carpenter, C. F. Gould—"Chips," the boys call him. There has been a lot for him to do and he has been working fifteen hours a day. Last night he turned in dead. Soon after he got to sleep a heavy sea threw one of his shipmates on his face.

"Hello," said "Chips," "how are you up there," and turned over and went to sleep again.

Radio Engineer Hanson, who with Grenlie and James has gotten our high frequency radio whipped into condition, will be put aboard the first homeward ship we pass, provided the sea is calm enough for transfer. Hanson has provided us with one of the most up-to-date radio sets in existence.

The Chantier is a credit to the Shipping Board. She is a splendid seaboat for her size and we find her in good condition in all respects.

YOUTH OF 16 KILLED BY HIS CHUM AT PLAY

Bradley Roy, 16 years old, who lived at 101 East 179th Street, the Bronx, was shot and killed yesterday by Ralph Kutner, 15 years old, of 207 Echo Place, the Bronx. The two boys with three companions had been shooting at targets with a rifle in the woods near Tuckahoe Road, Yonkers. They had shot up most of their ammunition and were ready to start back home.

Kutner, who had the rifle in his hand, wanted one more shot at the target. Roy crossed the line of fire, without noticing that Kutner was preparing to shoot. He fell with a bullet through the right eye. His companions ran to a pumping station of the Yonkers Water Department and asked that a call be sent for a physician. When Dr. Ehrlich of Homeopathic Hospital arrived in an ambulance he found that Roy had been killed instantly.

The Yonkers police detained the boys for questioning and Dr. Amos Squire, county medical examiner, conducted the examination of Kutner. The latter was arrested on a charge of homicide.

SELFRIDGE CALLS US EAGER.

London Merchant Says Business Men Here Are More Serious.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 18.—H. Gordon Selfridge, head of the Selfridge Department Stores of London, who is to sail from New York for England on Wednesday after an American "shopping" tour with twelve other merchants from British communities, declared on the eve of his trip to New York that he had been impressed by the group purchasing system in vogue in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston.

He said that it stood out as the most important development in the department store industry. It was having its effect, he said, in reducing the cost of doing business and the consumer was benefiting correspondingly.

Mr. Selfridge and his party of British observers toured America's larger cities studying American business and selling methods.

"I look on my business as a hobby," he said, "and when it begins to worry me I take a trip. You of America take business more seriously than people do in Europe, but you take it with an enthusiasm which is contagious."

KILLED IN LEAP FROM PLANE.

VERO BEACH, Fla., April 18 (AP).—A leap from an airplane into the ocean as a stunt in an air circus this afternoon killed Jewell W. Bell, aged 34, of Louisville, a volunteer performer. Several thousand persons on the shore witnessed the accident.

Bell dropped from the lower wing of the plane, which was driven by Roy A. Hearn, stunt pilot, and fell fifty feet into the water. He struck the surface on his back and ricocheted about twenty feet. The body did not appear on the surface again. Efforts to locate it were unsuccessful.

Make Something Good Enough—

ONE of our dealers recently made a shipment of Celestialite to a hospital in Peking, China, a distance of over 10,000 miles.

It has been said that when a man makes something good enough the world will beat a path to his door-step. The path to Celestialite is well beaten.

The authorities at Peking could have purchased other lighting glass without going 10,000 miles for it, but experience had taught them that the beaten path to Celestialite was the only correct one.

END OF FUR STRIKE FORESEEN BY GREEN

CONFERENCE IS DUE TODAY

Manufacturers Expected to Make Proposal Which Will Be Put Before Strikers for Vote.

At a conference among representatives of the Fur Workers' International Union, a committee of the Joint Board of the Fur Workers' Union of New York and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, held at the Hotel Cadillac yesterday afternoon, an agreement was reached which Mr. Green said he believed meant the settlement of the nine-week strike of 12,000 fur workers here.

It was agreed, Mr. Green announced, to hold a further conference with representatives of the fur manufacturers to negotiate an agreement with the workers. Although the time had not been settled upon last night, it is likely that the meeting will be held today. Mr. Green said whatever proposals were obtained from the manufacturers that were acceptable to the conference committee would be submitted to the strikers for a referendum.

It was also announced that a mass meeting of the strikers would be held Wednesday afternoon. Hugh Frayne, organizer of the American Federation of Labor in New York, will preside, and President Green will explain the attitude of the A. F. of L. toward the strike.

President Green said the internal differences between the International and the Joint Board would be investigated by the A. F. of L. when the strike had been settled and the members had returned to work. The aim of the investigation, he said, was to determine the cause of the differences between the International and the Joint Board and to endeavor to restore harmony.

Those present at the conference yesterday, which was called by President Green after the A. F. of L. had been asked to try to settle the strike, were Mr. Frayne, Oiser Schachtman, President of the International; I. Winnich, First Vice President; Harry Sorkin, Second Vice President; Benjamin Gold, Manager of the Joint Board, and Aaron Gross, Samuel Leiberwitz and I. Shapiro, also of the Joint Board.

Mr. Frayne has been working to restore harmony ever since the two broke publicly at a meeting of strikers held at Carnegie Hall. The meeting was called by the International officers and when Gold was barred from entering there was such a tumult from his sympathizers that Mr. Frayne decided speaking was impossible. The strikers have announced their loyalty to the A. F. of L., and President Green's decision to speak at the mass meeting Wednesday is the result of an invitation extended through Mr. Gold.

PERU AND CHILE DIGEST KELLOGG'S PROPOSAL

Both Nations Said to See Possibilities in Bolivia Taking Over Tacna-Arica.

ARICA, Chile, April 18 (AP).—The suggestion by the American Secretary of State, Frank B. Kellogg, as mediator in the Tacna-Arica dispute, for the neutralization of the two provinces or for their transfer "to a South American State not a party to the present negotiations," has created much speculation in plebiscitary circles. The Chilean delegates do not openly express any view, so that their Government may not be hampered in reaching a decision.

From a nationalistic point of view such a solution is considered unsatisfactory, because the claim of either side to the territory has not been decided, but if regarded in the light of giving Chile and Peru an opportunity to establish such economic, commercial and other relations as would overshadow the present causes of dispute, Secretary Kellogg's solution would have a good chance of success.

Bolivia, naturally, is the "South American State" in question. Her claim to a Pacific outlet must sooner or later be considered, as this expanding nation will be able to exert an ever-increasing pressure for a free harbor. The present proposal, although considered unsatisfactory from many viewpoints, still gives an opportunity for Chile, Peru and Bolivia to enter into treaties of commerce which might in a few years afford advantages so patent as completely to remove the possibility of strife among the parties concerned.

It is added that such an arrangement would be satisfactory to the inhabitants of the region, and, finally, it is pointed out in some quarters that much depends on the exact meaning of "neutralization" in this case.

BLESSES NEW CHURCH.

Bishop Molloy at St. Matthias in Ridgewood, Queens.

The Right Rev. Bishop Charles Edward Molloy of the Brooklyn Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, formally blessed the new Church of St. Matthias, at Catalpa and Woodward Avenues, Ridgewood, Queens, yesterday. The church was packed and there was a large crowd outside. Police reserves from the Glendale station kept the crowd in order.

After the blessing a solemn high mass was celebrated, the Rev. Francis O. Siegelact of St. Pancras's Church, Glendale, Queens, was the celebrant. He was assisted by the Rev. James J. Kunz of St. Barbara's Church, Brooklyn, and the Rev. John M. Muls of the Church of Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal, of Ridgewood, Queens. The Bishop and visiting clergy were guests of the parish priest, the Rev. Nicholas M. Wagner, at a dinner in the rectory.

To Take Shakespeare Relics Home.

Hunter Charles Rogers, disgusted with the cool reception given the "Shakespearean" collection he brought to this country two weeks ago, announced yesterday that he would take the relics back to England when he sailed from here on May 5. He said, however, that he would give the J. P. Morgan library an opportunity to acquire the collection. All he wanted for it, he said, was reimbursement for the expense of getting the collection together and bringing it to the United States.

WEISBORD SET FREE; MILLS TO BE GUARDED

He also pleaded with the strikers not to use violence and to "stand together in firm reliance upon the spirit of American fair play" to win the strike.

Employer's Statement.

Robert M. Reinold, personnel director of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company here, said no strike has been called against that plant and that the company obtained the injunction because it wanted to protect workers who had no grievances and were returning to their jobs after a shutdown "in the best interests of the community."

The strike area, save for the release of Weisbord, and the excitement incident to the anticipation of the resumption of picketing tomorrow, was almost quiet throughout the day. A bomb explosion was reported at 2:10 A. M. on the porch of John De Luca, a foreman of the Forstmann-Huffmann Company, at 230 Wessingdon Street, Garfield. Four windows and the front door glass were broken and a hole blown in the porch. Detective Francis J. Boyle was assigned to investigate the explosion, which strikers asserted was not caused by any of their members. They intimated it was caused by a "plant" designed to bring discredit upon them.

A score of Bergen County Deputies were assigned to the plant of the Forstmann-Huffmann Company in Garfield, where a number of loom fixers and machinists were busy on the machinery, for the contemplated resumption of operation tomorrow. Numerous clerks also were said to be traveling about the town in automobiles notifying workers to be at their jobs tomorrow.

Weisbord's Release.

Weisbord was released from the Bergen County jail at noon after his counsel, Saul E. Scher, Sigmund Unger and Joseph Feder, had persuaded Prosecutor Hart to recommend the acceptance of lower bail. Mr. Hart made the recommendation to Judge Seufert, who signed the bail order. William H. Bratt, Chief Clerk of Sheriff Nimmo, who was present, accepted the bail, which was furnished by the National Surety Company through Mr. Scher.

Weisbord, accompanied by the lawyers, left immediately in an automobile for Passaic, saying: "I wonder if any more warrants for my arrest are waiting for me outside the jail."

Weisbord rested at his home in Passaic until 7:30 P. M., when he appeared at strike headquarters. He was met by the six detectives, who immediately served the injunction obtained by the Forstmann-Huffmann Company restraining the strikers from picketing that company's plants. The strikers and their lieutenants cheered Weisbord in welcome as soon as the detectives left, assuring him they had "carried on" in his absence.

Weisbord went into conference at once with his associates, after declining to say what he would do about the injunction. He said, however, it was not likely he would appear in the picket lines, although, he added, he believed the injunction was illegal, and intimated he believed the strikers would not "be deterred by a piece of paper called a restraining order."

"It is very plain," he said, "that the temporary restraining order obtained by the Forstmann-Huffmann Company against the United Front Committee is clearly illegal and is but another attempt to use the agencies of the Government to break strikes. The injunction goes beyond any that has been hitherto issued by the courts of this country and shows to what extent the mill owners can create a Government of their own—a government by injunction.

"Every court heretofore has recognized the right of peaceful persuasion. This restraining order does not recognize this right.

"Evidently the purpose of the restraining order is to seize and incarcerate without a jury trial the leaders of the strike in order to break the strike.

"This, however, will be of no avail to the mill owners. The strike will be won, a union established in Passaic, and decent American conditions inaugurated in the textile industry."

In another statement Weisbord said conditions in the Passaic and Paterson jails were shocking. He said he received worse treatment in the Passaic jail, where, he said, although there were empty cells he was placed in a cubicle with two intoxicated men, kept awake by policemen "banging" on the steel door of the cell every half hour, and was refused visitors or reading matter.

"At intervals," he said, "Chief of Police Zober would inform me that it was with great difficulty that he could restrain himself from bursting into the cell and beating me to death."

He said he received only black bread and coffee twice daily in the Paterson jail and at night a piece of meat, a potato and black bread.

To Guard Workers Homes.

Sheriff Morgan and his deputies came to Passaic in buses shortly after nightfall. He said they would be armed with nightsticks and would receive instructions to guard the workers both at the plants and on their journeys to and from the plants, and if necessary at their homes. The special deputies will go on duty at 5:30 A. M. tomorrow. Sheriff Morgan said he would be in the city at 5 A. M. to take command and make his headquarters at Police Headquarters.

"I will not make any effort to prevent peaceful picketing by a reasonable number of persons in Passaic County," said Sheriff Morgan. "I have talked this over with some of the strike leaders, and they seem perfectly satisfied as to the plans I have made and the suggestions I have given them in attempting to avoid disorder.

"I do not believe that there will be any trouble at all tomorrow or any other day in Passaic County during the strike. I have about 150 special deputies sworn in and ready for duty. I will make my headquarters in Passaic tomorrow and the deputies will be ready in case of any trouble.

"As for the injunction, I will arrest promptly any one violating it. I do not think any formal complaint or warrant is necessary in such cases. Offhand, it seems to me that Weisbord has violated the injunction in the statement he issued tonight, but I am not now prepared to go into that and certainly will take no action on it before tomorrow."

Rabbi Wise's Address.

Rabbi Wise was accompanied by Mrs. Wise and his daughter, Justine, who got need wide publicity last Summer by announcing to the newspapers that she, as a social worker, had found intolerable conditions in textile mills in Passaic. The church could not hold all the persons who tried to enter, and several hundred were outside.

There were no police in evidence, but several men who were said to be representatives of the county authorities and the Department of Justice made notes on his address. He was introduced by Father John Wrobitsky, pastor of the church, and was greeted with loud cheers, which were repeated at every mention of Weisbord's name and at references favorable to the strikers.

"Golden Rule" Nash, a Cincinnati clothing manufacturer, who has won favor of workmen and social workers through the conditions and wages in his factory, was not present. Dr. Wise explained Mr. Nash did not come because no church invited him in time to bring him to the city for the meeting.

"Two questions must be asked and answered tonight. One: Why the Passaic strike? Two: How has the Passaic strike been conducted up to this time? To say that the men and the women workers in the woolen mills of New Jersey have gone out on strike means nothing. A strike is not a thing which stands by itself. It is a result, and the Passaic strike is the result of causes immediate and remote.

The remote and long-continuing causes of the strike have been the conditions in the mills in which you labored. Conditions which you have borne with long-suffering patience. The wage paid in the woolen mills of Passaic has been insufficient, lamentably insufficient, so that three and four workers in a family have been under the necessity of toiling in order to earn enough somehow to maintain the family.

Deenounces Mill Managers.

"There has been wretchedly inefficient and unskilful management of the mills needlessly causing weeks of idleness in the course of a year. Women have been compelled to work under conditions unworthy of a civilized country. The mills have been operated with the help of a system of espionage and blacklist, of which I have every reason to know, a system of which there would not be a moment's tolerance if the American people understood the enormity thereof. Over and above all, there has been a denial to you, the workers, of the right to organize, a right which has been established as elementary in all free lands. For the most part you have been treated as if you were 'just foreigners,' and practices and methods have been adopted toward you which native Americans would never have endured. The spirit of the mill ownership and mill management has not only held you apart from the body of citizenship of this community, but has divided you from one another, deliberately holding foreign groups apart from and antagonistic to one another.

"These were the remoter causes of the strike, and still you endured your wage, your wretched homes, your night work for women, the denial of the right even to organize as workers. A few months ago, after it had long seemed that the irreducible wage minimum had been reached, the mill owners reduced that wage further, and did it for fear that the necessity might arise of reducing dividends, and this after some years of incredible prosperity and almost unlimited profit.

"After the reduction of the wage a young Harvard Law School graduate, Albert Weisbord, came to you and introduced you not to become members of the Communist Party but to present just and righteous demands to the mill owners. Because of what is alleged to be the political viewpoint of your leader, the mill owners have sought to make the strike altogether a discussion of his political views.

"To the gentlemen of the Wool Council of Passaic, let it be made clear that this strike is not for Weisbord's political views, but against their economic views. The mill owners have been virtually silent with respect to your demands because these demands are unanswerable. They have raised a false and misleading issue. They would not deal with Weisbord. When they have been ready to deal with you as their fellow-Americans, actual or potential?

Recalls Offer to Mediate.

"My three associates, Dr. John Howard Melish, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Brooklyn; Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott of the Ethical Culture Society, New York; Paul U. Kellogg, editor of The Survey, and I, who are no more Communists than the owners of the mills, offered to deal with these gentlemen on your behalf. Up to this time, though six weeks and more have passed, not even the courtesy of a reply to our communication has been vouchsafed us by the gentlemen of the Wool Council.

"How has the strike been conducted? That question must be answered, because not a few people imagine that strike and violence are interchangeable terms. Has there been violence? Has there been intimidation? Has there been terrorism? Not on the side of the strikers! As one who abhors violence, I say to you that I am proud of you who have moved your title to Americanism. Twelve weeks of strike and of cruel suffering have passed. And no act of violence has been committed by you. You have picketed lawfully and your right to picket has been confirmed by a recent statute of the Legislature of your State. The American people will not quickly forget the dignity and self-restraint with which you have borne yourselves. As an American addressing his fellow-Americans, I affirm of knowledge that whatever be the charges trumped up against you and your leader, no violence has been suggested to you and no violence has been practiced by you.

Has there been no violence what-ever in the course of the strike? Yes, there has been violence of three kinds: the quiet, persistent, crushing violence of injustice culminating in the final wage cut; next, the violence sometimes contemptible, sometimes brutal, always shameful from the very beginning of the strike on the part of the police, culminating in the brutalities practiced against you a few days ago; and the third stage of violence has now been reached, the gravest form of violence.

Violence in Name of Law.

"Violence on the part of police officials, violence in the name of law, on the part of judges against the strikers and their leaders. A few days ago the sheriff of Bergen County was called upon by the Mayor of Garfield to read the Riot act to you in the course of your peaceful assembly and your lawful picketing. Who is the Mayor of Garfield? A clerk in the Botany Worsted Mills who, without consulting with the Council of his city, called upon the sheriff of the county to read some ancient Riot law, dating from Civil War days, and immediately dispersed those who heard the reading with clubbing and violence.

"The Governor of the State of New Jersey is justified in encouraging the officials of Bergen and Passaic counties in every lawful effort to do their duty,' but in so far as he has by implication justified this extraordinary procedure, he has brought shame upon the honor of the Commonwealth, which he has sworn to cherish and defend.

"I will use plain speech. The American people have looked with horror throughout recent days in New Jersey upon the debasement of police and judicial power to the purposes of strike breaking. Mrs. Burke of the Botany Worsted Mills may feel himself justified in seeking to break a strike, but the Mayor of Garfield should not use police power in order, lawlessly, to serve the interest of the corporation in the hire of which he is as a private individual.

"When Sheriff Nimmo was called upon to read the Riot act to the strikers, he should have protested against the attempt to prostitute his office. Failing therein, he should have resigned sooner than become a party to a technically lawful but morally indefensible procedure against peaceable inhabitants of New Jersey. Where are the churches of Bergen County? Where are the lawyers and the bar associations of Bergen County and the whole of New Jersey? After his hired thugs had done their work in Garfield, the sheriff is said to have exclaimed, 'I've broken the backbone of the strike. Oh, no, little Nemo, you have not broken the backbone of the strike. You have defiled the honor of the State. You have brought its name to shame.

"If it lie not within the legal power of the Governor of New Jersey to suspend Sheriff Nimmo and somehow to protect against the strike-breaking practices of the courts of this State, let the bar associations, made up of officers of the court, meet and act in order to redeem the honor of their Commonwealth.

Sees Great Rights at Stake.

"Great things are at stake in this State. Confidence in the law and the courts of New Jersey has been undermined, for men have seen law become an engine of tyranny, and the courts used for purposes of strike breaking. Civil liberties of men are menaced, things for which Americans have fought and died, at home and abroad. Why, you may ask, this violence of the mill-controlled sheriffs, and police, and Mayors, and courts? The police and sheriffs quartered within the arsenals, into which the mills have been converted, desire either to goad you to resort to violence, or else to terrorise you into submission. Both purposes must fail. There must be no violence on your part. Do not sully your clean record. Do not yield to threat of terror or to the goad of evil purpose. Stand together, in firm reliance upon the spirit of American fair play, of American generosity, American idealism, and you will win this strike, because you deserve to win.

"If the question be asked, 'What is my stake and what my business in this strike, in a State other than my own,' my answer, 'I am an American and a religionist.' As an American I affirm that if there be no law in New Jersey, there is no justice in the land. I am here because wherever Americans fare ill and unjustly, there is my home. I want you to be better Americans than Burke and Nimmo and their masters, the mill owners. Today the injustice has fallen upon you foreign-born Americans. On the morrow, if injustice be not challenged, it will smite other groups, native-born Americans as well.

"Earnestly and solemnly I appeal to the mill owners, if no Kaiser is tolerated in Germany, no little Kaisers will be tolerated in the wool industry of Passaic. It is not too late for the mill owners to repent of the insolence of their ways, put aside the arrogance and hostility with which they have met your just demands and to declare themselves ready, as Americans, if Americans they are, to meet with you and your leaders, and to take counsel with you, touching your minimum and irreducible demands—the right to organize as workers, the right to live as free men in America, the right to live by the standards of American life.

Forstmann-Huffmann Stand.

Mr. Reinold, Personnel Director of the Forstmann-Huffmann Company, in his statement denying there was a strike in that organization's mills, said that during the first nineteen days of the strike, now in its thirteenth week, there was not a single defection in the company's employes.

"There was not a single grievance from any of the employes, either individually or collectively, except about the inadequate protection and the complaints of intimidation," he said. "The Forstmann-Huffmann Assembly, which is a company union, has always aimed to maintain the confidence between employes and employers. This Assembly has fifty-one members appointed by the company, and fifty-four elected by the employes, with 99 per cent. of all employes participating. To show how well it works, only three persons have been discharged in our plant here in twenty-eight months—the lowest labor turnover in any plant of its size in the United States.

"We have not resorted to the injunction to break any strike. We have resorted to the injunction because it is the only way we can free our people from fear and intimidation. This firm was not a party to the conditions complained against when this strike broke. We closed our plant, not because we feared a fight, not because we feared the United Front Committee. We closed it because we believed it to be to the best interests of the community; we believed our esteem in the community was more important at the moment."

Incensed at Politics.

He said there was no "possibility of protection for Forstmann-Huffmann employes on account of politics."

"If politics had been eliminated this plant would never have shut down," he added.

"What is your opinion about the activity of the police in clubbing strikers and the attitude of the other authorities toward the strikers?" he was asked.

"I can't discuss the relations of the police and the other authorities; it would be indelicate," he answered. "But if they had clubbed a thousand workers those would have been wounds easily healed. The wounds inflicted by the United Front Committee will not heal for many years."

Once during his interview he mentioned a "woman who was here last Spring and spread stories of espionage in the mills."

"Do you mean Miss Wise?" he was asked.

Miss Wise was told of Mr. Reinold's remarks about her, and she answered: "He is telling an untruth."

THOMAS SAYS FUND IS RISING.

Expects to Have $250,000 Pledged Today for Strikers' Bail.

Norman Thomas, Chairman of the Emergency Committee for Strikers' Relief, 799 Broadway, announced yesterday that the response to his appeal for a $1,000,000 bail fund for the strikers had resulted in an expectation of securing $250,000 by today. The committee also expressed appreciation for the services of Bainbridge Colby Saturday for a reduction of bail for Weisbord.

Students from Columbia University, Union Theological Seminary, Barnard College, Washington Square College and the College of the City of New York, it was announced yesterday by Hillman Bishop, President of the Columbia University Social Problems Club, will go to the textile strike area today to study conditions in the plants and in the home of the strikers, besides interviewing officials of the strikers, the employers and the county.

"If a majority of the students arrive at a conclusion that the strike is justified," the statement added, "and that they wish to aid the strikers, it is probable a mass meeting will be held this week to be addressed by Dr. Norman Thomas, Rabbi Stephen Wise and students making the trip."

100 TRUCK DRIVERS ARE HALED TO COURT

Brooklyn Starts Campaign on Big Vehicles Which Disregard Rules at Crossings.

MANY COMPLAINTS SIFTED

"Don't Hit Me, I'm a Big Boy" Signs Are Said to Express Attitude of Recklessness of Drivers.

A five-ton truck, the driver of which had been summoned to Traffic Court in Brooklyn last week, displayed a sign, "Don't hit me, I'm a Big Boy." Truck drivers whose attitude toward other vehicles on the road is expressed in this sign have been the object of a special campaign against reckless driving by Inspector August Kuhne in Brooklyn during the past week.

Acting on complains that drivers of heavy commercial trucks secure in the knowledge that a collision would not damage their vehicles, have been recklessly disregarding the courtesy and rules of the road, Inspector Kuhne sent out a special squad to watch other trucks. As a result of this detail more than 100 drivers were brought to Traffic Court in Brooklyn last week and more summons are expected this week.

Complaints to the Inspector were that truck drivers were crossing pleasure drives such as Park Slope, Ocean Parkway, Bay Parkway and other roads where trucking is prohibited at a speed of twenty and twenty-five miles and hour. These drivers, it is said, do not slacken their speed when crossing boulevards, nor do they give consideration to approaching vehicles, but rumble across with a shrill warning from their exhaust whistles for other traffic to give way. Drivers of pleasure cars have to stop because they dare not risk collision with such heavy vehicles.

Drivers who stopped suddenly when a large truck loomed up at the crossing might be bumped from behind and the truck driver would laugh at the ensuing argument and not stop, it was declared. Motorcycle officers were too busy chasing speeders to give their attention to this condition, so Inspector Kuhne sent out three automobiles with a driver and sergeant to pay particular attention to reckless driving on the part of truckmen. This campaign will continue until the evil is minimized.

There have also been complaints from civic organizations and Boards of Trade in Brooklyn at the speed of loaded trucks. Inspector Kuhne was told that aside from the danger of accident there was a property damage. Loaded trucks rattling by at high speed have jarred plaster off in houses newly built. They also tear roadways up, it was asserted, and small bumps under the hammering of heavy loads become deep ruts.

Charged with driving his automobile recklessly and without a license while intoxicated, a man who said he was Arthur Angyalmi, 28 years old, of 2,835 Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx, was held yesterday in $10,000 bail by Magistrate Edward Weil in Harlem Court for examination today in Traffic Court.

In the course of his brief adventure, the police say, the prisoner hit a pedestrian at Fiftieth Street and Broadway early yesterday morning, crashed into a taxicab a few minutes later at Fiftieth Street and Seventh Avenue and wound up entangled in his machine at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, after he had collided with a sedan, injuring its driver and demolishing both cars.

The pedestrian was not injured seriously enough to require medical aid, nor was Henry C. Streth of 2,042 West Forty-ninth Street, the taxicab driver.

It was while Angyalmi was proceeding north on Fifth Avenue that he became entangled with the sedan, which was traveling south. Both he and Henry W. String of 2,032 Linden Street, Brooklyn, owner of the sedan, were treated for lacerations.

GIRL HURT IN CHASE FOR A STOLEN AUTO

A girl was injured and a taxicab smashed last night while policemen in commandeered cars chased a stolen automobile through three miles of Bronx streets. The chase started at 168th Street and Southern Boulevard, when Patrolman Aloysius Gordon noticed a machine approaching which bore the license number given in an alarm he had just received. He jumped into a car, blowing his police whistle. He was joined by Patrolman McCarton at 163d Street.

The chase continued in and out of side streets and back to the Boulevard, into the heavy traffic which prevented the police from shooting. At Longwood Avenue and Southern Boulevard a machine driven by Paul Mazzola, 863 East 164th Street, upon which McCarton was riding, knocked down Lillian Eigen, 21 years old, 492 West 138th Street. She was taken to Lincoln Hospital. Her condition is serious. Gordon in the other car continued the chase.

At 158th Street the stolen automobile crashed into a taxicab driven by George Gitsain, 1,919 Daly Avenue, the Bronx, wrecking it. The stolen car was damaged but sped on to 152d Street, where it ran up on to the sidewalk and five men and a girl jumped out. The men escaped. The girl, who said she was Helen Brophy, 506 West Twenty-ninth Street, 16 years old, was arrested and charged with acting in concert in the theft of an automobile.

The stolen car was owned by Solomon Herman, 675 West End Avenue, and had been stolen from in front of his home earlier in the evening.

LIGHT WIRE KILLS THREE WHEN AUTO HITS POLE

Three Other Philadelphians Are Injured—Survivors Too Intoxicated to Explain.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18 (AP).—Three men were electrocuted and three badly burned today when their automobil crashd into a high-voltage electric light pole, causing a live wire to come in contact with the car. One of the injured was so seriously hurt that physicians fear he will not recover.

Those killed were Charles Morris, Daniel Boyle and James Gillen. Thomas Mally, Frank Brennan and Charles Specht were injured. Mally's leg was broken and he was severely burned, while Brennan and Specht suffered minor cuts and bruises. All were Philadelphians.

The police said Brennan and Specht were so intoxicated that they were unable to give any details of the accident or tell who was driving the car.

GERMANS IN CHINA TRY NATIVE JUSTICE

BUT DOCTORS HAVE TROUBLE

They Are Sued in Chinese Courts If Patients Die Without Signing Releases.

JUDGES TRY TO BE FAIR

When Foreign Press Makes an Outcry, However, They Are Strict and Placate the Chinese.

By THOMAS F. MILLARD.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, March 13.—Some interesting, although perhaps not entirely definite, conclusions regarding the abolition of extraterritoriality in China can be drawn from experience of Germans in this country since they lost that status.

First consider the psychological influence of the loss of extraterritoriality on the Germans themselves. A stock argument (rather it is an assertion usually stated very positively) of a large foreign element here is to this effect: "If extraterritoriality is given up we all might as well pack up and leave China. I don't want to stay here after that."

Today there are about as many Germans in China as were here before the deportations. (It can be recalled that the Chinese Government, not on its own inclination but instigated by certain of the Allies, after the Armistice was signed in 1918, deported Germans wholesale, a useless and unjust act which most judicious foreigners here regret now.)

A majority of them here now are the same persons who were here before. When they returned to China they understood that henceforth they would be subject to the laws and legal processes of China. Yet they came back and took up their lives and occupations again under generally adverse circumstances apart from the disabilities that might arise from their new legal position. If they felt tremors, they faced the situation with outward calm.

That Germans did not return to China to begin the difficult task of regaining their former place and building up again their shattered commerce and professional work without full consideration of the conditions is shown by an agreement which they made among themselves. In view of the uncertainty about how they would fare in Chinese courts they agreed that in personal and business disputes among Germans they would not go to law, but would submit their differences to the decision of a kind of private Board of Arbitration composed of Germans.

So far this plan has worked very well. In regard to civil actions there has been, I understand, only one instance in five years when it was necessary for Germans to invoke Chinese police authority and law against another German; and in that case the Chinese acted promptly and effectively.

In regard to acts of Germans which bring them under the process of civil actions initiated by Chinese, or vice versa, these matters are taken up by the German Chamber of Commerce with the Chinese General Chambers of Commerce, and so far in every case a compromise and settlement have been made out of court.

Cooperate With Chinese.

In regard to acts of Germans which bring them under the process of Chinese criminal law some cases may be noted. First, all Germans now living in China are particularly warned against actions which may lead to criminal prosecutions. They are very careful in their conduct, not only with Chinese but also with other foreigners. That, I take it, is not altogether a bad thing.

It was a little annoying for foreigners in Japan to change their habits after the loss of extraterritoriality there, but they did change, and nowadays conduct themselves with care and circumspection. A foreigner thinks twice in Japan before using violence or losing one's temper in disagreements with servants and Japanese of the lower classes, or of any class. A German in China now thinks three times when in exasperation he feels inclined to chastise a stupid or insolent Chinese servant or coolie.

A few months ago a German was walking on a street in Mukden and a group of small Chinese boys (it was a time of widespread anti-foreign agitation) ran after him, shouting offensive epithets. Finally, in exasperation, the German turned about and struck, not very hard but more as a gesture than with intent to injure, with his walking stick at one of the urchins near him. The contact of the stick with the boy was light, ut in trying to dodge it the lad fell into a gutter and hurt himself. At first the boy did not seem to be much hurt, but he died from the injury received when he fell, or so his parents contended. The German was charged with manslaughter and arrested. His trial attracted much attention. He was convicted and sentenced to a few years of imprisonment.

I have talked with some German lawyers about that case, and all of them agree that on the evidence any court might bring in a conviction. Their only criticism is that the Chinese Judge failed to give due consideration to the mitigating circumstances: that the foreigner did not intend to hurt, the boy, that indeed he did not mean actually to hit him, but only to scare him, and that it was not the blow but the fall which preatumably caused death. From the facts of that case I do not think one like it would cause much comment in America.

Affected by Old Custom.

The difference in that case as it was, and as it would be if the foreigner had extraterritorial status, is that under extraterritoriality the Chinese parents, knowing that their suit would have to go into a foreign court, in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred would have been satisfied to receive a modest cash compensation for the child's death. In the past almost all similar cases have been settled that way.

Another case is that of a German physician whose Chinese patient unfortunately died after an operation. The family brought an accusation of criminal malpractice against the doctor, who in the end, I believe, had to pay heavy damages in order to extricate himself. By the evidence that doctor did everything possible to save the patient and the death was unavoidable. Yet under an old Chinese law the doctor was responsible for the patient's death. How this affects German physicians practicing in China is evident. Many German doctors have a fine practice here, and Germans conduct a number of good hospitals. They are in a dilemma; but a way has been found to minimize the risk by requiring Chinese patients and their near relatives to sign legal papers exempting doctors from criminal and civil prosecution because of results of treatment given.

But on this point I find that German doctors here are philosophical and go on cheerfully enough. They believe that in a few years all foreign doctors in China will be in the same position. Furthermore, it is probable that when extraterritoriality is abolished the Chinese Government will do what most other Governments do, and limit or put restrictions on foreign professional practitioners—medical, legal, technical and of all kinds. The host that far-seeing professional men and women here hope for after they lose extraterritoriality is that the treaty will provide that those already established in China will be allowed to continue practice without discrimination against them in favor of Chinese professional practitioners. And I observe no disposition among responsible Chinese elements to object to that; indeed, intelligent Chinese want the foreign professional people to remain in China at least for some time, because they realize that this is for the benefit of Chinese. In time the Chinese want and expect to be able to supply their own scientific and legal needs.

In those cases when Germans have been forced to appear in Chinese courts as defendents or litigants the observation of German lawyers is that Chinese Judges seem so anxious to show that they are not afraid to apply Chinese law to these foreigners that, if anything, they are too strict in sticking to the letter of the law. They seem to fear being criticized for treating foreigners more leniently than Chinese are treated in the same courts.

That is a psychological reflex of political conditions. Germans I have talked with observe this tendency and therefore they have become chary about having any of their affairs of that nature aired in the press. An effect of the publicity given to the cases I have mentioned, and the effort of the foreign press in China to show, for purpose of argument against giving up extraterritoriality for other foreigners here, that injustice was done to those Germans, reacts adversely on Germans by rousing a popular psychology that causes Chinese Judges to "lean backward" lest they be criticized. If a case is given no especial publicity a Chinese Judge very likely will do his best to decide it on the merits, but if an outcry is made about it by the foreign press, then the Judge is put in a position where the least indication of leniency to a foreigner may embarrass him.

Germans very frankly admit that their situation without extraterritoriality is mitigated by the existence of foreign residential concessions and by the fact that many other foreigners still have extraterritorial status. By living in the foreign settlements (as most of them do) Germans in China have the same social conditions and police protection that other foreigners have. Also, on the psychological side, the fact that whatever happens to them because of loss of extraterritoriality will be contrasted with the situation of other foreigners does now have an ameliorating effect on the way Chinese treat them.

People here seem, however, to be a good deal mixed in thinking about the settlements and extraterritoriality. The foreign settlements are little areas in China where Chinese law applies either not at all or only in modified form. Extraterritoriality covers foreigners who have that status wherever in China they happen to be. A German living in a foreign settlement can be arrested only on a warrant issued by a Consul and served by the foreign municipal police. His case goes into a Mixed Court, where foreign assessors (Judges) really decide cases even under Chinese law. Thus, as long as the settlements remain as they are now the mantle of extraterritoriality to an extent is thrown over all residents in them.

As to German trade in China without extraterritoriality, Germans here are of the opinion that the change does not affect it materially. In fact, because of the aforementioned contrast, Germans have now a somewhat favorable position in the eyes of Chinese, which offsets disadvantages. A German official whose position relates particularly to trade told me recently that disabilities to German commerce in China now are caused more by adverse economic conditions in Germany than by conditions in China. It is doing fairly well, anyhow.

TRAINS TO PEKING ARE RUNNING AGAIN

Only One a Day Arrives From Tientsin—Makden Wants Soviet Envoy Recalled.

PEKING, April 18.—Now that the Chief Executive, Tuan Chi-jui has left his sanctuary in the Legation Quarter and resumed his office, several members of the Cabinet also are back from their refuge. Part of the old Government, therefore, is functioning again, and complicating the work of the Committee of Public Safety. Tsao Kun, the former President, also is interesting himself in politics.

Meanwhile the important military leader has not arrived, possibly because they do not approve the reappearance of the old Government.

There is still a good deal of anxiety in the city owing to the absence of any authority with the military backing.

Some of the Feng Tien troops have come inside. They are orderly and are civil to foreigners.

One train is running daily between Peking and Tientsin and the belated mails are arriving.

M. Ivanoff has resigned his position as manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria and been replaced by M. Enshanoff, an indication that the Soviet intends to pursue a less aggressive policy in Manchuria.

It is reported here that the Mukden Government recently asked the Chinese Chargé d'Affaires in Moscow to demand the recall of M. Karakhan, the Soviet Ambassador to Peking, on the ground that he has violated the Sino-Russian Treaty by bribery and by the incitement of students and others to disturb the peace of the country.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 18.—A hotel costing $1,500,000 will be constructed on the side of the Bothwell Hotel, Virginia Avenue and the Boardwalk, it was announced. The Bothwell and Hotel Jackson were burned down about two years ago. George T. Sale, Philadelphia real estate broker, purchased the two sites at a price reported at $400,000. Five stores will be built on the Jackson property. Work on both the new eighteen-story hotel and stores will begin at once.

STRESEMANN BACKS THE RUSSIAN TREATY

Calls It Reich's Legitimate Elaboration of Locarno Security Treaties.

STUTTGART, April 18.—Germany's coming treaty with Soviet Russia will insure the neutrality of the two nations toward one another, Foreign Minister Stresemann explained in the course of a speech he delivered before the annual assembly of the German People's Party here tonight. Dr. Stresemann characterized the negotiations between Berlin and Moscow as the legitimate elaboration of the Locarno security treaties.

Declaring that the Reich was in no sense responsible for the premature publication of the news about the Russo-German treaty, which, however, he said had been fully notified to the Locarno powers, the Foreign Minister observed:

"When Germany undertakes treaty negotiations with Russia which guarantee both powers against the participation of either in an aggressive act against the other, and moreover insure the preservation of mutually beneficial economic and amicable relations, the basis is the same as that on which other nations found their relations with Russia.

"Our whole policy must be aimed at obtaining genuine pacification of Europe with recognition of Germany's equality. Conclusion of the treaty with Russia should represent the natural expansion of Locarno."

Britain Acquiesces in Move.

LONDON, April 18.—There is authority for stating that former Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain has let it be known in Berlin that the view taken by the British Foreign Office of the proposed Russo-German treaty is not unfavorable.

The conviction here is that when the full text of the treaty is published it will be found to bear out the assurances already given in Berlin that it fits into the framework created by the Locarno conference and will not prevent the entry of Germany into the League of Nations. This view of the British Government has been communicated to the other signatories of the Locarno treaties through the usual diplomatic channels.

The fact that the Locarno treaties have not yet become effective makes the position extremely delicate and doubt is entertained in Prague and Warsaw regarding the exact bearing of the new Russo-German compact. D. Benes, acting in complete accord with Count Skrzynski, has already drawn the attention of the British, French and Italian Governments to the necessity for discussion of the effect the new treaty may have on the proposed entry of Germany into the League.

Benes Drafts Questionnaire.

Dr. Benes considers that questions have arisen to which he hopes the German Government will be able to return satisfactory answers before Germany's entry into the League is possible and he has drawn up a list of these questions under five heads which he is communicating to the signatories of the Locarno treaties, including Germany.

The position of Czechoslovakia derives importance from the act that she is expected to express the views not only of the Little Entente, but also of Poland at the next meeting of the League Council.

On the German side complete satisfaction is expressed with the attitude taken by the British Foreign Office and assurance is renewed that the new treaty does contain any secret clauses as that Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann remain faithful to the principles laid down at Locarno.

RADITCH AND SERBS NEAR OPEN FIGHTING

Croatian Deputies Back Leader, Ousted From the Cabinet, by Rejecting Call to Belgrade.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BELGRADE, April 18.—The break between the Serbs and the Croatians is growing space and now has reached a point where it is not far removed from the previous state of open hostilities between them.

The fiery Croatian leader, Stephan Raditch, since his ejection from the Cabinet, has been freed from what little restraint the official position caused him and is prosecuting with his old-time vigor the war he has declared on the "corrupt Serbian Government." The Government, on the other hand, shows signs of abandoning its conciliatory policy in favor of its previous methods of force.

The Croatian Deputies at Zagreb declare that the Government, through the police, ordered them and members of their party's secretariat, to come to Belgrade. All but seven, who have split with Raditch and joined the Government, say they will refuse to obey any summons from Belgrade unless it comes from the Speaker of Parliament.

Until a year ago the Croatian Deputies refused to attend the Yugoslav Parliament. Meanwhile, the Government has caused great excitement in Zagreb by closing the "Comrades Bank" in Zagreb, which is the financial institute of the Croatian Peasant Party, and seizing the books to ascertain where Raditch gets his funds.

It is suspected that Moscow is financing Raditch. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns from a well-informed foreign police source that this is probable, though it is believed that the Bolshevist aim in Yugoslavia, as well as throughout Central Europe, is no longer Communism but Pan-Slavism. On the other hand, there seems to be some foundation to Raditch's charges of corruption against the Government. A responsible Serbian official in deprecating these accusations, said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent:

"Of course, there is corruption here, but there is corruption in all countries."

It is noteworthy despite continuous talk of corruption on all sides, practically no documentary proofs ever have been produced.

It is rumored that the Government is contemplating getting rid of the obstreperous Raditch by having him declared insane.

The Government, as it now stands, is unlikely to command a majority when Parliament meets and a new crisis seems inevitable. All of the opposition parties, including the Serb opposition, refuse to join in publishing a united manifesto declaring that the Cabinet does not represent the country.

SPOTLESS TOWN BANK SHUT

Closes in Wilmore, Ky., Where Movies and Drama Are Taboo.

WILMORE, Ky., April 18.—The Wilmore Deposit Bank has closed its doors because of the large amount of frozen and uncollected loans on its books. Thereby Kentucky's only "Spotless Town" loses its financial institution and many are reported hard hit. Because depositors have been assured they will not lose anything stockholders may be assessed 100 per cent. A conference will be held tomorrow to discuss a possible reorganization.

The bank had deposits of $315,000, loans and discounts of $398,000 and $57,500 bills payable. Its capital was $75,000 and surplus $5,000. The assets have been turned over to the State Banking Commission.

Wilmore has gained much notoriety because no theatres, moving pictures, vaudeville or drama, almost no worldly amusement of any sort, is allowed. The town is the seat of a large denominational college, and it was felt that to prohibit such amusements would tend to make students study more and keep their attention on their work.

The Fundamentalists' Association, organized a nation-wide campaign against the theory of evolution and modernist ideas had its headquarters here.

Speaking to the members of the class, Mr. Trexler reminded them that they were setting out to be Christians.

5 DEAD AND 3 DYING IN 2 CHICAGO FIRES

SECOND BLAZE IN DRUG DEN

CHICAGO, April 18 (AP).—Five persons are dead, three cannot live and twelve others are in hospitals nursing injuries here today as a result of two fires that terminated revelry carried into the early hours of Sunday morning.

A four-story brick building was swept by flames which originated at a drinking party. Three occupants of the building were killed, a fireman was fatally injured, and six others were taken to hospitals.

At the birthday party, Mrs. Frank Smagaczak hurled the contents of a gallon can of kerosene into a stove when the room grew cool. Ten guests at the table were deluged with the blazing liquid as it exploded. They were rushed to a hospital, where two of them died. Two others were found to be burned so seriously that they cannot live, and a fifth, Frank Smagaczak, will be permanently blinded if he recovers. His wife, who caused the explosion, escaped uninjured.

Joseph Jamison, proprietor of the bugned brick building, admitted, according to the police, that he had been selling whisky for the last six months.

Quantities of drugs and hypodermic needles were found in the building, and Patrick Roche, Federal Narcotics Agent, started an investigation after declaring that the building had been found to be the headquarters of several narcotic addicts.

Some of the tenants of the building appeared to be dazed, according to firemen and policemen, and fought their rescuers before they could be taken to safety.

One 200-pound man jumped from the third story and struck a ladder on which firemen were carrying a victim to the ground. The ladder snapped, causing one of the deaths and serious injury to a fireman.

TURKS CALL TROOPS FROM FEAR OF ITALY

Anglo-Italian Accord on Abyssinia.

ROME, April 18 (AP).—The Italian press publishes reports of English and French newspapers of the financing of an Anglo-Italian agreement concerning Abyssinia, but there is neither confirmation nor denial here, nor does the press make any comment.

Political circles recall the exceptionally good reception given by the present regime to the heir to the Abyssinian throne when he visited Rome, and also point out that when the Italian Embassy at Buenos Aires was vacant, it was suggested that Count Colli di Felizzano be transferred there, but immediately it was declared semi-officially that his presence in Abyssinia was necessary.

This is now interpreted in the sense that the Minister had begun negotiations, which would better be continued through him as he enjoyed the confidence of the heir to the throne.

Italo-Turk War Predicted Here.

Charging that the regime of Premier Mussolini had tangled the finances of Italy, Dr. Charles Fama, anti-Fascist lecturer declared last night that the only way the condition could be covered up would be by a war and predicted that Italy, backed by Greece, would declare war on Turkey within six or seven months. He added that he expected an upheaval in Italy.

Dr. Fama, who was speaking at the Bedford Park Congregational Church, Bainbridge Avenue and 201st Street, the Bronx, called Mussolini a "fraud," attacked the dictator personally and minimized his claims of reducing unemployment in Italy.

According to the lecturer, Mussolini's real motive in friendliness to the Vatican was "to further his political aspirations." He assailed Mussolini's ban on the Masonic order and asserted that the Italian Government had sent an dorder to this country directing the dismissal of all consulate or other governmental employes who were Masons.

Dr. Fama further charged that importing companies doing business with Italian firms had been "blackjacked" and harried in various ways. He denied that Mussolini had attained any degree of popularity in this country.

What are the Danger Signals of Disease?

"Most people think of death as coming from one of the great diseases—typhoid fever, for instance. But it isn't these that do the real damage. It's the hidden things that weaken your organs without your knowing it, till the test comes and you find yourself defenseless. It is, for instance, the abscess at the root of a tooth that manufactures the pus that injures the kidneys; the infected tonsils that discharge a pus that causes rheumatism; the little lump beneath the skin that someday changes into a deadly cancer; the work that strains the weakest spot until it gives way." UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

GET YOURSELF EXAMINED

Most of the diseases which usually cause death at thirty, forty, fifty, sixty, and even later are preventable or at least can be deferred from a few to many years if proper precautions are taken in time. Well-tested scientific studies of groups taking the standard physical examinations of the Life Extension Institute show a reduction of 53% in the death rate among impaired lives, the largest gains being made between the ages of forty and sixty.

GET YOURSELF EXAMINED

The founders of the Institute believe that fifteen to twenty years can be added to the average life through yearly physical examinations and the practice of correct personal hygiene. Since the Institute was organized, over 400,000 men and women have taken its examinations. No medical treatment is given by the Institute. Back of the Institute's scientific policy is its Hygiene Reference Board of leading physicians and scientists.

ITALIAN DEBT BILL EXPECTED TO PASS

Administration Leaders Believe They Have a Majority of Six in the Senate.

FRENCH NEGOTIATE AGAIN

Success of Italian Agreement Is Expected to Hasten Settlement With Them.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Interest in the Senate this week centres about the action which is to be taken in regard to the tentative agreement for the settlement of the war-time debt of Italy to the United States which was made by the American Debt Commission and the Italian mission headed by Count Volpi. An agreement has been reached to begin voting on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the Administration leaders, after another canvass of the situation, are confident they will obtain ratification of the compact. It already has been accepted by the House.

The chief hope of opponents of the Italian debt compact is that they may be able to collect enough votes to recommit it to the Senate Finance Committee, but unless there is a further swing to their side before Wednesday, this effort will fail. The Administration forces and the Democrats who are in favor of ratification at the last count seemed to have about six votes more than necessary to prevent recommittal, and it is believed that once that proposal is voted down an even larger majority will be obtained for ratification.

It is considered of special importance by Administration leaders and those Democrats in the Senate who are seeking to bring about a quick settlement of the remaining international problems which revolve about the war debts that the agreement with Italy be ratified, as it is believed that such action will result in the reopening at an early date of the negotiations with France and a successful conclusion of the long controversy which has been carried on over that issue.

That the French nation is prepared to proceed with negotiations was indicated today when the French Embassy made it known that Ambassador Berenger was clothed with full authority to represent his Government and sign an agreement, if terms satisfactory to both countries can be reached. The embassy also declared that reports cabled from Paris to the effect that Finance Minister Peret would come to the United States, either in May or June, personally to carry on the negotiations, were unfounded and that Ambassador Berenger would carry on all negotiations himself.

The understanding here has been that the American officials are prepared to call a meeting of the American Debt Commission soon after the Senate acts on the Italian debt—the supposition being that such action will be for ratification and carry with it a vote of confidence.

BENEFIT NETS $41,000 FOR TUBERCULOSIS AID

More than $41,000 was obtained last night at a benefit performance held at the Manhattan Opera House in aid of the Adirondack Fund for the Tuberculous, which maintains the Northwood Sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Founded in 1920 by Summer residents of Lake Placid, the Adirondack Fund is intended to care for patients in the advanced stages of tuberculosis. The present facilities at the Northwood Sanitarium are inadequate, providing only twenty-two beds. Those in charge of the fund hope to be able to enlarge the capacity to fifty beds and also to improve equipment.

Dr. Edgar Mayer is in charge of the work at Northwood, assisted by Dr. Edward Baldwin of the Trudeau Sanitarium. The fund is impartially administered and is non-sectarian in principle. Officers of the fund are Edwin Mayer, President; Mrs. Moritz Rosenthal, Vice President; Dr. Edgar Mayer, Secretary; Maurice M. Feustman, Treasurer.

Super Power Corporation, Seeking Grant, Would Cover the Crags With Water.

BUFFALO, April 18.—Plans to preserve and enhance the scenic beauty of Niagara Falls are set forth in letters which have been sent to Secretary of State Kellogg and leaders of the Senate by E. G. Randall, President of the American Super Power Company.

Among the officers of the American Super Power Corporation, chosen at a meeting in New York City last week, are Henry L. Doherty of New York, Chairman of the Board, and A. B. Leach of New York, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

The plans of the corporation, which are predicated upon an early amendment to the existing treaty between Canada and the United States by which more power might be developed by both countries at Niagara Falls and on the St. Lawrence, call for an $88,000,000 development at Niagara Falls and a $211,500,000 development in the St. Lawrence.

The corporation plans to offer to install at the crest of the Horseshoe Falls remedial works to stay the suicide of the cataract if the Federal Water Power Commission grants a license to divert such waters of the Niagara as may become available under the proposed amendment to the international treaty.

Through the establishment of islands the water would be spread evenly over the ledges, some of which are now bare, and render the cataract more beautiful than this generation has known it.

Expense of this undertaking would be borne by the corporation jointly with the Ontario Hydroelectric Commission.

The corporation has purchased Comer's Island in the Niagara River above the falls for an intake and nearly half a mile of river frontage in the lower gorge, where it plans to erect the largest power house on the continent. A tunnel beneath the Niagara River from Comer's Island to the shore and a canal from there to Lewiston is proposed.

If it obtains a license, which it is an applicant, to develop hydroelectric power from additional treaty waters, it will transmit power to New York City and other cities, notably Binghamton, along the 315-mile right-of-way which has been obtained.

PRAISE NEGRO AID TO NATION

The contributions of the negro to the making of America were outlined by negro speakers last night at the forum of Community Church, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street.

James Weldon Johnson, Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told of the negro's contribution to music, declaring that "the only things cultural in American civilization that have come out of American soil have been from the American negroes." He enumerated folk lore, which originated from negro slaves; dancing in its every phase, even down to the Charleston; American popular music, which he said originated directly with the negro, and finally the negro spirituals.

FRENCH AND SPANISH MEET RIFF ENVOYS

Mtioua. It had been announced that Hityi had been replaced by Haddou because of illness but Haddou came today only as go-between for France and Abd-el-Krim. All these men are experienced in Western as well as Oriental diplomacy.

Azerkane, who is Abd-el-Krim's brother-in-law and Foreign Minister, is known throughout the Riff as "the little bird" because of his small stature, gentle manners and alertness. Several times during the war, dressed in European clothes, he has passed through the army lines into French and Spanish territory.

Caid Si Haddou also is a man of considerable experience in negotiation with French, while Cheddit has during the war made several voyages to England in search of arms and sympathy, not always without success.

Says Peace Is Possible.

While awaiting the arrival of the French and Spanish delegates, Si Azerkane wrote out for the newspapermen a short declaration in which he praised the courtesy with which he had been received by the French and added:

"We have come to the conference with the most ardent desire to make peace and have great confidence we will succeed. We are going to ask the French and Spanish Governments to help us in the realization of our aspirations, which will enable us to live in peace and security. We now know the preliminary conditions to open the negotiations, and are convinced that peace is possible if concessions are made on both sides.

"On our side we are willing to make large concessions on the sole condition that we are not asked to abandon our reasonable rights."

This language, with its peace and security phrasing, smacks strongly of much heard in other places during these past years. When asked if he had full powers, Azerkane replied:

"I hold my powers from the Emir, who speaks in the name of all the tribes whose Caids he appoints."

This attitude is certainly different from the one expected from the Riff representatives. In Paris and Madrid there has been a lot of talk of negotiating with the tribes over the head of Abd-el-Krim, but it seems these gentlemen are nothing more nor less than his accredited representatives.

When asked if he would accept the French and Spanish demand for retirement of the Riff forces five miles on a twenty-five-mile front as an indication of good faith and the occupation of the abandoned strategic points by the French, the Riff Foreign Minister replied:

"I think that I shall be obliged to ask delay, which may be five days, in order to communicate with the Emir."

It was this answer which he gave later to General Simon, and thus the preliminaries to the peace preliminaries are adjourned for at least three more days.

Demand Abd-el-Krim's Elimination.

CAMP BERTEAUX, Morocco, April 18 (AP).—The French, Spanish and Riffian delegates met at noon today to discuss military conditions for an armistice preliminary to the official gathering of the peace delegations in conference at Oujda.

The Franco-Spanish armistice terms were presented, and the Riffian delegates asked for five days in which to consult with Abd-el-Krim, the Riffian chieftain, before giving a final answer. This was granted and they will be sent back in an airplane.

The terms emphatically set forth that Abd-el-Krim would not be recognized and demanded that the French troops be permitted to advance seven kilometers along the front.

The Riffians declined to permit the French and Spanish troops to advance and also objected to the proposed terms for the exchange of prisoners.

An official communiqué says:

"The object of the day's conference was to ascertain in what degree conditions previously mentioned might serve as a basis for pourparlers. This long exchange of views led the Riffians to ask that they might be enabled to communicate quickly with the Riff. This facility was immediately granted them. They were permitted to go to the Riff by airplane, and their return is awaited for resumption of the preliminary conference."

It is learned on good authority that the Spaniards at the conference insisted not only that Abd-el-Krim depart from the Riff, but that he be not permitted to reside in any Moslem country.

To this the Riffian delegates stoutly objected.

LOST HIS CITIZENSHIP PAPERS ON ICY TRAIL

WRITES OF HARD JOURNEY

Tucked away between the frying pans and the salt port in an old, weatherbeaten prospector's pack, lying somewhere beside an icy trail in the wilderness near Mount McKinley, are the naturalization papers of one Frederick Zorn, issued by the New York Supreme Court in 1877, it was made known by County Clerk William T. Collins yesterday.

The story of the lost pack is contained in two letters written by Frederick Zorn to the Supreme Court. The first, dated Feb. 15, 1926, expresses fear that the writer will never be able to recover the pack, and petitions the Court for duplicate papers. The second, dated March 19, was written in answer to County Clerk Collins's request for additional information. Duplicate papers were issued by the Supreme Court on March 30.

The First Letter to Court.

The first letter follows:

"To the Honorary Superior Court, New York City. I, the undersigned Frederick Zorn with originally my home in New York City since 1877 or lived there until 1900, when I went to Alaska to United States territory Nov. 16, 1925, while on an icy trail in the solitary wilderness near our 20,000 high Mount McKinley I fell and broke my left shin bone far from humanity. I had to leave my pack in the woods I had my original New York Superior Court issued Citizen Paper, issued to me personally by the Court Oct. 8, 1890. I fear I will never be able to recover my Citizen Papers in the wilderness as it will suffer destruction with the rest of my things I had to leave behind and with superhuman effort I made my way to Humanity seventy-five miles on the ice on crutches alone, and managed coming out of the jaws of death. Placed in a hospital in Anchorage, Alaska, and transferred to this Pioneer Home at Sitka. Now I respectfully petition the Honorary Superior Court of N. Y. C. for a copy of my original Citizen Paper. I am now an inmate of the Pioneers' Home. I was born in Germany 1857."

Text of Second Letter.

"Twenty-six years ago I gave up my business, my home and my family in New York City and the Devil of a Crook Promoter coaxed me to go to this Hell—the prospector's Hell—Alaska but it is a wonderland rich in minerals and placer gold deposits and with systematic mining machinery I could have taken more than $30,000,000 worth in Gold, Platinum and Coal but mining, a noble industry is now looked on as Bunko Game because Bunko stock promoters sold Fake Mining Stock, Robbed the Public of their money and sent us real explorers and Discovers of God's Clean Wealth in Mother Earth to the Poorhouse—politely its called Pioneer Home there are 109 men like me once Fearless Energetic taking their life in their own hand, braving the Hellish unknown Wilderness Discovering clean wealth but unable to get real financial aid to develop our prospectors claim with paying mines—now old, Fieble tottering shadows waiting for their last breath—to go beyond the needs of strife for life, nevertheless I still am physically strong only me leg broke I hope to get back to my Discovery in home sombody may cause to get me mining machinery on mine and my now late son Darwin's discovery and develop our ground. I surely will give up the Lion Share to anybody that could or would set me agood side Gold Dredge to wok up in our Mt. McKinley Region and take out some $25,000,000 worth of gold and platinum from out of 1200 acres of well approven mining ground, no joke."

MATTEAWAN OVERCROWDED.

State Insane Asylum's New Annex Won't Be Completed This Year.

BEACON, N. Y., April 18.—The State Asylum for Criminal Insane in Matteawan will have to remain congested with inmates for another year, as the new annex under construction will not be ready until early next year.

Figures obtained today show that the institution, to which persons adjudged insane before trial for felonies and misdemeanors are committed, is 50 per cent. overcrowded. It has accommodations for 657 prisoners, but has to handle 988, or 331 more than the State provided facilities for.

CIRCUS FOLK MOURN 'BEST-LIKED FREAK'

SHE NEVER COMPLAINED

Giant, 'Fat Lady' and 'Leopard Girl' Pay Last Respects to the Bearded Woman of Siam.

The "strange people" wept as the body of Krao Farini, the "bearded lady," "missing link" and "ape-woman" of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, was carried from the undertaking establishment of Jacob Herrlich & Sons, 332 East Eighty-sixth Street, yesterday afternoon to be buried in Saint Michael's Cemetery, Astoria. Krao had died of influenza on Friday.

"If any one has gone to heaven that woman has," said Carrie Holt, fat lady who had known Krao in the side show for eight years. Miss Londy, towering up to seven feet, said Krao had "the best disposition I have ever known," and Jim Tarver, the "Texas giant," who had to bring his own chair, declared that Krao, during the fifteen years he had known her, had never once uttered a complaint.

Victoria Anderson, "leopard girl" with the spotted hair and skin, cried a bit as she looked at Krao for the last time, and so did Mrs. Jacob Zeiler, who was Krao's companion for years. Krao was known as "the best-liked of freaks" and "the peacemaker of the side show," and the affection she inspired was evident at the services.

Krao was said to have come from the jungles of Siam. She was small and dark, with jet black hair and a beard that fell to her waist. From between her shoulder blades there sprouted a thick growth of hair something like a horse's mane.

The Rev. Augustus Steimle of the Church of the Advent spoke of Krao's spiritual qualities. She was master of several tongues, he said, and knew the literature of many peoples.

Krao started her American career in a dime museum in Philadelphia back in the '80s. Before that she had been a protégé of Farini, an English circus promoter whose name she eventually adopted. For years she traveled with Barnum & Bailey, and when in New York she always went to stay with Mrs. Zeller at 320 East Ninetieth Street. When called upon to travel through city streets she always wore a veil, for she was in terror of curiosity whisp away from the "big top."

Friends at the funeral services said that sensitiveness to "papers" led Krao to request cremation, but owing to a health regulation that prohibits incineration except when the request is in writing, the Herrlich establishment had to bury the body.

The bier was surrounded with great sheaves of lilies and roses. "Lead Kindly Light," "Abide With Me" and "Jerusalem the Golden" were the hymns that were played.

FRANK BACH'S HOME, IN PURCHASE, BURNS

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 18.—The large country house of Frank Bach of New York, called Little Meadow Farm, at Purchase, five miles from White Plains, was destroyed by fire late last night, entailing a loss of more than $35,000. Sparks were carried by a high west wind to the roof of one of the larger stables of E. E. Smathers, horseman, half a mile away. This building, which was filled with hay, was also destroyed.

Firemen from Harrison, Rye, Port Chester and several other towns fought the flames until 4 o'clock this morning, but owing to the shortage of water, they were unable to save anything.

Valuable paintings and bric-a-brac in the home of Mr. Bach, who is interested in the tobacco industry, went up in flames. At the time the fire started, Mr. and Mrs. Bach were dining with friends in Manhattan. The chauffeur of a passing automobile discovered the roof of the house was on fire and notified Stanley Kurcharaike the gardener.

In the house at the time were a cook, nurse and maid and the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bach. The gardener rushed to the second floor and aided the nurse in carrying out the child. The other servants were unable to save anything, not even their clothing or money, so rapidly did the fire spread. Employes from the country homes of E. Collins, owner of Brook Farm, William A. Read Jr., and other neighbors hurried to the Bach place and aided the firemen. According to the gardener the fire was probably started by a defective electric light wire. Only two big chimneys and the stone pilars of the porch were left standing.

COX SAYS HYPOCRISY RULES IN POLITICS

Glad He's Out of It, Ex-Governor Asserts — Calls This an Era of Intellectual Dishonesty.

SEES HARM IN PROHIBITION

James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio and Democratic candidate for President in 1920, in an interview last night at the Hotel St. Regis, said he was out of politics for good.

"I think the man who is out of public life is a most fortunate person," he said, "for the reason that it is an era of intellectual dishonesty and hypocrisy.

"I spent two days—forty-eight hours—on a boat coming up from Miami, and when I arrive in New York and pick up the newspapers, what is the first thing I see? The first pages are filled with the debate between the wets and the drys in Washington, one side contending that the morality of the country ought to be conserved by the drys, and the wets insisting that we have had an increase of crime and conditions bordering on disruption of law because of prohibition.

"Aside from that controversy in Washington, you see two or three fiddlers in the Senate playing to the racial, some playing for the Italian vote, some hoping to gather in the German vote and others exhorting in an effort to capture the Slavic vote.

"Not long ago the newspapers were filled with details of the case of the Countess of Cathcart—a case that has made the whole world laugh at us."

Mr. Cox said that if nations put a guard at their frontiers to establish rules of morality for aliens crossing their borders, one might expect next an attempt to regulate the way men and women had their hair cut.

'What a nation of hypocrites!" he remarked.

Asked if he had any solution to offer for the prohibition problem, Mr. Cox said:

"There shouldn't be any thing done until it is perfectly obvious what we should do. I am not sure that the solution is yet apparent. But something has got to be done. I am sure about that. The official life of the country is being corrupted. Whether you are wet or dry, you have got to admit there has never been such a corruption fund as has grown up under prohibition."

Mr. Cox expressed contempt for the employer who publicly described the benefits to his employes from prohibition but was a habitual violator of the Volstead act. He expressed the belief that prohibition was working great harm to members of the professional classes.

"The flask has become the symbol of the devil," he said, "and nowadays, when a young woman wishes to give a present to a young man she often picks a pocket flask."

Mr. Cox said he had begun to enjoy life in the fullest sense since he quit public office and devoted himself to his newspapers. He explained that he was glad to have made the Democratic Presidential race in 1920, because he was privileged to "take up the banner" that had been carried through the stress of war by Woodrow Wilson.

"There is nothing that the President of the United States could say on any conceivable subject right now that would attract one-hundredth part of the attention that baseball results attract," he said.

Mr. Cox declared he had read the letters of Colonel E. M. House, but declined to give his opinion of them, except to suggest:

He described the situation in Florida as "a readjustment" rather than a "reaction" and that the readjustment had been awaited hopefully by many who believed in the future of Florida.

The speculative element which went to Florida and bought town plots with first payments which they were unable to continue, he said, have now about disappeared.

"We enjoyed our evening in the second balcony," said Mr. Cox. "The people up there seemed to be the very best."

AMERICAN DYES SHOW GAIN IN PRODUCTION

Output of 86,000,000 Pounds in 1925 an Increase of 25 Per Cent. Over 1924.

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—An approximate 25 per cent. increase in American dye production in 1925 over 1924 was revealed today in preliminary figures compiled by the Federal Tariff Commission.

Production totaled 86,000,000 pounds, valued at $80,000,000, compared with 72,000,000 pounds, valued at $96,000,000 in 1924.

The increase was due largely to greater activity in the domestic textile industry and improvement in the export trade in indigo and sulphur black dyes.

Outstanding features of the year, the commission said, were continued recessions in dye prices due largely to severe competition among domestic manufacturers, and conspicuous progress in manufacture of fast dyes, many such dyes being produced in 1925 for the first time in the United States.

Dye imports showed increases of 75 per cent. in quantity and 65 per cent. in value, while dye exports increased 64 per cent. in quantity and 19 per cent. in value over those of 1924.

MANY SEEK SUMMER COURSE

Fifty-five Apply to Princeton School of Geology.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 18.—Fifty-five under graduates, graduate students, instructors and professors in seventeen universities have made application for the Princeton Summer School of Geology, Professor Richard M. Field, director of the school said today. So exceptional was the quality of the applicants, he said, that the lists would be closed May 1, when the final selection of the twenty men who would travel 12,000 miles in a Pullman car to study at first hand American geology would be made.

Applications have been received from the following institutions: Arizona University, Cambridge University, England; Brown University, Harvard, Hobart College, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Michigan University, Middlebury College, Northwestern University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Rutgers College, University of Stockholm, Sweden; Teachers School of Science, Boston, Wesleyan College, and Yale.

Two distinguished foreign geologists will accompany the party as guests of the school, thus adding research to undergraduate and graduate instruction which is the principal function of the trip. They are Dr. O. T. Nicholas, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and tutor in geology, and Dr. A. H. Westergaard of the Geological Survey of Sweden.

The field studies this year will be conducted in Northern New York, Vermont, Central Pennsylvania and perhaps in the Southern Appalachians.

F. Trubee Davison, Chairman of the National Crime Commission, announced yesterday the organization of a special committee on the medical aspects of crime, selected by Mrs. Richard Derby, daughter of the late Theodore Roosevelt. The committee will study all matters dealing with the physical and mental condition of criminals in relation to the causes of crime. The committee consists of:

RAY LYMAN WILBUR, President Leland Stanford Junior University, Cal.

ELON H. HOOKER of New York, President of the Hooker Electric Company.

Mrs. Derby, who will be Chairman of the medical subcommittee, gave out the following statement in regard to its aims and purposes:

"I believe that the work of the subcommittee on the medical aspects of crime is to collect and make available the latest information as to the relationship between disease and crime.

"There must be an increasing spirit of cooperation between the members of the legal and the medical profession. In the States where such cooperation already exists the Judge and the Prosecutor are working with the psychiatric expert for a wise solution of the problems which are of equal interest to both groups in their fundamental relation to the welfare of the community. The anticipation of crime must be our goal."

LAVA RIVER ENGULFS HAWAIIAN VILLAGE

Mauna Loa has been an awe inspiring sight since it began disgorging flaming masses a week ago, after a period of five years of inactivity. The mountain reaches 14,675 feet into the air and is perpetually capped with snow. It is the highest active volcano in the world. It is part of Hawaii National Park, created by Congress in 1919.

The crater is called Mokuaweoweo. In 1880-81 Mauna Loa belched forth a great flow of lava that came to a stop within a scant half mile of this city. In 1885 the lava came within five miles of here. While many of the previous flows have been preceded by tidal waves none has accompanied the recent phenomenon.

As part of the outburst huge boulders crashed down the mountainside. Guards have been stationed at strategic points to warn residents of danger.

HONOLULU, T. H., April 18 (AP).—Hoopuloa was one of the few typically Hawaiian villages remaining in the islands. It comprised a cluster of from ten to fifteen homes of the old Hawaiian style, numbering a population of about 100 persons.

The World's Most Active Volcano.

Mauna Loa, or "big mountain," is one of the three celebrated Hawaiian volcanos set aside as national parks by Congress for protection and development as national spectacles. The others are Kilauea and Haleakala.

Mauna Loa has poured forth more lava during the last century than any other volcano on the globe.

Around its base is a gorgeous tropical forest, including mahogany groves, dense growths of tree ferns rising to a height of 40 feet, and green meadows. Sandalwood, extinct almost everywhere else, grows here luxuriantly.

MAKES SENSE OF DUTY KEY TO SOCIAL UPLIFT

Personal responsibility and its relation to social betterment were discussed yesterday by Alfred W. Martin at the services of the Society for Ethical Culture, Central Park West and Sixty-second Street. In part, he said:

"The mother may not be able to supplant the shallow standards that bewitch her daughters, but she can pitch the key of her own life so high as to rob those standards of their seductive witchery. The father may not be able to save his boy from the temptations of a great city, but he can set a personal example of temperance and purity which that boy is much more likely to copy from his father than from any other man in town.

"Do you bewail the fact that such enormous sums are being spent on dinners and dress? Then see to it that your own table is above reproach, and your own dress beyond criticism. Do you deplore the fact that there is in this country an unparalleled passion for wealth? Then see to it that your own soul is unsullied by this stain. Do you complain that organized greed has gone so far that it can evade the law and buy legislation to achieve its iniquitous ends?

"Then permit me to remind you that the war against dishonesty will have to be carried beyond the Supreme Court of the United States to that of the private conscience before we can look for a beginning of the remedy for that evil."

Break Ground for Glendale Church.

Ground was broken for the new Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, at Fosdick and Cooper Avenues, Glendale, Queens, yesterday by the pastor of the church, the Rev. F. W. Abel, in the presence of a small crowd of parishioners. The new building will seat 300 and will have additional accommodations for Sunday school and social functions. It will cost about $35,000, exclusive of the interior furnishings.

SUNSHINE DRAWS THRONGS TO SHORE

CROWDS AT OTHER RESORTS

A warm sun drew several hundred thousand persons to the various resorts in and around the city yesterday, but a cool wind made itself affective as the sun dropped on the horizon and sent the visitors home early.

The Coney Island crowd was estimated at 200,000. All concessions and amusements were in full swing and the consumption of "hot dogs" was large. About fifteen of those hardy persons known as the "Icebergs" went bathing at the foot of West Tenth Street while crowds stood on the shore to watch. The police had a quiet time. Not a single lost child was reported.

Early in the morning, however, Inspector Byron Sackett and a squad of men made the first bungalow raid of the season and arrested sixteen men in a bungalow at 2 F West End Avenue, Manhattan Beach, and gave summonses to eight young women. Neighbors had complained of the noise made by the party. The men were fined $2 each in the Coney Island Court. The summonses handed to the young women are returnable in the same court today.

The real estate agents were busy at Coney Island, and at the Rockaways, where more than 100,000 visitors spent the day, the real estate trade was also active. Only a few of the visitors ventured into the surf.

The Station Master's office at the Pennsylvania Station reported that the Atlantic City and Asbury Park traffic on the railroad had been heavy and that the Long Island traffic, particularly to the Rockaways and Long Beach, had been a good deal above normal for a Sunday in April.

MANNING CONDEMNS TREATY WITH TURKS

CALLS ANGORA 'ANTI-HUMAN'

Bishop William T. Manning of the Episcopal Diocese of New York made public last night his answer to a letter written to him April 5 by Senator William E. Borah, in which the Senator rebuked Bishop Manning and other Bishops of the Episcopal Church for signing a protest against ratification of the Lausanne treaty with Turkey.

Bishop Manning's letter follows:

Synod House,
New York, April 17, 1926.

Hon. William E. Borah, The Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

My dear Senator Borah: I thank you for the consideration which you have given to the protest against the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty signed by 110 Bishops of the Episcopal Church.

In some respects, however, your reply shows a strange misapprehension of the grounds upon which our protest is based. Your letter implies that we are opposing this treaty because the Turks do not profess the Christian faith. You cannot, I think, seriously suppose that this is our position. You say that "to refuse friendly relations with all peoples who reject Christianity is unthinkable." With this statement we, of course, agree.

Alleges Brutal Conduct.

As you will see if you reread our protest, we oppose ratification of this treaty not because the Turks are non-Christian in faith but because of their brutal, inhuman and anti-Christian conduct toward those to whom we have given solemn pledges and whom, if this treaty is ratified, we shall basely desert.

A Government which has murdered or expelled from their ancestral homes over 4,000,000 helpless people and is still continuing these outrages; which has converted over 3,000 churches into stables, barracks and houses of prostitution, and which is now holding in revolting slavery over 100,000 Christian women and girls in Turkish harems is an anti-Christian Government, and it is in this sense that we use the term.

We favor friendly relations with all nations—both Christian and non-Christian—but we do not favor a treaty which condones brutal and bestial acts and policies such as those which Turkey has not only been guilty of in the past but is committing in the present, as shown by the report made by the representatives of the League of Nations in November, 1925, which is printed with our protest.

Quotes Root on Recognition.

To ratify this treaty would be to resume friendly relations with the present Turkish Government on the basis of the present policy and attitude of that Government. It is the official relation of our own Government to another Government which we are considering, and what Mr. Elihu Root said recently in another connection is much in point here:

"The recognition of one Government by another is not a mere courtesy. It is an act having a definite and specific meaning, and it involves an acceptance by the recognizing Government of the principles, purposes and avowed intentions of the recognized Government as being in conformity with the rules which govern the conduct of civilized nations toward each other."

You state that our missionaries and business interests want the treaty and that their arguments seem to you conclusive.

The policy of the United States as to any particular country is not to be determined pursuant to the opinions of Americans living in that country, but is to be determined from the point of view of right and justice and of the honor and interests of the United States.

Only Eleven Mission Schools Left.

And upon examination we find that the treaty does not even mention the missionaries; that the mission schools in Turkey have been reduced from 1,049 to eleven, and their attendance from 50,000 to about 2,500, and that the teaching of religion is forbidden in these schools. What room does this leave for the work of Christian missionaries? Senator King, who visited Turkey last Summer, and Dr. Post, who after 21 years' service as medical missionary and relief worker in Turkey, returned home last Summer, testify that the remnants of the American mission schools have been Turkified; that they are under the immediate control and direction of the Kemalist Government, as if they were supported or subsidized by that Government, and that they are made into instruments for the teaching of what the Turks regard as civilization.

The position taken by the missionaries to whom you refer is a sadly disappointing one to those who know the situation intimately. Our three former Ambassadors to Turkey—Mr. Straus, Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Elkus—are all of them opposed to this treaty. It is unfortunately possible for some missionaries to be more interested in the preserevation of the mortar and bricks of the mission buildings than in the purposes for which they were sent into Turkey; but if this is their position, then I must declare that they are missionaries in name only.

Calls It a Surrender.

I have before me a circular letter, which has apparently the approval of the Department of State, by a missionary advocate of the treaty. This Christian missionary intimates that if we should reject this treaty the gentlemanly Turks will massacre the remaining 100,000 Armenians in Turkey. That argument reveals, in its horrible nakedness, the true character of the Turk. I say to you, sir, that you are advocating friendly relations not only with an anti-Christian Government but with an anti-human Government. I care not what opinion a few business people and missionaries of the type described by you hold of this treaty, but I hold to the deliberate opinion that the Lausanne Treaty, in its present form, is a base surrender of American rights to a redhanded military despotism and a cowardly betrayal of Christian Armenia.

The interests of Robert College and Constantinople College are no doubt important; but the principles of right and justice are infinitely more important. Better a thousand times that these colleges should disappear than that the United States should enter into a shameful and unrighteous treaty.

You say that by entering into relations with the Turks through this treaty we shall be "establishing the only real foundation for peace." I disagree with you. The only real foundation for peace is justice and righteousness. Peace cannot be established by disregarding our pledges and abandoning to their fate a brave and helpless people.

You mention the use of force and the employment of an army and a navy, only to say that you presume I am not in favor of such use. Suggestion as to the use of force has been made before in this connection, but it has only been made by those who, like yourself, favor this treaty, and sometimes with the hope that the idea of using force may be attributed to the opponents of the treaty. It certainly cannot be attributed to my fellow bishops and myself, for we have never suggested or considered it.

We are not advocating the use of force or the setting up of an Armenian "home" within the bounds of Turkey. We recall the sufferings of the Armenians, the military services rendered by them to the common cause and the solemn pledges made to them by two Presidents of the United States and we insist that in any treaty with Turkey the Armenian rights, as defined by the arbitration of President Wilson and as endorsed and reaffirmed by President Harding, even on the eve of the Lausanne Conference, shall be preserved, so that they may be fulfilled, in due time, through diplomatic negotiations. In other words, we advocate the performance of our moral obligation to Armenia to the full extent of our opportunity.

You contend that although this treaty is far from satisfactory it is the "best" we can secure at this time and is better than no treaty at all. I dissent from this. No treaty at all is better than one which disregards our sacred obligations and I do not admit that this treaty is the best that we can secure at this time. I believe that if this treaty is rejected, President Coolidge will secure a better and an American treaty, not one dictated by the other contracting party and copied in substance from one made by other powers. The considerations which led the allied powers to make their treaties with Turkey do not exist in our case.

Discounts Trade Advantages.

No "practical" considerations can justify our ratifying a treaty such as this one, and even the material advantages which it is supposed we shall secure through it are as doubtful as those which some are now urging as a reason for our entering into relations with the Russian Soviet Government. Our commercial interest in Turkey is insignificant. Our normal exports to that country amount only from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 annually. As to that, we require only equality of opportunity. This equality, however, the proposed treaty expressly denies.

We advocate the rejection of the Lausanne Treaty, or its ratification, subject to the necessary reservations.

If this treaty is ratified in its present form, we not only condone the past, but we accept the present and we give up the future. We know that at this time the Kemalist policy is a policy of abominable cruelty, one of utter disregard of the most elementary human rights and of treaty obligations. And for the future, we know that the ratification of this treaty will confirm the existing policy of the present Turkish Government, that it will definitely show to Kemal as well as to the Armenians that our promises were written in water and that we are willing forever to abandon them. Such an abandonment would be the end of our influence, moral or other.

Upholds Moral Influence.

The moral influence of America in bringing about better conditions throughout the world in general and in Turkey in particular, an influence in which you and I believe, will not be lost, as you fear, by the rejection of this treaty. On the contrary, it will be immeasurably heightened and strengthened.

I know how powerful are the influences which are working for the ratification of this treaty, but I have good hope that it will be rejected, or very greatly changed, and whatever the issue, I am thankful that so large a number of our Bishops have lifted up their voices in open protest against it and in behalf of those heroic and devoted people now under the power of the Turk, whose only human hope lies in our great country remembering its obligations.

With much respect, I am sincerely yours, WILLIAM T. MANNING.

Charles Evans Hughes will serve as Chairman of a committee of New York financiers, business and professional leaders taking part in a national movement to raise $1,000,000 as an endowment fund for the promotion of "American history and history in America." In announcing Mr. Hughes's acceptance, Professor Solon J. Stuart F. Bloom Wins Divorce.

NYACK, N. Y., April 18.—Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins has granted an absolute divorce to Stuart F. Bloom of Ossining from Mrs. Lilia Bloom. The only witness was Dr. Norman R. Bloom, the plaintiff's brother, who testified that Mrs. Bloom had told him that her child's father was not her husband, and had admitted that she lived with John Bretty of North Tarrytown, where, according to Dr. Bloom, she was known as Mrs. Bretty. Mr. Bloom said he had not lived with his wife since 1920.

DIG UP CITY BY DEAD SEA.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 18 (AP).—Excavation work in the buried City of Kirjath Sepher, thirty miles west of the Dead Sea, has been started by the Archaeological Expedition led by Dr. Melvin G. Kyle, President of the Xenia Theological Seminary, St. Louis.

Progress of the expedition, which seeks ancient records in the buried city further to verify the Bible as a trustworthy historical work, was announced yesterday by Dr. Robert Kerr, acting Head of the seminary.

Buried walls have been unearthed and high points, where temples of worship probably stood, have been located at the site of the city, which flourished in 1500 B. C.

The expedition is under the joint auspices of the St. Louis Seminary and the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem.

Anderson Appeal Negatived.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 18 (AP).—An appeal to the Troy Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session here, by William H. Anderson, former Superintendent of the State Anti-Saloon League, requesting a hearing on charges brought by him against the League for alleged fraud was negatived yesterday by adoption of a resolution of confidence in the League.

STRYKER DEFENDS WEBB-LOOMIS BILL

State Medical Society Counsel Says Measure Was Framed to Abolish Quackery.

REPLIES TO UNTERMYER

Purpose of Grievance Committee Is to Give Physicians Self-Government, He Declares.

In answer to attempts by opponents to discredit the Webb-Loomis bill, pending in the Legislature, Lloyd Paul Stryker, counsel for the State Medical Society, issued a statement yesterday declaring that the bill was designed to improve the practice of medicine and abolish quackery. Mr. Stryker replied to criticism by Samuel Untermyer, who objected to the creation of a Grievance Committee to supervise physicians, as provided by the bill.

"The purpose of creating the Grievance Committee is to make it possible for the medical profession to have self-government," Mr. Stryker said. "A careful examination and analysis of the provisions relative to the Grievance Committee will disclose that it consists of ten licensed physicians, seven of whom are appointed by the Board of Regents on nominations made by the Medical Society of the State of New York, the New York State Homeopathic Society and the New York State Osteopathic Society and three members appointed by the Board of Regents at large.

"To protect a physician on any hearings before the Grievance Committee provision is made that at least one member of the sub-committee that may be hearing the charges must be a member of the same school of medicine as the physician against whom the charges are being made."

Mr. Stryker said the bill gave further protection to a physician against whom charges were made by giving him the right of appeal to the Board of Regents and to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

He declared also that the bill had been prepared with great care after conferences of a committee of physicians appointed by the President of the State Medical Society, the State Health Department, the State Department of Education and the Attorney General's office.

"The bill is in many respects an advance in the regulation of the practice of medicine," he added. "It protects the public health by safeguarding our citizens from the dangers of the unlicensed quack and charlatan."

D. A. R. CONGRESS WILL OPEN TODAY

Coolidge and Others Will Welcome Delegates From Every State This Evening.

BUILDING FUND IS GAINING

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Daughters of the American Revolution, representing every State in the Union, Hawaii and the Philippines, will vote for a new President General, seven Vice Presidents and a Board of Control at the thirty-fifth Continental Congress of the national society, which will open here tomorrow.

There is great interest among the delegates in the new building, Constitution Hall, authorized by the last Congress. It is to cost $1,825,000, and its seating capacity will meet the demands of future congresses for many years.

President Coolidge, the French Ambassador, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and Senator Reed of Pennsylvania are on the program for addresses tomorrow evening. Marie Tiffany of the Metropolitan Opera Company will sing and the United States Marine Band will give a concert.

Mrs. Coolidge, Mme. Bérenger and other prominent guests will occupy places on the stage or in a reserved box. The President and Mrs. Coolidge will receive the entire congress at the White House Wednesday afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon will be given over to State meetings and conferences, and on Tuesday evening there will be a reception to the Daughters by the President General and national officers in Continental Memorial Hall.

Miss Janet Richards, a charter member of the society, will give a brief review of the work of the organization on Friday evening, and Vice President Dawes and the Secretary of Agriculture also will speak.

The fact that $300,000 has been pledged for the new building since last April, and that the plan of floating bonds offered by the Treasurer General, Mrs. Alfred J. Brousseau, is finding favor with the majority of delegates already assembled, apparently assures the success of the building program. Mrs. Brousseau, as a result of her work, has become a formidable figure among the candidates from whom will be chosen a successor to Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, who will retire as President on Saturday after a term of three years.

Under the revised Constitution no President General is eligible to succeed herself. It is, however, entirely within the law to give a second or even a third term to an ex-President General, and in the last twenty-four hours a rumor has been heard that Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey of Independence, Kan., a former President may be called again to fill its highest office. Mrs. Guernsey has been in Washington nearly a week in touch with the district leaders as well as national officers.

Mrs. Wallace Hanger, a native Washingtonian, who opposed Mrs. Cook in a closely contested campaign three years ago, has declined to seek election this year, and there are reports that she will throw her influence to Mrs. Brousseau. Mrs. Livingston R. Schuyler of New York, a former President of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Eli A. Helmick of the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey are avowed supporters of Mrs. Brousseau.

Mrs. Charles White Nash of Albany, State Regent of New York and Chairman of the Magazine Committee, has been regarded as one of the strongest candidates.

NEW LONG DISTANCE OFFICE.

Yonkers Telephone Facilities Increased to Meet Growing Demand.

For the first time since telephones were used in Yonkers a long-distance department was established in the city yesterday with six operators on duty.

Heretofore the long-distance calls to and from Yonkers were handled by the company's office in White Plains, but the out-of-town traffic has grown to such an extent in Yonkers under the management of Fred C. Kurz, local agent and manager of the two Yonkers exchanges, that the company decided to set up a long-distance department for the accommodation of its 15,000 subscribers.

SAYS BRITISH LABOR WILL BACK MINERS

Henderson Holds Baldwin Will Make Sad Mistake to Rely on Unions' Neutrality.

NATIONAL PAY BASIS ISSUE

LONDON, April 18 (F).—Events in the coming fortnight will decide whether there will be peace or war in the British coal industry. The position, although less serious, is similar to that of last July when another crisis was averted only when the Government provided a state subsidy to enable the mine owners to pay wages which the owners contended were not justified by the economic condition of the industry.

This subsidy, which cost the country £20,000,000, will come to an end on April 30, and the mine owners are already posting notices terminating the existing wage agreements on May 1.

The miners have refused to consent to any reduction whatever; therefore, either a strike or a lock-out seems inevitable unless a settlement can be adjusted within the next fortnight.

The commission's report has been accepted by the Government and the owners, but the miners, although acquiescing in its main recommendations, so far as proposals for a reorganization of the industry are concerned, take exception to the owners' interpretation of its [illegible] clauses.

The mine owners contend that without a subsidy they cannot pay the existing scale of wages. The view of the Government and the community generally is that the miners ought to agree to some reduction pending reorganization, which, it is hoped, will restore the industry to a solvent condition.

Although the miners have not entirely closed the door to negotiations, they argue that it is up to the Government and country to see that there shall be no reduction in the miners' standard of living.

Arthur Henderson, labor leader, declares that if the Government is relying upon the unwillingness of the trades union movement to assist the miners in their fight for a wage settlement on a national basis, it is making a disastrous mistake.

The Government today is in a much better position than when in July last it was caught without any policy, and it is believed that when Premier Baldwin sees the mine owners next Tuesday he will be prepared with plans for helping the disputants to agree.

All that is yet known is that the Government is prepared to grant temporary financial assistance to bridge the gap between the cessation of the subsidy and the settling down of the industry under new conditions.

It is believed that the Prime Minister may propose some form of State loan to facilitate the amalgamation of the mines as proposed by the commission.

The first task, however, is to secure an agreement on the wages question, and present indications are that the owners will agree to negotiate wages on a national basis, provided the miners will be content with a lower minimum percentage.

CROSS ICE TO FIND FLIER.

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., April 18 (F).—A relief party left Cross Village early today with a dog team for St. James, Beaver Island, to learn why Captain J. F. Donnellan of Chicago, an airplane pilot, had not returned from his flight to the island on Thursday.

Shore residents believe the trip across the ice, a distance of eighteen miles, which is extremely treacherous at this season, would take five to eight hours.

The party had not returned to the mainland early tonight and there was a probability that nothing would be heard from them until tomorrow morning.

When Lem Lemblant "needs some printing done"

IT'S an easy matter for Lem Lemblant who runs the General Feed and Hay store in Ryeville. When he "needs some printing done," he simply 'phones Joe of the Ryeville Weekly Clarion and Job Printing Office. That's all there is to it.

But suppose Lem Lemblant wanted a twenty-four sheet poster, or a book, or a direct-mail campaign or more involved printed forms, and needed counsel and service from his printer—?

Joe might be willing to try, but he simply couldn't deliver. His meager equipment and limited ability couldn't meet the demands. Lem would have to go to the city.

The difference between large cities and average-sized towns is a difference of relative completeness of the division of labor. In the world's largest cities, elaborate divisions appear even within a single industry.

In New York City, the Printing Centre of the World, for example, are complete facilities—equipment and experience—to print anything that is printable. Regardless of what the buyer of printing seeks, some New York printer can supply it—in some cases dozens of New York printers, in many cases, hundreds.

There is the confusion! Whom should the buyer of printing consult in order to get the kind of printing he wants, when he wants it and how he wants it?

The members of New York Employing Printers Association and Allied Industries not only want you to know the completeness of New York's printing resources, but they want to help you select capable printers judiciously and quickly. So they have prepared a classified directory of Association members showing the types of work each is best equipped to produce. If you have not already received a copy of this helpful directory, by all means ask for one on your letterhead.

This is the tenth of a series of messages in which you, a user of printing, are made better acquainted with the New York City printer and his tremendous capacity to serve you.

comes this interesting discussion of

WALL STREET

—THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Business Is Business

"Big Business"—

Some Wall Street Impressions Ridiculous—

Good Information In Wall Street Journal—

Wall Street Needs Press Agent—

Discuss Intelligently Before Cussing—

The question is being asked frequently as to whether Hoosiers are not too conservative and cautious for their own good and for the development of their state. Our people are not well informed on business conditions and on how so called "big business" is operated. So-called "big business" is frowned upon. Wall Street is too frequently considered a den of crap shooters and The Wall Street Journal a clever publication issued for the purpose of covering up the crooked financial dealings of interests bent upon fleecing the public. This opinion probably is held by many persons who have never even seen a copy of The Wall Street Journal. For the good of our state we wish that 100,000 Indiana families could serve The Wall Street Journal with their ham and eggs at breakfast for a solid year. We believe this would have a wholesome effect on the thinking of Indiana people.

Now what we have just said about Indiana people and Wall Street does not reflect unnecessarily on the people of Indiana alone. They are no different from the rank and file of American citizens. Many untrue statements concerning Wall Street and its institutions have been circulated by demagogues of the political type, and Wall Street has been entirely too busy with its own problems to take the time to endeavor to correct misleading and untrue impressions. But the time has come when Indiana institutions should endeavor to correct ridiculous impressions that exist in the mind of the so-called man in the street.

We believe that every high school in Indiana should be a subscriber to The Wall Street Journal. Not only is that publication a marvel in editorial style and accuracy, but it is a true mirror of real American business life. Its editorial comment is so sane and convincing as to become a national guide for proper economic thought. Its columns reflect daily the progress and failure of business. To read it carefully provides the basis for a liberal education in the worth-while things of the present day. Moreover, The Wall Street Journal probably has cleaner and saner views on the present-day stage than any other publication in New York. It has the faculty of taking a confusing international question and by tearing it in parts before your eyes of revealing the true meaning of international events.

Quite recently The Wall Street Journal published an editorial concerning an Indiana man, who is now much in the public eye. It was suggested that this editorial should have state-wide publicity, but men who know the tendency of public thought shook their heads sorrowfully, and said it would not be advisable to quote The Wall Street Journal in this part of the United States as the man mentioned might immediately be considered by thousands of ignorant men and women as a stock gambler, wearing checked pants, white vest and with a three carat diamond sparkling in his cravat. And the sorrowful part of that advice is that it was sound and applicable not only to Indiana, but to most of the United States. Our cartoonists have created that impression and it still sticks. Wall Street needs a press agent who can reach the common people and the common people need enough intelligence to try to learn the truth.

Now it is not our intention to give Wall Street and all that belongs to it a coat of white wash. The "street" probably has just as many evils to correct as the remainder of the United States but probably not any more. We do contend that the Middle Western farmer who knows more about raising corn, cattle and hogs than Wall Street will ever know should try to cut his teeth when it comes to knowing more about business, economics and financial affairs. While the farmer and small business man is cussing Wall Street for all of the fifty-seven brands of business and financial hell that besets us in this rather well-to-do country of ours, there are thousands of men on Wall Street who are conscientiously trying to understand the problems of the farmer and business man in other parts of the country. And if Wall Street is trying to do that, she is at least more intelligent and helpful than the man who is shouting about something he knows nothing about.

O'CONNELL SAYS RICH LOSE THEIR FAITH

PRAISE FOR PROTESTANTS

Wealth Does Not Turn Their Hearts or Heads, He Says, Referring to Their Charity.

BOSTON, Mass., April 18.—Declaring that he had ceased to wish that Catholic people would become wealthy because he had seen that in many instances prosperity brought to them only silly pride, vanity and selfishness, which caused them to lose touch with the plain people, Cardinal O'Connell, in an address to the St. Vincent de Paul Society here this morning, said that, on the other hand, Protestant people, while perhaps lacking in external demonstrations of religion, are not affected in this manner by wealth, but have become wonderfully charitable and surely would receive God's blessing.

The address was delivered at the quarterly communion breakfast of the society, which is the principal charity dispensing agency of Catholic laymen.

"I used to think, oh, some time ago," the Cardinal said, "that it would be a fine thing to help along our Catholic people to become materially very well to do, prosperous. I have given it up. You lose them when they do. 'I do not know why it should be so, but it is so. I won't say in every single case. That is not true. There are noble men and women Catholics who have become enormously wealthy and who live simple, beautiful lives. They live well, as their fathers and mothers lived, and they live to do things for all fine causes.

Says Poverty Is Good for the Soul.

"I wish it were not so; I wish I had not to say it; but it is the common sentiment of all of us who know, that some of the Catholics had much better have remained poor than to have acquired large fortunes; much better for their own lives, for their prospects of heaven; better for their own characters; because so often we see the results of a sudden attainment of wealth that ends in the silliest kind of vanity and pride. I shan't mince words.

"The reason is they are not ready for this great wealth. When they get it they do not know how to use it, or do anything with it, and they become closed up like clams in a shell, just perfectly self-satisfied. They live in the interior of the shell of vanity which they have woven around them and you can't teach them or tell them anything.

"They have lost touch with the world, with real life; and the cause of it is their silly vanity because they have a few million dollars. That is very often the case, and I am very sorry to say that. I do not know what the averages are in this matter, but it is worth studying.

"Somebody ought to take up the problem, find out what proportion of our people get suddenly rich and lose their heads and hearts, and compare it with the others who are not of the faith, because what I see all around me is that the Protestant people of today, if they seem to be lacking in external—what shall I say, demonstrations—of religion, have become wonderfully charitable. If they do not go to church, they give to every worthy cause and do not close themselves up and hold tight to every dollar that is coming to them.

"Now that is true. Remember these non-Catholics who are constantly giving millions of money to great causes, to fine causes, will certainly receive God's blessing. There is no question about that. God will dwell with them in their living charity of which He is the centre and the heart.

"Now don't let us pride ourselves on our Catholicism if we do not do anything to deserve it or merit it. That would be silly. The most wonderful inheritance is the inheritance of the grace which comes with the Catholic Church. It is the most wonderful thing in the world. Don't forget it. To abuse it because you have a few paltry dollars; really, it doesn't speak very much for the training of these people."

Then the Cardinal referred to the term self-made man and declared that in this connection it must be remembered that first of all God made man, and training in the church, the school, the home and all surroundings go to the making of the man.

"I have given up wishing riches for our Catholic people until they are ready to use them right," he continued, "until they mean what they say when they call themselves Catholics. The great body of our Catholic people are noble-hearted and generous to a fault. They oftentimes give more than they can afford to give, though God gives it back to them.

"That is, first of all, the general trait of the ordinary run of Catholic people, the poor. We know the really poor are the ones who have these qualities more than any one else. They know what it is to suffer, to have the world look coldly upon them. They know all these things and it seems to build up their characters for an understanding of life and brings them nearer and nearer to the altar of God where their great, oftentimes only, happiness is."

The Cardinal then took up the middle class, characterizing them as generous-hearted people. He said there are persons who are bent only on getting more and more money, more than they have any use for, more than they can spend on themselves, that they grow less and less generous.

"I want to repeat," he said, "there are many noble-hearted Catholic people. I know a dozen that just live to spend their money on fine and religious purposes. I know that many all over America. I know one of these women who said: 'I know what our blessed Lord said about the rich man.' Her life has been given to disbursing to the finest causes all over the world, to missions and charities, not only in our own place but in far-off places. It is perfectly wonderful, and the happiness that radiates from the faces of these people bespeaks the beautiful peace of their hearts.

"I have given up wishing any riches on Catholics. They will always have enough. There is no question about that. God takes care of His own. He will be there to help them and give strength and ability to do the things that make for success in business."

In the beginning of his address the Cardinal praised the members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society for their character and work. He alluded to the fact that the society is composed of men in many walks of life who are in close touch with the plain people.

"The plain people," he said, "are the backbone of life and really the ones who make things go. We are not Socialists, nor Communists, but just Catholics. If everybody was just the same; if everybody in the whole world had the same amount of money, all would be a pack of lazybones, and nothing would be done."

Referring to the history of some of the great men of the country, Cardinal O'Connell said:

"Take Franklin, for instance, one of our own, an American citizen, a great philosopher. He lived for years in poverty and toil and never had anything except the glory of his own phenomenal mind and the big work that he did for this country.

"And so, our first Presidents, with the exception of Washington, were really poor men. The Adamses were poor in comparison with the even ordinary citizen of the day. The Adamses were really poor and yet they were great men, and they were the ancestors of great men. All America ought to be proud of the Adamses."

Delivering coal on time

Above everything else coal companies must have low cost, dependable delivery service. In spite of winter storms and sleet-covered streets, coal trucks must not falter in their daily rounds.

It is easily understood, then, why Pierce-Arrow trucks have built such an enviable reputation among coal concerns.

For instance, thirteen years ago four Pierce-Arrow trucks entered the service of Christian Feigenspan, a corporation, of Newark, N. J. So faithfully have these veterans performed their work that more Pierce-Arrows have been added constantly until today the fleet numbers 45 Pierce-Arrow trucks. Low costs, long life and dependable service were the deciding factors in the company's selection of trucks.

FREETHINKERS LAUD BURBANK'S CAREER

Society's President Says He Was Too Great a Lover of Man to Be Religious.

OLGA PETROVA PRESENT

Two Daughters of Robert Ingersoll Pay Tribute—Meetings Will Be Held Every Year.

Luther Burbank was praised as "an infidel" and a lover of mankind at a memorial meeting of the Freethinkers' Society of New York, held at the organization's headquarters at 128 West Fifty-eighth Street yesterday.

Two daughters of Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, Mrs. Eva Ingersoll Brown and Mrs. Maude Ingersoll Probasco, were among those who came to pay tribute to Burbank, who was at the time of his death an Honorary Vice President of the Freethinkers' Society. Others present included Olga Petrova, the actress, who read Ingersoll's oration for his dead brother; Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, who spoke in praise of Burbank's career and his philosophy of life, and Joseph Lewis, President of th Freethinkers' Society.

"Burbank was an infidel. He was not religious," said Mr. Lewis. "His name cannot be mentioned in the same breath with that impulse and that conviction which produces religious mania, religious strife, religious hatred, religious prejudice. Religious love is clannish; Christian loves Christian and Jew loves Jew. Burbank loved everybody. He was too human to be religious; he was a humanitarian, a lover of mankind.

"A religious person loves God so vehemently that he has no love left for man. Burbank hated the idea of a powerful God and said, 'The idea that a good God would send people to a burning hell is utterly damnable to me. I don't want to have anything to do with such a God.'

"Luther Burbank was not a religious man; he was a good man. He was a grand man, one of the grandest who ever lived," Mr. Lewis declared.

An observance in memory of Burbank will be held each year by the Freethinkers' Society, Mr. Lewis said. The date of such a meeting will be either the anniversary of Burbank's birth or of his death.

certain parts of our educational institutions and programs. The college or school which accepts the terms of the act in question turns over to an outside agency the control of a section of its curriculum. Detailed and specific regulations circumscribe the general authority of the heads of these schools and colleges. The instructors are furnished by the War Department. High schools are required to give three hours per week and five hours per week are required for the third and fourth years in college. Nor can the student who enters upon the course of training be relieved of his obligation except by regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War. It is a prerequisite for his graduation.

"While the training is voluntary and the decision in the matter rests with the school or college itself, certain financial and social advantages tend to influence that decision in favor of its acceptance. During the years 1924-1925 reserve officers training corps were maintained in 226 educational institutions. Of this number 124 were colleges or universities. Sixty-three were of high school grade. Thirty-nine were essentially military schools. The number of students enlisted was approximately 125,000.

"The avowed design of the curriculum is not only their physical well-being but to make soldiers of them. This purpose is emphasized a: a vital element of the program. Let there be no doubt on this issue. In spite of much talk to the contrary the army regulations are explicit. They declare that the primary object is to provide systematic military training at civil educational institutions for the purpose of qualifying selected students for appointment as reserve officers in the military forces of the United States.

Fears Growth of War Spirit.

"Those who support this measure urge that past experience dictates its wisdom and necessity; that the Reserve Officers Training Corps is a substitute for a large standing army; that the training makes students better men and better citizens; that it creates in them an aversion to war; that it enables them to participate quickly in orderly mass movements.

"Those who oppose it, as I do, contend that it ingrains in the mental and moral structure of our students the conviction that preparedness for war and war itself are normal relations of nations; encourages belief in violence as the final resort in international differences and discourages the efforts now in progress to settle such differences by arbitration.

"It also unconsciously produces in schools and colleges a mental attitude inimical to the ideals of world justice and world peace for which we went into the World War. Nor does our country need such an extraordinary measure. It enjoys the enormous advantage of man power and economic power beyond calculation. If nevertheless, it needs an expansion of its military forces, let this be gained by other means than this act prescribes. In brief, take the War Department out of the public schools of the United States and keep it out."

As soon as Dr. Cadman finished his address Mr. Hammond rose and announced that questions would be answered.

Lieutenant Holton Objects.

At this juncture Lieutenant Holton stood up and held up his hand to attract the attention of the presiding officer. Then Lieutenant Holton said:

"This meeting has become political and I have a right to present my side of this question. The doctor (referring to Dr. Cadman) failed to mention that there are more than 400 colleges to which a young man can go who does not want military training."

Cries of "Boo" and "Put him out!" on one side and "Speak up!" "Let him be heard!" on the other rose throughout the hall.

Mr. Hammond made a motion to the Floria Trumpeters to commence playing and told an assistant to telephone for the police. Lieutenant Holton's voice was drowned out by the music and four ushers advanced on him and tried to catch hold of him. The lieutenant was surrounded by the other officers and the ushers desisted in their efforts.

At the conclusion of the trumpet music Lieutenant Holton again stood up and commenting on an earlier statement of Dr. Cadman, who had said it was often necessary in wartime for a soldier to lie in accordance with army propaganda, said, "You have been doing just that thing all afternoon."

Again the cries of "Throw him out!" rose throughout the hall and Patrolman Carey and the ushers once more advanced toward the officers. This time they caught Colonel Allyn by the arm and succeeded in ejecting him and the other officers. The officers and ushers were followed by about two score persons from the hall, while those inside listened to the conclusion of the meeting. None of the ushers nor officials of the Y. M. C. A. wanted to press any charge against the officers, and Dr. Cadman dismissed the incident by saying that it was not in accordance with the accepted procedure of the Sunday meetings.

"I think it was good fun," he said.

Colonel Allyn's Statement.

Following the disturbance Colonel Allyn issued a statement in which he said:

"Dr. Cadman can do so much good that it is a crying shame that he try to hypnotize ourselves into the notion that we can get along without an adequate defense system which must include military training of officers for the reserve. I am surprised that the Y. M. C. A. should advertise as a conference what is merely a propaganda agency, giving no voice to the opposition. It was obvious that Dr. Cadman failed to answer any questions relating to the subject of his address. Such methods are almost certain to result in protests such as occurred this afternoon."

Speaks for Defense Act.

When the occurrence was reported to the office of the Commanding General of the Second Corps Area at Governors Island, Colonel C. A. Trott, speaking in the absence of Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, who is in Washington, said that the National Defense act of 1920, referred to by Dr. Cadman, expressed the best and most conservative American thought on the subject of preparation for defense. He asserted that leading churchmen of other denominations, including Cardinal Hayes and Bishop Manning, have actively supported both the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the Citizens' Military Training Camps, which provide for the commissioning in the reserve of young men who complete the summer courses at the camps.

"The act is devised to give us complete security against the dangers of war," Colonel Trott said, "to avoid any semblance of militarism or the formation of a military class and to accord with our strong desires for economy. In this act we provide for the smallest regular army which will guarantee our immediate protection and the defense of our foreign possessions. We provide for a National Guard to give the States a control over our emergency forces. Finally, we provide for an organized reserve and for a system of training our citizens so that they can enter the reserves and be somewhat prepared for their emergency tasks. The Regular Army and the National Guard constitute our police force. The organized reserves constitute the material from which we can organize a national posse to support the police during periods of international outlawry."

SPRING LAKE, N. J., April 18.—Henry Nasseh, 47 years old, a chicken farmer, was instantly killed this afternoon when a still on an adjoining property at Glendola, near here, exploded.

"There's a little bit of IRVING BERLIN in nearly every popular song writer, but only IRVING BERLIN is ALL IRVING BERLIN"

There's a little bit of MURAD in nearly every cigarette —but only a MURAD is ALL MURAD

"Words and music by Irving Berlin."

Popular songs, so inscribed, are invariably whistled and sung from one end of the country to the other.

Every popular song, in fact, has some Berlin quality—a charm of rhyme or tune that is reminiscent of the master of Tin Pan Alley.

But only Irving Berlin can compose a truly Berlin song. No modern troubadour holds such sway as he!

That's true of a MURAD, too, in contrast with any other good cigarette.

Other cigarettes often suggest some quality in which MURAD excels—a trace of MURAD'S flavor or fragrance or coolness, a hint of MURAD'S charm.

But in MURAD Turkish tobacco is not merely one of several ingredients. It is the only ingredient, the sum and substance of the entire cigarette.

30,000 See Giants Defeat Braves; Yankees Lose; Robins Win

GIANTS STIR 30,000 WITH RALLY IN 9TH

SOUTHWORTH'S HIT VITAL

SNYDER GETS HOME RUN

Davies Relieves Greenfield in Fourth and He Holds Braves to One Hit After That.

By HARRY CROSS.

The Giants sent a crowd of 30,000 spectators home happy yesterday afternoon with a spunky ninth-inning rally which pulled the game out of the red-hot embers and beat the Boston Braves, 3 to 2. It was George Kelly who clipped one of Larry Benton's twisters after two were out and sent Lindstrom scampering over the plate with the jubilant run. Coming from behind in a rush like that made the Giants look just as they did not so long ago when they wore the royal robes of supremacy.

Up to the last of the ninth the populace, which was quite sizable for a chilly Spring day had little to enthuse about. They looked on in silence as Larry Benton exercised a magic spell over the McGraw hitters. Up to the moment of the big blow-off New York has made just one lone hit off Benton and that was a home run into the lower right field stand by Pancho Snyder in the third inning. Aside from that one thump the Giants batted like a squad of pitchers.

This young and energetic club of Davey Bancroft's laid a bruising hand on Kent Greenfield. What he had on the ball was no secret to them, and in the first three innings they had smacked him for seven hits, from which they coined only two runs. Greenfield's splendid support saved him from the ill effects which usually come in the wake of such hurling as he was uncurling.

Greenfield Hands Out Passes.

Greenfield grew as unruly as a Hottentot in the fourth and he distributed passes with such a lavish hand that the bases were jammed with two out. Right then it looked as if the Giants' chances were worth just about as much as a second-hand coon coat at Palm Beach.

As Captain Frank Frisch peered about him and saw the landscape densely populated with Bostonese and Greenfield's arm in a mood of wild extravagance, he raised his hand of authority and halted the fray. From the warming-up collar in right field came the small slight figure of Chic Davies, the left-hander.

With Dick Burrus at the bat, Davies slung just two pitches at Burrus, the second one whizzing into left, where Meusel grabbed it and averted impending disaster. For the next five and a third innings, Davies embarrassed the Braves with uncanny control and sweeping curves. Only one hit was made off him and that was a single by Doc Gautreau in the ninth, where it did no damage.

Davies joined the Giants on their last Western trip last Fall and went in a few times as relief pitcher. Yesterday was his Polo Grounds début and it was a corker. He struck out four of the Braves and Gautreau was the only one to get on the base paths. The others went down in one, two, three precision, only three balls being knocked to the outfield.

Outside of Snyder's homer in the third, Larry Benton pitched as fine a game as a pitcher would dream about. Tyson got on in the fifth with a pass and stole, but he was the only Giant who invaded the fairway. Benton had the Giants popping into the sky and rolling harmless bouncers on the infield lawn. To anyone who entertained any exalted notions about New York's batting ability, the spectacle was depressing.

Southworth Stirs Throng.

Swinging into the ninth with the score 2 to 1 against them, Manager McGraw sent Billy Southworth in to bat in place of Davies. Bill came through with a joyous single to centre. The crowd hopped to its feet, expectant and for the first time in a very anticipatory mood.

Lindstrom jarred another single down through the box to centre field just as Southworth had done and Billy stopped at second. Frisch did the unselfish thing, laid down a sacrifice and moved the runners up a station. Manager Banny moved in and talked like an uncle to Benton. Larry gave Young an intentional pass.

By this time the crowd was rewarded for its long sojourn in the frosty stands. Irish Meusel came up, launched a sacrifice fly to deep centre and Southworth hurried over the plate with the tieing run. Then came Kelly with his smart sharp single to left which propelled Lindstrom home with the victory.

There were two out in the first when Welsh singled, went to third on Brown's single an escored on Burrus's single to right. In the third, Welsh singled again and Brown hoisted a fly to short centre. Tyson muffed the ball after a hard run but tossed to Lindstrom who was covering second and got Welsh in a force-out play. After Burrus filed to Meusel, Johnston's single sent Brown to third and he scored on an infield single which Bancroft dumped down near first.

Larry Benton was pitching so well that in the seventh inning, he retired the side, Young Meusel and Kelly, on four pitched balls.

Between Frisch and Gautreau at second, there was some highly polished second basing on tap.

Jimmy Johnston made a nice catch of Frisch's foul over next the field boxes in the fourth. Jimmy said "Good afternoon to Al Jolson and then grabbed the ball.

Gautreau's speed broke out in a rash in the ninth. He went all the way from first to third while Davies was throwing out Mann at first. Few, outside of Cobb, ever try that?

Roger Bresnahan and Doc Farrell were at third and first ready to coach the runers every inning, but there were no Giant runners to coach.

Taylor and Burrus got mixed up on Jackson's foul fly between home and first in the eighth. First one offered to catch it, then the other. Before any decision was reached, Burns jumped in and yanked it down.

PETTY DOWNS PHILS IN ELEVEN INNINGS

25,000 See Robins Make Debut on Home Grounds With a 2 to 1 Victory.

BUTLER MAKES HIS BOW

Invalid Produces a Single to Score Wheat and Also Comes In With Winning Run.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

Jess Petty, the southpaw Sioux, delved deeply into his assortment of Indian signs yesterday and found one reading "Time will tell" or something like that to hang on the Phillies. It took him eleven innings to make them believe in signs but he finally did by 2 to 1.

That's the second time this season that Jess has stepped in the box for the Robins and it's the second masterpiece of pitching he has painted. He shut out the Giants with one hit on opening day and yesterday's contribution to the records was just as creditable. The Phillies made more hits than the Giants and more runs but they had more time.

The Robins were making their first home appearance of the season and no one was supposed to know about it, as the ceremonies of the home opening are being saved for Thursday and the Giants. The Robins just wanted to sneak into Ebbets Field for a quiet little Sunday game and then return unnoticed to Philadelphia, but somehow word got around and 25,000 howling fans sought admission. As long as they were there, Steve McKeever said they might as well be let in and they were. Otherwise they might have missed a really fine battle.

Johnny Butler Makes Debut.

The Robins won because of three pairs of shoulders. There were, first of all, the left-handed shoulders of Petty. Then there were the slim, sagging shoulders of Johnny Butler, the invalid who played his first game. They drove in the tieing run. There also were the broad shoulders of Charlie Hargreaves, which prevented a double play and allowed the winning run in the eleventh.

With the bases as thickly populated as they ever will be and two out, Harold Carlson, who did the pitching for the Phils, tapped a grounder to the box. It looked like danger was averted but Petty rolled the ball around the turf and by the time he had satisfied himself that there was no handle on it Mokan had crossed the plate.

There the Phillies were with one run to the good and it seemed that run would be good enough to win, until the sixth. Then Johnny Butler earned a home for himself. With two out, Wheat on third and Fournier on first, up came the invalid.

It will be remembered that Johnny had a stomach ache in training camp, second only to Ruth's famous illness last year. But Johnny forgot his trouble and lined a single to left that tied the score and it stayed that way until the eleventh.

Hargreaves's Shoulder Counts.

It might have stayed that way forever if Charlie Hargreaves happened to be a little less bulky. With one out and the bases filled Charlie pounded the ball to Carlson who forced Felix at the plate and Wilson, the catcher, had plenty of time to double Hargreaves at first. Plenty of time but not enough room. The broad back of Charlie blocked the way and when Wilson threw, the ball bounded off his shoulder blades. Butler, tearing along from second, trotted over the plate.

Dazzy Vance was presented with a watch by admiring New York fans before the game. Hughie Fullerton, writer of baseball and other fiction, made the presentation.

Huber, the Phils' third baseman, who was hit over the heart by McWeeny on Saturday, is in a Philadelphia hospital.

New Philadelphia Stadium Called Unsafe; A. A. U. Meet May Not Be Allowed There

PHILADELPHIA, April 18 (AP).—An inspection by disinterested parties of the great Municipal Stadium, now nearing completion, is to be demanded by the American Athletic Union of the United States before the athletic carnival under A. A. U. auspices is permitted to open in June as a part of the sesqui-centennial sports program.

This was revealed tonight by Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, President of the Veteran Athletes' Association, who recently advised Murray Hulbert, New York, President of the A. A. U., of reported defects and "preliminary settling" of the huge concrete and brick horseshoe. The stadium will have a seating capacity of more than 100,000.

S. J. Gans, a member of City Council who inspected the stadium, said it looked "very bad," and added:—

"Each section seems to be a separate weight unit and each is sinking at a different rate of speed. We will have to see what can be done to make the structure safe. The city architect says it can be done, and the head of the contracting firm that is building it says there will be no danger. They will have to show me."

WHITE SOX UNLOOSE 3 DOUBLES IN FIFTH

CHICAGO, April 18 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox went on a batting rampage in the fifth inning, uncorked three doubles and a single behind a base on balls and defeated the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 1. The weather was cold and both Lyons and Uhle had difficulty in handling the ball.

SKEETERS BREAK EVEN BEFORE 14,000 FANS

Record Crowd Watches Jersey City Lose Opener to Buffalo, 10-5, and Win Nightcap, 8-3.

By The Associated Press.

Playing before 14,000, the largest crowd ever to witness an International League game at Jersey City, Pat Donovan's Skeeters yesterday divided a double bill with the Buffalo Bisons, dropping the first game 10 to 5 and winning the second, 8 to 3, in seven innings.

Poor support was the cause of the downfall of both Cantrell and Smith, Jersey City pitchers in the first game, six errors being chalked up behind them, while in the closing battle the home team rallied in the fourth frame to score five runs and take the lead. Leverenz's wildness, mingled with Skeeter hits, netted the five runs.

Both Freitag of Jersey City and Kelly of Buffalo were banished by Umpire Hayes in the second game.

JACK FAIRMAN WINS TIJUANA AU REVOIR

TRIUMPHS BY A NECK

TIJUANA, April 18 (AP).—After 125 days of racing here the meeting of the Tijuana Jockey Club came to a close today with George P. McNeill's 7-year-old gelding Jack Fairman coming down in front in the Au Revoir Handicap, the get-away-day feature. Jack Fairman's neck was the margin of his victory over the aged but still nimble Dr. Clark, while Deep Thought was two lengths back of Dr. Clark. Jack Fairman's time for the mile was 1:38 1-5. A crowd of 10,000 saw the racing.

The weather had been threatening until mid-afternoon when rain in the form of a light drizzle increased in proportion as the day went on.

Jack Fairman opened a two-length lead at the quarter. This lead was maintained to the stretch where Dr. Clark, held in fourth position, came forward, making up much ground, and was fast overtaking the winner at the finish. Two lengths back was Deep Thought, while but a nose separated the show horse from Capistrano.

Jack Fairman paid $8.20, $4.80, $3.00; Dr. Clark $7.40, $3.20, and Deep Thought $3.20 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

Manchester and Bolton Gain Final in British Soccer Play

LONDON, April 18 (AP).—Two Lancashire soccer clubs will contest the final tie of the Association Challenge Cup, the blue ribbon of English soccer, at the Wembley Stadium April 24. They are Manchester City and Bolton Wanderers. Two of the oldest clubs in the country. This is the second time these teams have reached the final, the previous occasion being twenty-two years ago when Manchester won by 1 to 0. The Bolton Wanderers have reached the final on four occasions and were the first winners of the trophy in Wembley in 1923, when the gates were rushed and a quarter of a million persons invaded the playing pitch.

SARAZEN IS AT TOP OF PAUMONOK LIST

Crack Sprinter's Impost of 130 Pounds Two More Than That of Worthmore.

For the Paumonok Handicap, the $5,000 sprinting classic which will feature the opening day of the Spring meeting of the Metropolitan Jockey Club at Jamaica on Wednesday, April 28, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's Sarazen has received top weight of 130 pounds by Handicapper W. S. Vosburgh in the list of weights just announced. The Paumonok is for three-year-olds and upward over the course of six furlongs.

Worthmore won the Paumonok last year, but Sarazen is asked to concede two pounds to the Everglade Stable's crack. Silver Fox, the Rancocas Stable's gray flash, is in at 124 pounds.

It may be taken for granted that Sarazen will be a starter in the Paumonok, as he has been working in splendid shape for Max Hirsch. Worthmore is also in fine fettle. Wise Counselor will not face the barrier, as he has been shipped to Kentucky for a limited stud season.

A notable eligible and one that seems sure to go to the post is Harry Payne Whitney's Noah, two-time winner of the $10,000 Harford Handicap. He is in under 120 pounds.

FLOWERS AND GREB MAY MEET MAY 27

HARMON BOUT SHIFT LIKELY

Coney Island Club May Regain Match With Joe Dundee—$45,000 Offer to Rosenberg.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Tiger Flowers will defend his world's middleweight championship against Harry Greb, former champion, in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden on May 27, if plans of Matchmaker Jess McMahon are realized. McMahon said yesterday he expected to announce today that the match is definitely on.

The decision to hold this title struggle indoors was made by McMahon following the refusal of the State Athletic Commission to endorse a meeting between Flowers and Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, as an outdoor attraction. Chairman James A. Farley of the commission asserted the board's policy would be to restrict champions to their classes and discourage handicap title matches, and said the commission believed Greb was entitled to another chance at the title, thus restricting the challengers to one.

Expects to Persuade Miller.

Manager Miller has been insistent on an outdoor match for Flowers, but McMahon expects to dissuade him. Since Miller's preference for the open-air is based on the expectation that an outdoor match will bring the champion greater money, McMahon said he was prepared to show Miller that there is no certainty an outdoor match would be more profitable than an indoor struggle in the Garden. One of the items in connection with outdoor boxing, shows at the Yankee Stadium, where Promoter Tex Rickard has the boxing privilege, is the payment of $25,000 rental for any show placed in the ball park.

In his plans for the Flowers-Greb bout May 27, McMahon appears to have overlooked the welterweight bout between Joe Dundee and Willie Harmon, for which the Garden won preference over the Coney Island Stadium, which had the pair signed for its opening show on May 28. When the commission awarded the bout to the Garden it was expected the match would be signed for May 27. Now, in view of the Flowers-Greb developments and the impending appeal of I. M. Silberman, Coney Island promoter, to the commission tomorrow, it is expected the match will revert to the seaside club.

An offer of $45,000 to defend his title is being dangled before Charlie (Phil) Rosenberg, world's bantamweight champion. The offer comes from Eddie Long, manager of Bud Taylor, who has advised Harry (Champ) Segal, manager of the champion, that an unnamed Chicago promoter is willing to guarantee Rosenberg this sum to defend his title late in June or early in July. Rosenberg, it is expected, will be signed soon to defend his title against Bad News Eber of Hamilton, Ontario, in a bout at Toronto on May 21. Promoter Playfair Brown of Toronto left this city last night, having completed preliminary preparations for the match. Rosenberg is to be guaranteed $25,000.

FINNEGAN IN ACTION AT BROOKLYN TONIGHT

An exciting ring battle is expected tonight at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, when Honeyboy Finnegan, Boston's southpaw featherweight, engage. Ruby Stein of Williamsburgh in the main bout of ten rounds. Manny Wexler, Harlem flyweight, and Corporal Izzy Schwartz of the west side are to furnish the action in the ten-round semi-final.

A third ten-round bout will bring together Tom Kirby, Boston heavyweight, who formerly held the national amateur title, and Billy Vidabeck of Bayonne.

Three ten-round bouts feature the fistic card offered tonight by Matchmaker Nat Rogers at the Uptown Lenox Sports Club. Joe Malone and Johnny Filucci, Harlem's rival featherweights, will clash in the principal battle. Billy Palmer, son of the immortal Pediar Palmer, will make his American début in the ten-round semi-final against Irving Shapiro. In the opening ten-round bout Harry Getzel and Louis Moskowitz will be rivals.

LANGHORNE NAMED PRINCETON STROKE

PRINCETON, N. J., April 18.—Princeton's first varsity crew will begin the last weeks of practice before the May regattas tomorrow afternoon with Johnny Langhorne at stroke, Coach Logg announced today. This selection came after a number of trials, and it is probable that the boat as now seated will constitute the varsity eight to meet Harvard on May 8.

Since the beginning of Winter the question of Princeton's varsity stroke has been the principal one before the new coach, four men having been considered successively for the seat. Aitken, who held the position last year, became ineligible and Alexander, Becker and Langhorne became the leading candidates.

Alexander's weight eliminated him from the competition, but until the announcement today, Becker was stroking the Orange craft. Langhorne first drew the assignment, but Logg felt that his first crew was failing to show the expected power, and shook up the entire seating last week, putting Becker at stroke and shifting Langhorne to No. 7. The fact that the two strokes pull on opposite sides necessitated a complete rerigging.

The Orange boat now averages about 177 pounds. It is seated as follows: Stroke, Langhorne; No. 7, Clark; No. 6, Wood; No. 5, Helmrath; No. 4, Ballard; No. 3, Platz; No. 2, Goodman; bow, Stratford; coxswain, Captain Kennedy.

The Black Eight: Stroke, Becker; No. 7, Alexander; No. 6, Large; No. 5, Cook; No. 4, Trimble; No. 3, Metcalfe; No. 2, Strayer; bow, Spruance; coxswain, Cook.

Two Harvard eights will arrive here tomorrow morning to spend a week of their Spring vacation rowing on Lake Carnegie.

LAMAR TO FOLLOW RING AS A CAREER

Son of Distinguished Southern Family Decides to Become Professional Boxer.

HOLDS AMATEUR TITLE

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—Henry Lamar of Washington, holder of the 175-pound class national amateur boxing title, will enter the professional ring, making his début soon in California.

Lamar, now a student at the University of Virginia, is a member of a family distinguished in politics in this country. He is a nephew of William H. Lamar, Solicitor of the Postoffice Department under President Wilson, and his great uncle was Mirabeau B. Lamar, first President of Texas before it became a State. His grandfather was Secretary of Interior under President Cleveland, later being elevated to the Supreme Court bench. The pugilist is a cousin of Bill Lamar of the Philadelphia Athletics.

It was his decision to seek a career in the roped arena which led Lamar to forfeit a place on the A. A. U. boxing team which sailed for Buenos Aires on April 10 to represent the United States in the Pan-American championships. He is now in training for his first professional bout. W. H. Richardson of the California Boxing Commission is making the arrangements for his ring début on the Coast.

Lamar has just turned 21 years of age and has been interested in boxing as a sport for the past five years, starting while a student at Western High School, Washington. There he played on the football team for four years, won success as a swimmer and track athlete and later took up boxing. As a member of the Maryland National Guard he won the boxing championship in the middleweight class and held that title during his three years of service. At the University of Virginia he has been a member of the baseball team, the football team, the swimming team and captain of the university boxing team.

Suganuma Defeats Clemens.

Tadao Suganuma crushed James Clemens, 200 to 1, four innings, in an exhibition 18.2 balkline billiard match at Lawler Brothers' Brooklyn Academy last night. The victor went out on an unfinished run of 84, the high run of the match.

INDIANA FLOORING WINS AT SOCCER, 4-2

NEW YORK ALSO A VICTOR

Triumphs Over Newark by Score of 3-1—Boston and Fall River in Overtime 2-2 Tie.

With the Hakoah soccer squad of Vienna as interested spectators the eleven of the Indiana Flooring Company defeated the Brooklyn Wanderers, 4 to 2, in the first round of the annual cup competition of the American Soccer League for the Lewis Trophy at Hawthorne Field in Brooklyn before 3,000 onlookers yesterday afternoon.

The Wanderers were eliminated from the competition and the victors advanced to the second round, in which they are drawn to meet the New York Giants. Because of the international match at the Polo Grounds next Sunday this game may be played on Saturday at New York Oval. At the conclusion of yesterday's play Captain Moritz Haeusler of the Hakoah Sport Club expressed himself as well pleased with the exhibition. "I can see," he said, "that we shall have our hands full over here. Still we are confident." The appearance on the field of the visitors from Europe brought applause from the crowd. Captain Haeusler put the ball in play when the match started.

The Wanderers were first to score after ten minutes of play, when Nelson turned in a pass from Burness on the left. Indians forced two corners and then equalized in nine minutes as McIntosh found the net after a drive by Carlson. Two long spectacular drives by Bob Millar, the first at twenty-nine minutes and the second at thirty-five, completely changed the aspect of the game and gave Indiana a lead of two. Brooklyn gained two corners, but the half ended 3—1 for Indiana.

After the restart, there were two more corners for the home team, but both were cleared. Good combinations play by Carlson and Millar enabled McGhee to shoot Indiana's fourth goal. A penalty against Renzulli, converted by Burness, yielded Brooklyn's second tally.

Play Thirty Minutes' Overtime.

FALL RIVER, April 18.—Before a crowd of 8,000 fans here today Boston and Fall River played a 2—2 tie in the first round of the American Soccer League Cup competition. The teams were deadlocked at the completion of the ninety minutes of play and despite a rugged battle by both side in the thirty minutes of overtime play, neither side was able to break the tie. The replay will take place at Boston next week.

The game was remarkably clean for a contest between these teams. Boston eliminated Fall River in the National Cup competition here a month ago and the rivalry was at a high pitch.

Croft scored the first in the first two minutes of play and Johnny Ballantyne equalized for Boston in the last minute of the first half. Captain Brietian of Fall River was out of the line-up and Morley aspired to fill his shoes.

A penalty was called against Boston in the second half when Steel blocked the drive by McPherson. Croft again scored for Fall River, while Fleming tallied for Boston.

The line-up:

FALL RIVER (2).		NEW YORK (2).

Results of Other Games.

The Sherman Creek eleven blanked the Germania Football Club, 4-0, in the Empire State League game at Latham Field, Astoria, yesterday. McMahon, Gaffney and Hart scored in the first half and Carey in the second.

After an evenly contested first period in which each side tallied once, the Corinthians easily defeated the eleven of the Swedish Football Club, 7 to 1, in the Empire State League game at Commercial Field in Brooklyn yesterday. The Corinthians, undefeated thus far, hold the lead but need another game to clinch the championship.

Winning by a score of 3 to 1, after a scoreless first period, the Galicia Football Club qualified for the fourth round of the cup competition of the Southern New York State Football Association by eliminating the Donegal F. C. at Ulmer Park yesterday afternoon.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 18.—In an unexpectedly one-sided game, the Providence Football Club today defeated the J. & P. Coats eleven of Pawtucket 5 to 0 in an American League fixture here today.

THE WEEK IN SPORTS

Giants and Yankees Working Smoothly—Brilliant Outlook for Rowing—"The Game's the Thing" for British Twelve—Handicaps for Platers—Squash Tennis vs. Squash Racquets.

BASEBALL

Two of New York's major league pennant candidates have shivered through the first week of the season without furnishing any striking reasons for making their followers believe that they will not be able to take good care of themselves in the clinches or out of them. Both Giants and Yankees have conducted themselves thus far in a manner which calls for no philippic concerning their athletic deportment. They are running smoothly, hitting on all cylinders.

In a long 154-game baseball race it is just as well to start slowly and gather momentum as the season advances. Some of the clubs which are moving more rapidly now than is their custom will later have to tarry at the roadside and watch the procession dust by.

What the Future Holds.

Regardless of the present status of the clubs in the National League, the flag pursuit doubtless will resolve itself into a heated competition in which the Giants, Pirates, Cardinals and Reds are going to generate a feeling toward each other which will result in their looking in opposite directions when they pass on the street.

These Cardinals loom up as a chronic irritation. They have the stuff behind them to dilute Pirate and Giant arrogance, if they do not make the mistake of thinking too well of themselves.

The wicked batting which the Yankees developed in the South was far from a temporary condition, and they whaled the ball during the past few days so violently that even the skeptics are swinging around to the belief that a new and greater spirit of combativeness has seized the Huggins organization.

No Pennants in April.

The wary and far-seeing Connie Mack probably rejoices to see his Athletics get away to a slow start. Mack has been pennant hunting for ever so many years, and cannot recall one which was won in April.

The first week's objections to weather and umpires have been just about as numerous and lusty as in former years. The fan has to have something to kick about.

BOWLING

The continued growth in bowling is best shown in the returns from the annual American Bowling Congress tournament. When more than 10,000 individuals will travel from all parts of the country, without any guarantee of expenses, to compete in this classic which extends over a period of thirty days, it is evident that the game must have a strong appeal.

A total of more than $100,000 was distributed in prizes, making it apparent that there must be some wealth in the game. Bowling has few professionals and gains its support largely from the amateurs.

Game for the Competitor.

It is a game for the competitors and not the spectator. It is difficult to arrange accommodations for large galleries and the sport, therefore, gains its support from the participants.

New York is still hopeful of holding the A. B. C. tournament and officials in the Metropolitan district are bending every effort to have the classic here either in 1928 or 1929. In order to have the tournament here it is necessary to guarantee at least 1,000 teams.

It now appears quite certain that New York will qualify. The record entry for the Metropolitan championships which started last Saturday and the renewed interest in the State tournament now in progress at Syracuse show clearly that bowling is making great strides along the Atlantic seaboard.

Then again, conditions under which bowling is conducted now are much in contrast with those of a few years ago when the game held sway on alleys in subterreanean homes. Now most of them are above the ground level and in academies which are well ventilated.

Endurance Is Required.

It is a game which requires physical endurance as well as skill and for that reason has proved popular among industrial and financial institutions, where it has become one of the leading recreative sports. In fact, it is those industries which have become the backbone of bowling.

The bowling leaders are enthusiastic over the splendid progress that has been made and look optimistically to the future.

JAMES S. CABOLAN.

GOLF

Golf is at the threshold of a season that will certainly outstrip any that has gone before. The year 1926 is bound to be by far the most important in the game's history.

In the first place there will be greater international interest than at any time since the United States and Great Britain began interchanging visits, what with hordes of amateurs and professionals flocking to the other side for concerted attacks on the cups that the British hold dear and a later counter-attack by Compston and Duncan and perhaps some of the other foreign professionals.

Moreover the impending voyage of President Fownes and other United States G. A. officials is likely to result in some new arrangements with the Royal and Ancient Club. Perhaps, in fact probably, out of the visit will come the formation of an international body, important rule changes, an understanding as to the ball question.

To Consider Amateurism.

Then, too, it is almost certain that when the executives return to America they will give serious attention to the question of amateurism, which seems to have got a little ahead of them within the last few years. More drastic rules are likely to be adopted to prevent circumvention of the spirit of amateurism in the future.

Of most interest at the present time, however, is the international aspect, which will be greatly emphasized by the visit of the American Walker Cup team to England, the first since 1923, and the presence of its members and other well-known amateurs in the British amateur championship. A score of some of the leading American players will start in the event and, judging from the calibre of the excursionists, no great surprise will be occasioned if the British amateur trophy won by an American for the first and only time more than twenty years ago, is brought back by one of them and the Walker Cup likewise returned here.

Stars to Seek Open Title.

Neither will it be at all surprising if the open championship trophy, which has also taken up a more or less permanent abode in this country, continues its residence here.

Among the stars who have already booked passage are Barnes, who won last year, and Hagen, the 1922 winner, who repeated in 1924; Cruikshank, the North and South champion; Sarazen, the metropolitan champion; Mehlhorn and Farrell, who have been prominent in golf affairs during the past Winter.

WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

"A well-oiled machine" and "speed," the former when applied to a team and the latter to an individual, denote the acme of perfection in American sports, but in England "the game's the thing."

Followers of athletics abroad like to see team-play and a coordinated attack, but when a group of players, especially in the realm of amateur endeavor, emulate a machine, ruthless, unhuman and deadly accurate in its advance toward the goal, British enthusiasts feel that precision has become king at the expense of sport in the strict interpretation of the word.

Thus, the combined Oxford-Cambridge lacross team, which is competing in this country without much success as ballanced in the scales against victory, is having a lot of sport and does not feel depressed over failing to sweep its American rivals into the discard. The Britons very likely knew that their team this year was not a great one, and that in fact it was a little below standard, but the players felt it would be fun to compete here, and so they came.

It Produced Champions.

It has been said that the American athlete "burns himself out" in a few years. The American system makes for champions and for a rapid turnover in that commodity, while in England somewhat the reverse is true.

Miss Joyce Wethered, after attaining recognition as the greatest woman golfer in the world, startled America last year by announcing that the competition of title play and the demands made on her by the galleries were proving too great a strain, and that she would play in no more championships. Since then she has been confining her activities to the smaller tourneys, and in this manner is able to enjoy the game to its fullest, the only reason she plays.

For Sport of Playing.

Descriptions of games played by the Oxford-Cambridge twelve in this country indicate that the Britons are not staging "an aggressive attack." They are in the competition all the time, but do not make heart-breaking efforts to score. They did not come here to strain their hearts, but to have the sport of playing, and who can say their policy is not the wisest?

LAURENCE J. SPIKER.

TURF

Numerous innovations to the benefit of the turf have come out of Maryland, and it is to the lasting credit of the associations that they are ever willing to listen to suggestions for the improvement of thoroughbred sport. The following notice, printed in the stake book, speaks for itself:

"It is the aim of the Maryland Jockey Club to frame conditions for its races that will promote the widest possible distribution of added money and purses among its patrons, and suggestions to this end will be gladly received and seriously considered if submitted in writing to the Secretary."

Handicaps for Platers.

Horsemen have protested vehemently against the wide-open claiming rule, so the Maryland Jockey Club has responded with two handicaps during the coming Spring meeting designed to give owners an opportunity to run their platers without the danger of their being claimed. They are for three-year-olds and upward that have started in a claiming or selling race since Sept. 1, 1925, but there are no claiming conditions.

It now remains to be seen how the horsemen will support these new events, the first of which, at six furlongs, will be run on Thursday, May 6. The amount of support these races receive will be, in a measure, a test of the sincerity of the trainers. If they prove a success and accomplish that for which they are designed they should be adopted by every New York racing association.

Medals an Incentive.

Another innovation this Spring is the practice of giving a medal to the jockey having the most winning mounts during the meeting. It is a graceful thing, and has proved an incentive for every boy to do his best all the time. It has been noted in the past that in races for maiden jockeys the winning boy almost invariably selects a cup in preference to cash when given his choice.

A reminder: The United Hunts meeting opens Saturday; the regular season a week from Wednesday at Jamaica.

HENRY B. ILSLEY.

BOXING

So far as the outdoor fistic situation is concerned, too many boxing promoters and too many boxing clubs are creating a situation that is very likely to cause a depression in the pugilistic mart. There is every indication that there will be some painful blows inflicted—on the bankrolls of ambitious promoters—before the Fall tang in the air forces the sport indoors.

If competition is the life of trade, and it is said this can be applied to boxing, the ring sport is to have its most severe test this Summer. In the end the fan will benefit, but it is hoped that in providing this desirable situation for the man who likes his boxing, the sport will not be made to suffer.

Too Many Promoters.

Hide and seek will be the popular pastime for promoters. There are too many boxing clubs, the natural result of an excess of promoters who believe in the fallacy that boxing is a veritable bonanza awaiting discovery, and in addition there are too few matches to go round.

Reaching out for the few important matches available already has caused dissension and produced bitter rivalry. What proportions the situation will reach is easily imagined, but the situation may not become as serious as the alarmists predict, although it will be critical enough unless the State Athletic Commission applies the brakes.

Two Matches Banned.

Two of the season's most promising matches have been tabooed because they do not meet with the commission's approval. Dempsey is forbidden to fight Tunney, and Walker is prohibited from fighting Flowers. That puts an unexpected restriction on the season, and this condition is emphasized by the difficulty in arranging a Berlenbach-Delaney match.

JAMES P. DAWSON.

ROWING

To the oarsmen of the Navy and Massachusetts Institute of Technology will go the honor on Saturday of opening a rowing season likely to prove without precedent in this country in quantity and quality. While their seniors are toiling in their race boats on the sometimes stormy reaches of the Severn Columbia's freshmen and the Kent School will be conducting a local inaugural on the Harlem.

The college racing season will wind up as usual with the classics at New London and Poughkeepsie, the former promising one of the best events in history, the latter a record-breaker in the number of varsity eights entered, eight this year, and with the usual high standards in point of quality.

California Is Coming.

California has decided to join the invaders of the East this year, and with Washington and Wisconsin should find the tidewater at Poughkeepsie to their liking. Washington will tackle Princeton on the way to Poughkeepsie, and it is probable that California will also break the journey, possibly at Lake Mendota.

Adding mightily to the interest this season is the fact that there has been a general rearrangement of coaching systems, strengthening the Western grip on the East in matters of rowing and racing technique. The Pocooks, the Seattle shell builders, will also be represented in practically every college regatta.

Sweep Rowing Standardized.

Fortunately, American college sweep rowing has been so nearly standardized in the last ten years that changes in coaches nowadays mean not revolution but a readjustment of accents. The stroke everywhere is fundamentally about the same. The men from the West have brought on an accented catch, which is the keynote of the Western stroke as it is of the single scullers. And while these men come from the same school, they have their own little peculiarities that stamp their individualities on the men in the boat.

With Jack Beresford, holder of the diamond sculls; Morris K. Morris, a former holder, now settled in this country; promising entries from Canada and Cuba and our own Hoover, Garrett Gilmore and Russell Codman among the visitors to the Schuylkill; with the clubs building strong eights around college and club oarsmen combined and a general filling of the classes in pairs and fours, the sesquicentennial sports will have a distinctly aquatic flavor. Rowing and racing in this country were never in a healthier condition, as the season will show.

HERBERT REED.

Squash tennis is squash tennis and squash racquets is squash racquets, and never the twain shall join. The combination match played between the leading exponents of the two games in this city resulted in a victory for squash tennis, but mere figures, in the eyes of the squash racqueteers, mean nothing.

Far from putting an end to the controversy that has been raging wherever followers of the two games gather, the match served only to make each of the two camps more rabid in their convictions that theirs is the real and only game. The actual test on the courts merely accentuated in their eyes the deficiencies of the rival game.

Glee on Each Side.

This was only to have been expected. When a top notcher in one sport finds himself made a show of in another, it is not likely that he will have any great enthusiasm for the other. The squash racquet players roared with glee at the antics of their helpless rivals on the University Club courts, and when the play was transferred to the Yale Club it was the same sort of a circus for the squash tennis men.

The difference in the ball, in the racquet, in the pace and the general tactics of the game left the visiting player so hopelessly at a disadvantage that he could only feel that he was a Roman holiday offering.

No Regrets Anywhere.

However, none of the twenty players who took part in the match has any regrets. Each of them feels that he has done a real service for his own game in helping to demonstrate how immeasurably superior it is to the other.

Already plans are on foot for another match next year. Neither side can comprehend how the other game can continue to be played that long, but that's the way one gets when he plays the game of squash.

ALLISON DANZIG.

CHESS

As if to add still further weight to the contention that the world is well supplied with high class chess players, Aron Niemzowitsch of Denmark stepped forth last week to take his turn at winning an international tournament of major rank.

In capturing first prize at Dresden with the remarkable score of 8½—½ against a field which included such experts as Dr. Alekhine, Rubinstein, Dr. Tartakower, Saemisch and Yates, Niemzowitsch easily has earned for himself the distinction of rating as one of the present grand masters in tournament competition.

Not a Marked Upset.

As was the case with Spielman at Semmering, Niemzowitsch's conquest at Dresden hardly could be termed a startling upset. Rather, it was another instance of a brilliant player's attaining the top of his form and sweeping all before him. Going through nine rounds of play against some of the foremost players in the world without the loss of a single game and being held to a draw only once, is a feat that scarcely could be surpassed by any master. Of the nine players he faced, Alekhine alone was able to hold him to an even game.

Second for Dr. Alekhine.

Alekhine, finishing second in his second successive tournament, when he was generally expected to win both, may be regarded as something of a disappointment, but those familiar with the vagaries of tournament play will not readily concede that his form is below that of last year. The former Russian champion lost no games at Dresden, but was held even in four games, which put him 1½ points behind the leader.

The draw is still the Nemesis of chess masters in tournament competition, and while much has been said and written against the present scoring system, no substitute has yet been advanced to meet with general approval.

ARGENTINE OARSMEN PLAN U. S. INVASION

British Crew Also Is Expected to Compete in Title Events in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.—At the Spring meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, held here today at the Penn Athletic Club, announcement was made by President Henry Penn Burke that a senior eight-oared shell from Argentina probably would be here for the sesquicentennial and national regatta, Aug. 5, 6 and 7.

The South American crews may meet an eight from the London or Thames Rowing Clubs of England as well as the pick of the American club eights and a crew from Cuba.

The special eight-oared race has been stricken from this year's program and a 145-pound senior eight substituted. A new race will be for four-oared, shells without coxswain. This was added on the request from the Chicago, Quincy (Ill.) and St. Louis oarsmen. Trial heats will be held Thursday, Aug. 5, with the final of the senior fours without coxswain as one of the features.

It was decided that any one who has rowed in a university or college crew is now eligible as a junior and any one who has ever competed in a senior eight, regardless of whether it has won, is a senior henceforth.

HAKOAH ELEVEN MOVES.

Spring failed to come to the Crescent A. C. country house in Bay Ridge and the Hakoah soccer team of Vienna had to move into Manhattan, taking up its new headquarters at the Albert Hotel yesterday morning. There is no heating plant at the Crescent's home, which nominally is not opened until warm weather.

It was announced by officials that the practice game with the Brooklyn Wanderers tomorrow afternoon at Hawthorne Field will be closed to newspaper men and photographers. Few attempts toward scoring are to be made, and both sides are expected to make frequent substitutions so all the men can get a workout.

The Hakoah players saw the American League game at Hawthorne Field yesterday afternoon and expressed wonder that the Americans did not make more use of the passing game. The Hakoah stars said the kicking on both sides was excellent, but team play was lacking. It was pointed out that neither Indiana Flooring nor the Wanderers played their usual game, as the cold hampered them, but that both were familiar with the carpet style of playing and generally made effective use of it.

Velodrome 25-Mile Paced Race Won by Hopkins

HOPKINS IS WINNER OF PACED FEATURE

ZUCCHETTI TRIUMPHS EASILY

Victor Hopkins, Davenport (Iowa) cyclist, scored his most impressive victory of the season yesterday at the New York Velodrome when he pedalled across the finish line a winner of the twenty-five-mile motor-paced race, feature of a card which attracted a crowd of more than 6,000. The Iowan, paced by Otto Miller, outrode Larry Gaffney of Brooklyn, paced by Charley Stein, in a spectacular race, covering the distance in 37:43 3-5.

George Chapman, American champion, was third, after a ride in which the titleholder showed plainly that he has not attained his true form. In fourth and last position was Vincent Madonna, Italian rider, who held third position from the start until within two laps of the finish, when he went off the pace of Frank Jeehan, and was passed by Chapman.

In the ten-mile motor paced, Francesco Zucchetti, Italian star, made an auspicious début here, winning handily from Paul Piscotti and Frank Cozzolino, Newark riders, in 15:18 4-5.

Willie Spencer, Newark, scored a victory in straight heats over Harris Horder, Australian, in their mile match race and flashed the fastest eighth-mile witnessed this season. Spencer took the first heat by riding in front, and sped over the last eighth-mile in 12 3-5 seconds, the season's best time.

Jimmy Walthour Jr., the district's most promising amateur rider, gained two more victories. The Century Road Club of America star scored his most impressive triumph in the half-mile handicap test, in which he had a allowance of 20 yards, and was virtually scratch starter in the final. To win this event young Walthour had to ride around seven rivals in the last half lap.

Walthour also showed the way in a miss and out open race in which he outrode Walter Kraus, Empire City Wheelmen, in a spectacular drive on the finish line. Walthour covered 2 miles 1 lap in 5:03 4-5.

BOSTON TRAIL SHORT, DECLARES STENROOS

BOSTON, April 18 (AP).—Albin Stenroos of Finland, Olympic marathon champion, who is one of 112 entrants in the Boston Patriot's Day marathon race, has a complaint to make of the formidable 26-mile 385 yards course from Hopkinton to the Boston Athletic Association club house. It is too short, Stenroos affirms.

Most distance runners who have competed in the twenty-eight events since the race was inaugurated in 1897 have found the hilly course long enough for their fancy, but Stenroos, ending his training today for tomorrow's twenty-ninth renewal of the classic run, took the other view.

"It is a hard course, but I do not think it is full length," Stenroos said after he had been taken over the route. "I would like to know just how the course is measured. In Finland we measure everything with a steel tape. Has the Boston course ever been measured with a tape? I believe it is short."

Clarence De Mar of Melrose, 38-year-old printer, who has won the race four times, has been made the favorite in tomorrow's marathon, but Stenroos expressed confidence of repeating his 1924 victory over De Mar in the Olympics.

REISELT IS WILLING TO OPPOSE HOPPE

World's Three-Cushion Champion Favors Match—Will Meet Wakefield Today.

Otto Reiselt, world's three-cushion champion, who will open a 600-point match against Harry Wakefield of Cleveland at the Strand Academy this afternoon, said yesterday that he was in favor of a meeting with Willie Hoppe, rated as the most versatile three-cushion player in the game. Reiselt's meeting with Wakefield will mark his first appearance in the Metropolitan district this season.

Reiselt compiled a brilliant record in finishing first in the National Championship Three-Cushion League, which enabled him to displace Bon Cannefax as the three-cushion champion. In winning the title he set a world's record for the best game by making fifty points in sixteen innings; he won seventeen straight games, made 150 points in ninety innings, 200 points in 123 innings, and had the best grand average ever compiled in the league competition with a record of 980 points in 1,000 innings.

In an exhibition game Reiselt had a high run of nineteen, and made thirty points in three consecutive innings, scoring 19, 6 and 5.

M'NELL CAPTURES SECOND ROAD RUN

Takes Swedish-American A. C. Event Over 4¼-Mile Course in 24:49.

HARD PRESSED BY SWAN

But Glencoe Star Weakens in Last Half Mile—Kehrer Comes Home Third.

Sam McNell, unattached distance runner, scored his second road race victory in eight days yesterday morning when he raced over the finish line a winner in the invitation race of the Swedish-American A. C. held over a course of about four and one-quarter miles in Brooklyn. The lad who won the race last week out-raced Teddy Swan, Glencoe A. C. star, in a spectacular closing half-mile sprint and went over the finish line more than forty yards ahead of his rival in 24 minutes 49 seconds.

The race was a struggle between McNell and Swan almost from the start. They went into the van early in the chase and as the field strung out over the course they alternated in the lead. Half a mile from the finish McNell made his bid for victory. Swan rose to the challenge and for a time dogged his rival's footsteps. Gradually, however, Swan weakened and in the last furlong McNell drew steadily away from his rival.

O. Kehrer, unattached, closed with a rush which brought him home third, about forty yards back of Swan. A field of sixty runners started in the race. Fifty-five completed the course.

Ten members of the Pastime A. C. started in the club's handicap road race for members yesterday over the four-and-one-quarter-mile Elks Course in the Bronx, but only half the field finished. L. Biller, allowed the limit handicap of six minutes, won in the actual time of 29 minutes 50 seconds.

SILVERSTEIN WINS AFTER LOSING ROUTE

Despite the fact that he strayed from the course for about 300 yards at one stage of the race, Abe Silverstein, Glencoe A. C., yesterday won the weekly road race of the Seminole Democratic Club at Glendale, L. I., held over a course of about three miles.

Silverstein raced away from the field in the early stages of the test and was swinging along without opposition after completing the round of the Forest Hill golf course, but, being unfamiliar with the route, started around the links for the second time. The officials' car following the runners overtook Silverstein when he had traversed about 300 yards and directed him back to the proper course.

Silverstein then went on to regain the lead and win easily from Harry Werbin, a clubmate, in fifteen minutes. Russell Jekel, Thirteenth Infantry A. A., was third.

The order of finish follows:

Pos.	Name and Club.	Time.
1	Abe Silverstein, Glencoe A. C.	15:00
2	Harry Werbin, Glencoe A. C.	15:14
3	R. Jekel, 13th Regiment	15:17

ONE FACT ESTABLISHED.

Books have been written on the conflict of laws. A big one could be made on the conflict of alleged facts, on which laws are supposed to be based. Already the testimony before the Senate committee about the actual working of prohibition is so contradictory as to seem to throw the whole question into hopeless confusion. One Senator asked plaintively on Saturday who was going to decide when one reputable witness testified that the arrests for drunkenness in a given city had increased 40 per cent., while another reputable witness from the same city gave evidence that they had decreased by 20 per cent. Our criminal statistics are so notoriously deficient that this may not seem so astonishing. But we find statements by Canadians directly denied by other Canadians; conditions among the poor in different cities described in glaringly opposite terms; one clergyman set against another; economic experts confuting each other, or gravely assuming that whatever of good has happened in this country since the prohibition amendment went into effect is due solely to its blessed operation. In the presence of such claims and counter-claims, what is the reader of the testimony taken by the Senate committee to think?

He will do well, on many points of fact, to suspend judgment. But on one he need not hesitate in coming to a conclusion. It is that the prohibition law is not enforced in many parts of the country, and in some parts of it cannot be. This is in reality established out of the mouths of witnesses on both sides. Prohibitionists admit that the law is not enforced. They tacitly concede that it cannot be in certain sections of the land, because they dare not press for the methods and the money which, on their own showing, would be necessary in order to complete enforcement. One Dry witness jauntily suggested that Congress appropriate $100,000,000 to enforce the prohibition law. This would please HENRY FORD, to whom it appears easy and natural that the army and navy should be called out to make the prohibition law everywhere effective. Purely as a financial matter, Professor IRVING FISHER gave it as his opinion that the nation could well afford to spend $1,000,000,000 in maintaining prohibition, since its coming had increased the national wealth by no less than $6,000,000,000. But against any such extreme and immensely expensive program the Drys themselves in Congress would be certain to revolt. And it may be shrewdly suspected that the Drys outside of Congress, if they are sagacious, would dread the political results of any such scheme to make prohibition enforcement more drastic and entire.

The net impression is certainly to make observant people doubt seriously whether the prohibition law in its present form can be enforced. If it cannot be, such perfunctory utterances as have been common, and as have just been repeated by the Attorney General of the United States, to the effect that the law is the law and must everywhere be enforced, lose most of their meaning and pertinence. For their very authors are not willing to take the necessary steps to do what they wish. They desire the end but shrink from the sole means of attaining it. This makes their statements little more than a pious hope without force or promise behind it.

ECONOMIC LAW AND POLITICS.

Political economy has been called the Dismal Science. But the touch of politics makes it seem almost a Gay Science. Consider what is happening at Washington in connection with plans for getting the Government to "do something" for agriculture. All the established and accepted laws of economics are being light-heartedly thrown out of the window at the request of politicians. President COOLIDGE went out to Chicago to lay down certain fundamental truths, as they then appeared to him. The Government must not engage in business of any kind, not even the business of farming. Anything like fixing prices for farm products would be economically unsound and politically dangerous. In the end, the farmers would have to help themselves out of their difficulties, though the Government stood ready to aid them with every kind of practical information through the Department of Agriculture, and to facilitate the formation and functioning of farmer organizations for cooperative marketing, and so forth.

Those principles remained until last week the supposed guide and test of Administration policies and of legislation by Congress. Because they did, it was not thought possible that laws could be passed this session in the special interest of agriculture, except the Farmers' Cooperative bill. But in a twinkling that has all been changed. Even the President has so far altered his position as to let it be known that he looks with favor on the plan of Secretary JARDINE to secure from Congress an appropriation of $100,000,000 for a "revolving fund" to be used in a general way for the marketing of farm products. This might threaten to turn the Treasury surplus into a deficit, but needs must when the members of Congress from the Western States show their teeth. And they do at once show them, with a strong desire to fix them in a much more juicy bone than the President has proposed to throw to them. His concession has led to an instant demand that the whole discredited program of last year, the Haugen-McNary bill, for the virtual purchase by the Government of the entire agricultural surplus, be revived and enacted. The obvious hope is that the President, having consented to take the first step, will be driven by political expediency and fears for his party in the elections this year to take the second and third.

What is it that has wrought this sudden change? Political occurrences have knocked economic doctrine silly. You say that it is class legislation and Socialism in its most offensive form to put the Government into the business of buying the farm surplus. The answer to that is that Senator MCKINLEY was defeated in the Illinois primary. You protest that nothing but waste and confusion and governmental corruption can result from the proposed plan. The reply is that all the Republican Congressmen from Minnesota have united in declaring that if Congress adjourns without enacting bills to the end desired, their party will be smashed into small pieces all over the Northwest.

Writers have spoken of the "imperative" postulates of political economy. But they are nothing to the imperative demands of frightened politicians. Economic truth has no chance whatever at Washington as against the apprehensions and the bluster of party managers. Even the Administration is now shaken and uncertain. It is not surprising that taxpayers are alarmed lest their stoutest champion desert them.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

Until the precise nature of the Russo-German negotiations for an "amicable understanding" is divulged, it is somewhat premature to speak of Berlin cooperating with Moscow in a move against the League and the Locarno treaties. It is acknowledged that discussions are under way, but so far it is only surmise that one of the features of the agreement will be a pledge of neutrality by Germany in case Russia is involved in war, and refusal to join the econ[illegible]ott, thus bringing Germany into conflict with the obligations imposed by Article XVI of the Covenant. For the moment it may be recalled that in some quarters there is a tendency to regard the Russo-German discussions as a move on the part of Berlin to exercise pressure at Geneva next September, when Germany's entrance into the League comes up again. She can make better terms if the members of the League can be convinced that there is danger of Germany being forced into the arms of Russia.

It was inevitable after the recent severe disappointment at Geneva that the horizon should be scanned for all sorts of unpleasant developments. A Russo-German combination against the League and Locarno is one of these. But to take such threats seriously is to allow a temporary situation to obscure certain permanent factors. In 1922, at Rapallo, the Germans entered upon an eastward orientation. That experiment has been confessedly a failure, signalized by the Locarno agreements and Germany's candidacy for the League. The economic results of Rapallo have been more than disappointing. For her economic and political welfare Germany, according to the avowal of her responsible statesmen, must face west. The democratic bloc which has been in control of the German Government since the uneasy days after the armistice has been firm for a policy of reconciliation with the Western allies. The one element in Germany that has been loud for a rapprochement with Russia is the Nationalists, whose reactionary aims—monarchical restoration at home and defiance abroad—have been rejected by a majority of the German people, which is aware that in such a policy lies disaster.

From the point of view of the best interests of the Soviet Government it does not at all follow that any agreement with Germany is intended to prepare the way for aggressive action against Western Europe. Peace is essential for the stability of the Communist régime. In the history of Russia for more than a hundred years war has been followed either by revolutionary changes or by actual revolution. The Napoleonic wars introduced ferment into Russia. The Crimean War shattered the prestige of the autocracy of NICHOLAS II and prepared the way for the emancipation of the serfs. The War of 1878 with Turkey set in motion a new wave of liberalism. The war with Japan led to the revolutionary movement of 1905. The World War destroyed the autocracy. For the Soviet Government to invite war would be to court destruction. There may be at Moscow a few fanatics who still believe in the profits to be garnered, for the "world revolution" from an upset in Europe. But the cooler heads now in control are probably aware of the risks involved in a renewal of European turmoil and the almost inevitable emergence of national dictators everywhere. The eagerness with which the Moscow Government set itself to cry down all talk of trouble with Japan in the recent Manchurian upflare testifies to recognition by the Soviet Government of how greatly it stands in need of peace.

THE GUGGENHEIM FELLOWSHIPS.

Of high interest and suggestiveness is the list made public today of the Fellows appointed by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. This was created a year ago, with an endowment fund of $3,000,000, by ex-Senator and Mrs. SIMON GUGGENHEIM as a memorial to a son who died in 1922. The aim was to provide assistance for young American scholars and artists, engaged in various forms of research or creative work. Among the thirty-seven Fellows now named are five women. Appointments have been made from eighteen different States and embrace several members of the Faculties of twenty-two colleges and universities. An extraordinarily wide range of interests is covered. Provision is made for scientific inquiry in various important lines; for historical investigation; for music, painting, poetry and the study of English. It may be said that only a few of the names are widely known for distinctive attainment, but this only shows that the Guggenheim Foundation is living up to its avowed purpose. This is to give temporary financial aid to promising young men and women who yet have their spurs to win. They have not arrived, but are on their way.

What this far-sighted plan may mean in the long run for American scholarship and artistic endeavor it is impossible now to make an exact estimate. But that it will be fruitful in results cannot be doubted. We know what university fellowships have often meant for the advancement of learning. These Guggenheim Fellowships are not confined to any one institution—in fact, they will be a benefit to some connected with no institution—but will cooperate with the work of many different universities and be an encouragement to aspiring scholars and artists everywhere. It would be hard to name a foundation more wisely conceived. The good it will do bids fair to go on widening with the years.

GOVERNORS ISLAND AND THE PRESIDIO.

It would be well for Congress to give patient and watchful consideration to General FOX CONNER'S proposal that the Government sell Governors Island and the Presidio near San Francisco. In telling the Senate Military Committee that the transactions would put the program of army housing "on easy street," he estimated that Governors Island would bring $25,000,000 and the Presidio $26,000,000. "Surplus lands" on the War Department's list, which has been already published, might be counted on for $30,000,000. The amount required to complete the army housing program has been put in round numbers at $110,000,000. Governors Island is headquarters of the Commander of the Second Corps Area. Would General CONNER send him to Fort Hamilton, Fort Wadsworth, or somewhere on the Long Island Sound within the city limits? Of course, Governors Island has no value nowadays as a fortified place, and it is not as beautiful as it was before defacement by requisitions of the World War, such as the building of ugly sheds along the western wall its entire length. But it is still an appropriate and dignified headquarters for the Major General of this corps area. It is convenient to the city, and he has many duties that call him to Manhattan. The military household on Governors Island is quite large and it needs the accommodations provided there.

It may be a temptation to sell the island for $25,000,000 more or less, but it should be resisted until there can be full inquiry into the necessity of taking it away from the army. Senator BINGHAM of Connecticut asked General CONNER, who is Assistant Chief of Staff, whether the island would not be useful as an airport. The reply was that its value for such a purpose would be negligible. That is debatable. A defense force so near the downtown district has always been considered necessary. There seems to be no doubt that Governors Island would make a convenient airport. What does the Air Corps have to say about it?

As to the Presidio, it is the favorite army post, with its natural beauty and magnificent view of the Pacific. Surely it should not be sacrificed unless a strong case can be made for not retaining it. The Presidio is considered a paradise by the army people. To be in quarters there is a privilege. When it comes to a study of army housing, it seems but the other day that the War Department and the rank and file were jubilating over the decision to sell old posts in many of the States, including Florida and New York, to obtain a fund for building better quarters for men as well as officers. The bill drafted was so worded as to make acquisition by speculators difficult, which was well and good. It would be a wrench to army traditions to part with Governors Island and the Presidio. There should be a thorough inquiry into the General Staff's proposal.

THROUGH FRENCH EYES.

Many French writers have undertaken to interpret American literature and character to their countrymen since the war. One of the most discerning of them is the young historian and critic, BERNARD FAY. He has just published in Les Cahiers du Mois an essay under the disarming title, "Vue Cavallère de la Littérature Américaine Contemporaine," together with his translation of a short story by SHERWOOD ANDERSON. As if to present his credentials as one familiar with our speech and customs, he has chosen to translate "The Man Who Became a Woman," which, being a narrative in the first person by a race-track "swipe," bristles with slang, ellipses, allusions and idioms which are not the easiest sort of reading even to a native American.

M. FAY has visited this country often: he has taught at Columbia, and is the author of "L'Esprit Revolutionnaire en France et aux Etats-Unis à la fin du 18e Siècle." Moreover, he writes with wit and distinction. His observations contain none of the superficial platitudes which characterize so many foreign commentaries upon American life and literature. He quickly comes to his real point, which is that few of our writers have given artistic expression to those fundamentals which differentiate us from the people of other nations and which Europeans find particularly interesting. The reason for this is, he suggests, that the most talked of authors of our time are divided into two opposing factions, and that both of them share in equal degree, though different in kind, a "crowd obsession."

The one group he designates as that of the "bourgeois" writers who cling to an attenuated Anglo-Saxon literary tradition and turn out a never-ending stream of fiction about the loves of virtuous young men for beautiful young women. On the highest plane this art, he writes, is represented by Mrs. EDITH WHARTON. "Her novels are admirably constructed, carefully composed, interesting, well written, plausible. . . . Their literary qualities are incontestable. But they might have been written by a grandniece of HENRY JAMES who had married the cousin of one of PROUST'S domestic servants and had settled down in Neuilly." On the lower plane, it is represented by fiction in the popular magazines. But all of it, he thinks, "written for a given social milieu, has the essential vice of misunderstanding or of systematically neglecting the fecund, profound and creative qualities peculiar to that milieu."

The other camp, according to M. FAY, is the "young" or "radical" group in revolt against the Anglo-Saxon tradition. These writers have been influenced by the Germans and Scandinavians or by the French realists. But M. FAY likes them no better than the others, holding that they are as far away as their enemies from interpreting the American spirit. Of SINCLAIR LEWIS he says:

> I must confess that his novels bore me. They are so long, so slow moving, so true to life (so exasperatingly true to life, I might say), and they are so sociological. This writer who tries to represent the individual oppressed by the crowd and to glorify his struggle for independence is incapable of creating an individual. His perception is entirely physical and material, as in the case of our naturalists, and his thought, when he has any, is so heavy footed, so laboriously expressed that he misses the essential character of the American life and point of view.

Vitality, optimism, pride, shrewdness, independence, spiritual reticence, desire for activity, idealism, with a distaste for frank discussions of sex—these are the qualities of the American's character which differentiate him from the European, as M. FAY analyses them. He does not want to see Americans become like Europeans. He concludes by saying that he does not know what he wishes the development to be in the psychology of the American; but he does know that those writers who neglect to study, comprehend, sympathize with and portray the characteristics he enumerates must fail to reveal the soul of the American people and so fall short of greatness in art.

MR. GARVIN AND THE BRITANNICA.

Americans have the best of reasons for taking note of the appointment of the new editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. That work has more readers in this country than in England—probably more than in all other nations combined. Its sale was immensely promoted by the ingenious and untiring efforts of the late Mr. HOOPER, who supplemented on the business side the editorial work of Mr. CHISHOLM. Now one of the best known of British journalists, Mr. JAMES L. GARVIN, is to be at the head of the great enterprise. His selection, it is stated, was due in part to the desire expressed by American members of the Encyclopaedia management. Mr. GARVIN has already declared it to be his purpose to make the Britannica a cosmopolitan publication, marked by the cooperation of distinguished and learned men of all kinds in many countries. In such an undertaking it is, according to his opinion, the function of all nations to "help to accumulate what may be called the "common stock of civilization."

It does not appear whether Mr. GARVIN'S new management will compel him to give up the editorship of The Observer. In that journal, he has made a name for himself for range of information and vigor of statement. Naturally, the exuberance of his pen and the confidence of his prophecies will have to be somewhat restrained when he passes from current journalism to the sober and enduring record of science and history. But there can be no question of his competence for the work he is now to undertake, whether on the score of intellectual ability, knowledge of who the experts are whom he must call upon, or executive aptitudes. Those who know him best are most sure that he will both command success and deserve it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

If He Is Right, Then Change the Law

As to what will result from the decision in the Federal District Court in Chicago about the extent of Secretary HOOVER'S power over the country's broadcasting stations, two opinions are available.

The Secretary himself says that there will be chaos in the air if his orders, or those of somebody else, distributing wave lengths and time are not to be obeyed.

This statement probably expresses a possibility rather than a probability, for the broadcasters would like the chaos he predicts as little as anybody else, and before the situation became too terrible they presumably either would apportion waves and time among themselves or else be clamoring for and obtaining just such control as the Secretary hitherto has exercised. He is quite right, however, to the extent that conflicts among the broadcasters would result from such weakness in the law as Judge WILKERSON found in it.

On the other hand, the company that "pirated" a wave length assigned to others insists that the decision applies so narrowly that no appreciable trouble would follow. The listeners-in will be far more likely to accept Secretary HOOVER'S judgment, as he can have no possible object except the general good of radio broadcasting, than that of a corporation which, whatever its merits—and this one has done some excellent work in the short wave field—hardly can claim to be disinterested in parts of that field that have no interest at all for the general public.

Again Abuses Prompt Restrictions.

Considerable excitement is shown by the British legislators in arguing a bill now before them, strictly limiting the amount of publicity to be given by the newspapers to the evidence taken in divorce trials.

The raising of the issue is due to the fact that some of the London papers have specialized in this sort of news and printed large amounts of it, with no details suppressed. They have gone much further than even the boldest of American papers ever have done.

The opponents of the bill make the argument that to restrict reports of divorce trials as the bill provides would result in greatly increasing the number of divorces by taking away the fear of full publicity. There must be something in this contention, but just how much nobody can know.

As an alternative to restrictions on the press, it is suggested that divorce trials be held "in camera," but this meets with little favor as incompatible with the spirit of English law and custom, which of course it is. We have something of the kind here in our turning over of some such cases to referees and the sealing of their papers from all inspection except that of the Judge.

Nobody Is Speaking for the Public.

As viewed by the "ultimate consumers" of books—the people who want to read them badly enough to buy them—the copyright discussion now going on in Washington seems to leave out the most important question. To their minds that question is whether the Vestal bill would or would not increase the prices they have to pay for the books they want.

We common people do not want our creative geniuses to go without their due rewards in the shape of money, nor would it be to our advantage to have our publishers ruined, or even to have them dragging painfully along on profits so small that they could not afford to bring out anything except "best sellers."

With the plea of the librarians and the scientists that they must have the original editions of foreign books, not American reprints, there will be no very fervent sympathy on the part of the unilluminated public, but on general principles that part will incline to the opinion that the American publishers, even with higher labor costs, ought to be able to compete with their European rivals.

The American publishers make indignant protests whenever those whom they regard as ignorant laymen say that the present prices of books are too high or suggest that they should be issued in cheap paper covers, as the French publishers do. They say the laymen do not understand the situation—that they do not want paper-covered books and wouldn't buy them if offered. Also, that no worth-while economies thus can be effected. Perhaps they are right on all these points, but the laymen remain unconvinced.

We Should Make the Change.

As the name "Estonia" is pronounced by those who use it most and know the most about it as if it had no "h" in it, why does our Geographic Board refuse to follow the more than respectable lead of the Royal Geographical Society of England and authorize the simpler form of "Estonia"? Even the most vehement enemy of spelling reform should not object to that.

As a matter of fact, the country so named is the land of the "Ests," not of the "Esths," and they are a sufficiently interesting people to have their own way about a matter that really is their own business and nobody else's.

The Times News of "Dry" Hearing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Though I am one who feels deeply that sooner or later the people of the United States have got to visualize the menace to their ideals that lies in a few big cities which are more or less organising now into a political party that is trying to dominate the country through the big city press, yet I want to say that I have never imagined any better presentation of facts on a high plane, bringing out the scientific points, than the presentation of the wet and dry hearings now taking place before the Judiciary Committee, as given in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

I cannot help but notice how, if a really scientific fact is brought out, THE TIMES carries it; it does not try to dwell on some foolish or silly, or very trivial statement or misstatement that some one has made. In short, it has shown itself quite aloof to the fault of our great city press today—that of catering to the great un-Americanized masses, thereby tending to dwarf the scientific and intellectual approach to things.

THE TIMES news, as presented in these hearings, has been very fair and certainly has taken for granted that it had an intellectual clientele. This is refreshing. In an America that is in danger of being captured by the looser-thinking of great cities, where too many ideas jostle each other and where hearsay and headlines come to take the place of real thinking, I want to thank THE NEW YORK TIMES for its intellectual approach to these wet and dry hearings.

ELIZABETH TILTON.

Washington, April 16, 1926.

An Invitation to Ibsen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I send the following translation of an article in the Oslo Aftenposten. Isn't it too good to keep?

"As you know, Ibsen's 'Hedda Gabler' is now being played at the Actors' Theatre in New York. The management recently received a letter addressed to Mr. Henry Ibsen, care of Actors' Theatre. As there was little chance of the addressee calling for it, the manager thought best to open the letter, in case it might contain something of importance. Greatly to his astonishment, he found that the letter was an invitation for the great poet to be present at a luncheon on March 4, and to give a talk to the women on his works.

"The letter came from one of New York's exclusive women's clubs and was signed by the President of the club. The manager sent a reply to the lady apologizing for opening the letter and stating that owing to circumstances Mr. Ibsen would be prevented from accepting the invitation." F. E. F.

APPREHENSION.

Now comes the month, of all the twelve most dear
To poet hearts, whose fancies, ringing clear,
Resound with dawning life in each refrain.
They sing of fickle skies, a moss-flecked lane,
Rose-tinted mists upon the morning hills,
Shy violets and gleaming daffodils.
Brooks croon their charming ballads, new and old,
And coax from bending willows coins of gold.
They sing of raindrops, kissing heart-shaped leaves,
But I—I fear this joyous, mystic thing
That no one sees, but every one calls Spring!

She comes, they say, with gentle hands and sweet,
Her fragrant breath, and tiny naked feet
So softly-pressing earth still bare and brown.
And yet, star-flowers bloom, if you look down—
Bright blossoms loosened from her siren hair.
Capricious breezes touch her lips, and there
They linger lost in dreams of ecstasy.
But O dear God! if any God there be,
Let her pass swiftly, while mine eyes look back,
Beholding kindly Winter's ice-bound track,
My heart close-wrapped in numb, untroubled sleep. . . .
When Spring comes by, my soul wakes but to weep!

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of April 13, 1926, there appeared an editorial entitled "Accidents and Rates of Insurance." It discussed a set of revised insurance rates recently published by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters of New York City. The writer of the article evidently misunderstood the nature of the protection for which the revised rates are intended.

Employers of labor in manufacturing, mining, quarrying, contracting and other industrial occupations are liable under Workmen's Compensation laws for personal injuries sustained by their employes, and under the common law for personal injuries sustained by members of the public. The rate revision under discussion applies solely to the latter class of injuries which result from what may be termed public accidents.

The article gives the impression that the protection provided by the new rates applies to accidents and fatalities suffered by workers in industry. This form of protection, however, is known as workmen's compensation insurance, which covers the obligation imposed upon employers of labor to pay compensation in accordance with the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation laws in the various States as respects personal injuries, including death, suffered by their employes during the course of their employment. The revised rates do not apply to this form of protection, but rather to what is known as manufacturers and contractors' public liability insurance. This form of insurance indemnifies the policy-holder against loss by reason of the liability which is imposed upon him by law for damages on account of bodily injuries, including death, accidentally sustained by any person or persons excepting those employed by the assured. Such injuries to members of the public must be sustained by reason of the business operations conducted by the policy-holder.

The average increase in rates of 10 per cent. for the entire country resulted from the tendency of loss costs (incurred losses of insurance carriers per $100 of payroll exposure) to increase steadily during the past six or seven years and from a similar tendency for the claim frequency or the number of claims per unit of payroll to increase year by year. Public liability insurance in Greater New York has been carried at a loss for many years on the basis of the old rates. This loss is due not alone to the very definite tendency for loss and frequency of claims to increase in this city, but also to the fact that the rates for manufacturers' and contractors' public liability insurance in the past have been uniform for all sections of the country. The new rates recognize the fact that loss conditions vary considerably from a geographical standpoint and produce therefore a more equitable distribution of premium charges in different parts of the country. In Greater New York and Missouri the average increase in rates of 84 per cent. is due primarily to the greater frequency and severity of accidents in these territories as compared with the remainder of the country.

The total expense loading used in the new rates is only 1 per cent. higher than the loading in the old rates, so that the proportion of the increase in the new rates due to increased expenses is an insignificant amount.

Welcome to Summer Concerts.

Inasmuch as the Goldman Band concerts have given pleasure to so many thousands of people of all classes during the past seven or eight years, it was gratifying indeed to learn, a few days ago, that the generous patrons, the four members of the Guggenheim families, have renewed their fine gift. If they get only a small part of the joy that they bring into the lives of others, they must be very happy indeed. I have often wondered whether they actually know what a blessing these concerts are; what an influence for good they are. I spend what little I can afford for concerts during the Winter season. The Goldman Band concerts have made a music-lover of me, and of at least two other members of my family. They have opened for me a sort of new world, one which I had not known before. Good music satisfies and brings joy into the heart.

What difference does it make whether they be given at Columbia University, Central Park or at New York University? A five-cent fare from almost any part of New York will take one there. I don't know of any better five-cent investment.

JAMES A. CARTER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement, a few days ago, that the Goldman Band concerts were to be continued was indeed good news and, though I had hoped they would be given in Central Park, I believe that perhaps the New York University Campus is the better place for them. The quiet of the campus, the picturesqueness of the place and the fine acoustic qualities help make it an admirable spot. And, after all, it was proved last Summer that the public wanted these concerts and is perfectly willing to travel a distance to hear them. The generous benefactors who provide these concerts are rendering a rare public service.

For the Neurological Institute.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Neurological Institute is making a special appeal at this time for funds to provide free hospital care, free treatments, free X-rays, free laboratory examinations, and also for funds to support the Social Service Department and the Children's Mental Health Clinic.

The Institute, which was founded in 1900, has already rendered seventeen years of indispensable public service. It is still the only hospital, not only in New York City, but in the United States, devoted exclusively to the study, treatment and prevention of nervous and mental diseases.

The keynote of the institute's purpose is prevention—prevention of nervous diseases, prevention of maladjustments, prevention of anti-social tendencies, prevention of economic and domestic strain, which inevitably lead to nervous breakdown.

While intent upon such prevention, the institute is also bringing all of its resources to the aid and treatment of those who have succumbed to the stress, to the accidents or the exigencies of life which make themselves felt in disturbances of the nervous system.

The institute is non-sectarian, has no endowment, and depends entirely upon its friends for support. We are in need of funds to meet the demands upon us for free care and treatments. We hope that the readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES will help us to their utmost. ROBERT THORNE.

CHANGING THE DRY LAW.

Would the Supreme Court Set Aside a More Liberal Statute?

Louis Marshall, relying on Chief Justice White's opinion in the national prohibition cases (253 U. S.), has things all his own way, in the morning's TIMES, in his endeavor to show that the States have no power under the Eighteenth Amendment to define the term "intoxicating liquors" as there used. It seems to have escaped his attention that the Chief Justice was only a concurring opinion and represented a purely private adventure on his own account.

So far as can be judged from the Court's several opinions under the Eighteenth Amendment to date, its theory is just that which any unprejudiced person would be apt to form from reading the amendment, namely, that the States have, within their respective jurisdictions, precisely the same power and the same duty as has Congress, within its jurisdiction, in enforcement of the amendment. If States are free not to penalize acts done in contravention of the policy of the amendment, then so is Congress; and vice versa.

Also the States would seem to have the same discretion as has Congress in defining what is "intoxicating" under the amendment. They cannot by their mere say-so make that non-intoxicating "in fact" which is in fact intoxicating. Still, it is true that the Supreme Court on one occasion definitely refused to say that 2.75 beer was intoxicating (Ruppert vs. Caffey, 251 U. S.); and it has based the validity of the Volstead act not on the ground that liquor of alcoholic content of one-half of 1 per cent. by weight is intoxicating but on the ground that to ban such liquor was an appropriate method of making prohibition effective.

So Congress, and therefore the States, have within their several territorial jurisdictions considerable discretion in the choice of means for carrying prohibition into the best practical operation. And this discretion stretches in both directions. Thus Congress has deemed it best to permit transportation of intoxicating liquors through the Canal Zone; and the Hughes treaties with Great Britain and other countries extend this precedent to the case of foreign merchantmen in American waters. The validity of neither of these measures has been seriously challenged.

Suppose, then, that, after careful investigation of the entire situation which has resulted to date from the attempts to enforce prohibition, and taking account of the opinions of men like General Andrews—who may be presumed to know what he is talking about—Congress should authorize traffic in liquors of small alcoholic content in the hope of making the substantial intention and policy of the amendment actually more effective than it is at present, would the Supreme Court say that the thing can't be done? EXPLAINS ARTS AWARDS.

Nicholas Murray Butler, as Chancellor of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, explained yesterday why the academy chose Cecilia Beaux and Mary Wilkins Freeman for its awards of honor. Friday noon at ceremonies attended by the country's foremost representatives of art, music and literature, Miss Beaux will receive the gold medal of the academy and Mrs. Freeman the Howells medal.

"It was the judgment of the academy that Miss Beaux's work had qualities of distinction, conception and execution of a character that the academy wishes to signalize and reward," said Mr. Butler. "The gold medal represents the highest award for achievement in the fine arts that can be given in this country. To be given the gold medal signifies distinction and greatness over a long period. Only twice before has it been conferred—in 1915 to Charles W. Eliot for distinction in letters and in 1923 to Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer for her work as critic and historian.

"As to the selection of Mrs. Freeman for the Howells medal, the character of her work, the fidelity of the types she chose for description and the range of her knowledge made her exactly the type that Howells himself would have liked. This medal is awarded once in five years for distinction in fiction."

The gold medal will be presented to Miss Beaux by Edwin Garland Blashfield and the Howells medal to Mrs. Freeman by Hamlin Garland. The ceremonies will also include the unveiling of a bas-relief of Howells created by the well known woman sculptor, Brenda Putnam.

Industry Watches Prohibition.

Referring to your editorial of April 18 under the title of "Wet History and Dry Bunk," what warrant have you for the implication contained in the last part of that editorial, that the chief interest of captains of industry in the prohibition movement is economic efficiency regardless of moral considerations? That they truthfully and with full knowledge testify that one result of prohibition has been increased efficiency on the part of the wage earner, with substantial gains for him and his dependents, and that industry in general has also largely benefited from the same cause, does not justify your inference that selfish interest has either obscured their moral vision or rendered them indifferent to the very serious consequences that have resulted from the effort to enforce the Volstead act.

THE TIMES will serve no useful purpose in the prohibition controversy by throwing bricks at the "captains." As a class they are well informed as to its merits and will effectively assist in reaching an ultimate solution of the problem that will accord with good morals and sound sense.

I notice in your issue of April 2, under the heading, "War Veterans to March," you state that General George W. Wingate and Colonel James R. Silliman are sole survivors of members of the Twenty-second Regiment, New York National Guard, now the 102d Engineers, who fought in the Civil War. I beg to inform you that I am a veteran of the old Twenty-second Regiment, New York National Guard, Company D, and was honorably discharged about fifty years ago. I also am a veteran of the Civil War, Ninth New York Cavalry, Company A, and was honorably discharged July 17, 1865. My oldest son, Clifford I. Howard, was a member of the Twenty-second New York National Guard, and served in the Spanish American War. He now sleeps in a soldier's grave.

UNIVERSAL ANTITOXIN IS CHICAGO SCIENTISTS' AIM

Three Seek Serum They Hope Will Curb All Diseases of Bacterial Origin.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Serum to stave off the attacks of all diseases in which bacteria toxins are present, such as diphtheria, pneumonia and perhaps tuberculosis, may become one of the weapons with which medical science will combat the ravages of disease in the near future.

Three Chicago scientists have evolved a theory, supported by the results of long and painstaking experiments, and are now seeking to apply it. Dr. Arthur Locke, Seymour Cosman Fellow of the University of Chicago, Dr. E. F. Hirsch and Miss Edna Ruth Main, working in the laboratories at St. Luke's Hospital, are the three scientists.

Serums now in use have a high degree of specificity, that is, each is effective for only one disease. Dr. Locke explains, and many difficulties result. Valuable time is often lost determining even the general disease to be dealt with, he says. A serum effective against all bacteria toxins could be applied at once, he points out.

Specificity in a serum is directly proportional to a certain "binding substance" which exists in the unit of serum, according to the new theory. Therefore, it has been concluded, reduction of the binding substance will increase the avidity of the serum, or give it a wider range of effectiveness. The problem upon which the scientists are now working is that of producing a serum in which the binding substance is reduced to a minimum.

Not only will the avidity of a serum in which the binding substance has been placed at its lowest point be increased, but the stability will also be enhanced. That is, the immunity will be made permanent, though it will decrease to some extent after application, Dr. Locke says.

"This is our basis for thinking that, by precipitating out the binding substance, we can increase the avidity and get a serum so avid as to neutralize nearly any bacteria toxin and do it quickly."

JOIN IN TREE CAMPAIGN.

Ninety National Organizations Will Participate in Forestry Week.

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP).—Ninety organizations, many of them nationwide in scope, will cooperate with the Federal Government during Forest Week, begining today, in teaching the public the need for forest preservation.

The Forest Week, proclaimed by President Coolidge, will be promoted by a campaign committee headed by former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. Local committees have been organized in every State and in Alaska.

This year's Forest Week, the sixth annual observance, will stress the prevention of forest fires, the need for growing tree crops on all suitable land and the need to keep forest land productive.

Among the organizations participating in Forest Week are the United States Forest Service, all State Forestry Departments, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the American Farm Bureau, the National Grange, the American Engineering Council, the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoo, the American Forestry Association, the American Legion, the Boy Scouts, the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, the National Conference on Outdoor Recreation, the Motion Picture Producers of America, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

RETURN TO BOYHOOD HAUNTS

WENONAH, N. J., April 18.—A novel gathering was held here this afternoon on the estate of Belford G. Royal, President of the Board of the Victor Talking Machine Company, when the Auld Lang Syne Association of Paulsboro gathered for its nineteenth annual meeting. The association is composed of former boy companions of Paulsboro and vicinity. They played ball together on the town lots nearly fifty years ago. Twenty-two of them, some of whom came long distances, turned out for the reunion. A dinner was served in the lodge at the lake, with W. Howard Miller of Paulsboro, President, as toastmaster. Boyhood days were lived over again in stories of adventures and pranks related at the dinner.

Mr. Royal was re-elected President of the association, with Harry A. Fish of Paulsboro, Vice President; W. Ambler Stetzer, Paulsboro, Secretary, and W. S. Wilkins, Woodlynne, Associate Secretary.

SAVE WOMAN FROM FLAMES.

Two firemen last night rescued Mrs. James Robby, 60 years old, from the top floor of a burning three-story building at 357 Broadway, Long Island City, when the woman and her husband were cut off from all escape. The woman was carried down a sixty-foot ladder by Firemen Dowd and Luther of Hook and Ladder Company 17, while her husband followed unassisted.

The fire swept two frame buildings at 357 and 359 Broadway, causing $30,000 damage, while several hundred patrons sat in the Broadway Theatre two doors away, ignorant of the imminent danger. The fire started in the wall separating the two buildings. The cause has not been determined. Both buildings were owned by the Consumers' Brewing Company.

CLEARS FATHER NAGELEISEN

NYACK, N. Y., April 18.—Justice Arthur S. Tompkins announced today that he had dismissed the case of the State against Father John Nageleisen, who was accused of having poisoned thousands of fish in Conger's Lake, four and a half miles northwest of here.

Father Nageleisen admitted that he had put copper sulphite in the lake last June, but said that he had done so merely to kill off surface growths. State experts testified that copper sulphite in the quantities used by Father Nageleisen would not have poisoned the fish had it not been for the unusually high temperature of the water.

Hawthorne's Daughter Wins Medal for Serving Humanity

Mother M. Alphonsa Lathrop, O. S. D., 75 years old, daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, novelist, and founder of the Servants of Relief for Incurable Cancer, at Hawthorne, N. Y., received the Gold Medal of the New York Rotary Club yesterday for outstanding service to humanity during the last year. The award has been made only twice before.

The medal was bestowed by Pirie Macdonald of the New York Rotary Club in the presence of the Sisters of the Dominican Sisters of the Congregation of St. Rose of Lima and fifty prominent Rotarians.

GATES AND SANDBAGS STOP PORTAGE FLOOD

PORTAGE, Wis., April 18 (AP).—Two massive wooden gates successfully checked the swollen waters of the Wisconsin River today and protected the Fox River valley from a flood that was believed imminent last night, when a 75-foot section of wooden wall in the Portage Canal locks collapsed.

Hundreds of sandbags, tons of granite and steel cables put in place last night reinforced the hollow quoin in which the gates swing, providing a barrier to the rush of water in the canal, which is the sole connecting link between the Wisconsin and Fox Rivers.

Immediate danger apparently was past today, with the water level in the canal stationary and the river reported falling at Wisconsin Rapids and other points above Portage.

A. F. Everett of Appleton, Assistant Division Engineer of the War Department, under whose supervision the canal is operated, arrived this morning and investigated the situation. His findings will be sent to Major Van S. Wilkes, Milwaukee, Division Engineer.

Mr. Everett said that the weakened condition of the walls and the pressure of water which seeped through them caused the collapse. The emergency arose after the water in the locks was raised three feet to permit boats to pass from the canal into the river. The wooden wall gave way as the water was being reduced to its former level.

Little navigation passes through the canal, which is thirty-five feet wide and a mile and a half long. The Wisconsin and Fox rivers curve toward each other at Portage and the canal was constructed more than seventy-five years ago to connect them.

BARE-LEGGED GIRLS IN BERLIN PARADE

5,000 in Gymnastic Suits Feature Great March at Opening of Germany's 'Health Week.'

BERLIN, April 18 (AP).—One of the amazing features of a great parade celebrating the opening of "Health Week" today was the presence in the line of 5,000 bare-legged girls and young women striding along rhythmically in their gymnastic suits, sleeveless waists and black or white cotton pants, ending three or four inches above the knee. They were a fine exhibit of grace, bodily fitness and strength produced by the new cult of sport in Germany.

Other thousands of women in ordinary walking costumes also were in the procession, and tens of thousands of young men and boys in sleeveless tunics and short breeches took part in the demonstration for sanitary living.

Sporting clubs, gymnastic societies, scientific bodies, teachers, municipal authorities and military persons, whether active or retired, have joined heartily to help for the week in stirring the whole people to interest in everything relating to individual health, in foods, exercise, fresh air, regular hours and comfortable and clean living conditions, both physical and moral.

CLASSES CHAPMAN AS PRISON PRODUCT

Thomas M Osborne Says Penal System Was Responsible Largely for His Career.

CALLS HIM INFERIOR TYPE

Ex-Warden Declares Prohibition Shows People Won't Back a Law Unless They Believe in It.

Thomas Mott Osborne, a former Warden at Sing Sing Prison, told prominent men and women in a discussion of the "crime wave" yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Schuyler Nelson Warren, 12 West Fifty-third Street, that Gerald Chapman's criminal activities were largely the result of the penal system, which, he said, aims only at punishment and ignores reformation.

"Gerald Chapman was not a supercriminal," said Mr. Osborne. "He was simply a very ordinary crook, without standing and influence among criminals. Evidence of this is found in the fact that in the Connecticut crime which ended his career he could get no associate but the worthless son of a good family, who betrayed him.

"Letters I received from him when he was in Clinton Prison, together with my study of him since, show he was of an inferior type. There he was punished by solitary confinement. All his acts since then can be traced to the punitive measures enforced against him, when nothing was done to aid him toward good citizenship. He was the product of the penal system, yours and mine.

"It is not fair to compare crime conditions in this country with the situation in England," asserted Mr. Osborne. "England has a homogeneous Government and population, while we have forty-eight sovereign States and a great population derived from mixed immigration. England has had longer experience in dealing with crime."

Mr. Osborne said that while prohibition had created new crimes, he did not hold that prohibition and crime had any general connection. He said the liquor question showed that the people would not support a law which they did not want. On being informed of bootlegging by policemen, he said:

"The police problem is anything but efficiently handled. The New York Police Department is composed largely of efficient and honest men, but the crooks among them cannot always be got rid of because the Civil Service law prevents. The Police Commissioner may dismiss them, but under the law they have an appeal, and the courts are sometimes forced to reinstate them."

Mr. Osborne said his advocacy of prison reform and work to reclaim the criminal was not based on sentiment for the offender, but a desire to protect society. He had found that most men in prison deserved to be there on general principles, if not for the particular offense for which they were sentenced.

Reform Rabbis Endorse Campaign.

The Association of Reform Rabbis of New York City and vicinity has endorsed the $6,000,000 United Jewish Campaign of New York, for the relief of Jewish sufferers in Europe and the Near East, it was announced yesterday. A resolution unanimously adopted by the association yesterday calls the drive a "great and sacred work." David A. Brown, National Chairman of the United Jewish Campaign, spoke yesterday morning at Temple Israel, 202 West Ninety-first Street, and predicted that New York City would go over the top in raising its $6,000,000 quota.

From the Founder's Writings

How Scarce the Good Talkers Seem To Be!

Though one of the pleasures of life is to come across a man or woman who talks well.

Some of the old-fashioned men, neither priggish nor effeminate, are most interesting in their conversationability.

To be simply loaded with epigrams and anecdotes, to be retailed or shot off on every opportunity, as Coleridge is reported to have said, especially when you have heard them two or three times, is to bring on an old-time wearisomeness. It is never an exhilarating process to sit still and be pumped into for an hour.

It is a mistake for one to think that everything that interests himself is equally engrossing to others.

Some other assemblies need a Moderator as much as a Paris Conference.

BUTLER POINTS OUT TWO FOES TO PEACE

Carnegie Report Cites Unrest in the Balkans and the Rise of Despotism in Some Nations.

PRAISES WORK OF LEAGUE

Asserts That Armaments Work for Fear and Thence for War Instead of Security.

SEES A PROBLEM IN ORIENT

Educator Says Occident Must End Mistakes in Policy and Learn to Understand Orientals.

Two obstacles to world peace, the unrest in the Balkans and the lapse of some nations from democracy to despotism, are seen by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, in his annual report as director of the Division of Intercourse and Education of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, made public yesterday. Were it not for these threats, Dr. Butler declares, the agreements reached at Locarno might have lifted for a long time, perhaps permanently, the war clouds that have hung so long over Europe.

Dr. Butler asserts that the League of Nations has established itself in the confidence of European opinion, and has dealt wisely and tactfully with many difficult problems. He adds that the Western Nations should seek to quell Mohammedan unrest through understanding. He characterizes as "fantastic" the proposal to outlaw war by legislation. Limitation of armaments, he says, cannot be accomplished through arithmetical ratios based upon the population and wealth of nations, but only through the conviction that armaments promote war and not security.

Hails Progress of 1925.

Dr. Butler feels that the year 1925 has been one of encouraging progress in the field of international relations and that the agreements of Locarno, which were followed by formal treaties, have taken a place among the outstanding documents in the history of civilization.

"Outside the scope of the agreements of Locarno lie the Balkan States, which for two generations have been either in disturbance or in that form of quiescence which is only the calm that precedes the storm," his report continues.

"A real and pressing problem for solution, if international peace is to be established upon a firm foundation, is that of so organizing the Balkan States in an economic federation as to give to each people a fair opportunity for economic, industrial and cultural development, and yet to bind them together in some form of federated cooperation, whether political or economic, which would reduce to a minimum the dangers and difficulties that now confront them, and which might, because of their complications and ramifications, easily shake the foundations of peace in Western Europe.

"There is still another obstacle to peace. That is found in the state of those countries that have lapsed, whether temporarily or permanently it is too soon to say, from the democratic ideal, and that have permitted or suffered the setting up among them and over them of what is substantially a despotic form of government.

Despotism a Menace.

"Despotism is always a danger to peace. The time comes when it can only maintain itself by rousing the popular passion to international hatred and international conflict. The civilized world must view with concern every lapse from democracy to despotism as involving a possible threat to the peace and good order of the nations.

"On the other hand, the League of Nations has steadfastly established itself in the confidence of European opinion. It has dealt wisely and tactfully with many difficult problems and by its quick and emphatic attitude when hostilities threatened to break out between Greece and Bulgaria in the Autumn of 1925 it revealed itself as a genuine and trustworthy defender of international peace among the European nations. It may well be that the solution of the Balkan problem will be found by the League of Nations."

Saying that the causes and objectives of Mohammedan unrest are not clear, Dr. Butler points out that there is an old conflict between the Oriental and Occidental ideals of life and civilization. He adds:

"In so far as the Oriental unrest is due to mistakes of policy and of judgment on the part of Western nations in their dealings with the East, it may be sympathized with, and the hope expressed that those mistakes of policy and judgment will be brought to a quick end.

"In so far as this unrest and misunderstanding are due to lack of knowledge, it is hoped that no effort will be spared to increase the intellectual and moral interpenetration of East and West to the end that each may more fully understand, and therefore better appreciate, the significance of the other and the part which its thought and its culture play in the complete history of mankind."

Says Armaments Create Fear.

Dr. Butler expresses agreement with Viscount Grey's view that armaments produce fear, and not security, and that between nations fear stimulates all that is bad and depresses all that is good.

"The question of limitation of armaments is ordinarily approached in a more or less mechanical fashion, and it is supposed that some formula can be found by which both land and naval armaments may be limited according to the population or the wealth of a nation, and that the resulting status will be satisfactory," he says.

"It may as well be bluntly recorded that it will not. The successful limitation of armament must rest on something far deeper than an arithmetical formula. It must rest on the conviction that armaments make not for security, but for war. When that point is reached, there will be quick and effective limitation of armament. Until that point is reached, there will be nothing but more or less futile and superficial debate.

"Armaments are the result of a state of mind, and readily become the exciting cause of precisely that of which the state of mind has fear. To pass from fear of attack through armament of war is to travel in a vicious circle which can only be broken by changing the state of mind which brings that circle into existence.

"If it be said that this means to alter human nature and sensibly to elevate the plane on which human nature habitually moves, so be it. Just that is the aim of education and the function of civilization.

"If it be held that man cannot be educated and that civilization must forever pursue an ideal that is vanishing and hopeless, then no effective answer can be given to those who insist that we must arm ourselves against unfriendly attack from our neighbors.

Calls Peace Feasible.

"In that case we are sentenced to live forever as a superior type of brute, but not as men. If it be held and taught that men in groups or nations cannot adjust their economic and their personal interests and ambitions peaceably and by the use of institutions founded on the rule of right, as is everywhere done in the case of differences between the economic and personal interests of individuals, then it must be conceded that the group mind offers an exception to all that experience teaches as to the possibility, in the case of individuals, of the intellectual and moral improvement of mankind.

"The bitter and angry language concerning another nation or another Government so often used by persons of high place in public life or indulged in by the irresponsible press is in the highest degree demoralizing. Its influence is to continue and to exaggerate wh. ter unkind and unfriendly feelings, so often based on ignorance, already exist.

"There have been not a few instances where professed friends of peace speaking in some one of the world's listening Senates have shown themselves the most active fomenters of that discord which paves the way to misunderstanding, to prejudice and finally to war."

Dr. Butler reports a marked increase in interest in international affairs among the student bodies of the country, there now being about ninety International Relations Clubs, principally in universities and normal schools.

A conference of American newspaper men under the auspices of the division, with the cooperation of the Academy of Political Science, will be held near New York in May. Representative European scholars and statesmen will participate in the discussions as guests of the conference.

SEEKS MINISTRY STUDENTS.

Presbyterian Church to Make Plea Through Pulpits on May 2.

A call for young men to enter the ministry will be made from Presbyterian pulpits all over the United States on Sunday, May 2, it was announced yesterday.

The denomination now has vacant more than 2,000 pulpits, the Rev. Dr. William Chalmers Covert, General Secretary of the Board of Christian Education of that denomination, said. Dr. Covert declared that upward of 400 of these churches offer an average salary of $2,000, while about 1,500 are too small to support an all-time pastor. He said these could be combined with neighboring churches.

Each Presbyterian church will be asked to attempt to obtain the promise of one young man to study for the ministry. The Presbyterian Church each year through this board invests $100,000 or more in the education of young men for the ministry.

WHITTEMORE TRIAL DUE TO BEGIN TODAY

Slayer Has Eight Witnesses for Alibi, Several From Here—Two Are Church Officers.

PROSECUTOR IS CONFIDENT

Wounded Guard Now Convalescent in Ithaca Hospital Likely to Be Star State Witness.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 18.—Richard Reese Whittemore will go on trial here tomorrow morning for the murder of Charles W. Clifford and Louis M. Yarington, Marine Trust Company guards, during a $93,000 payroll holdup on Oct. 22 last.

The slayer's fate here is problematical. District Attorney Guy B. Moore declares that the State has an "ironbound case," and will insist that Whittemore pay with his life for killing the two bank guards. The defense professes confidence in his acquittal. But even if he escapes the chair in this instance, he must return to Baltimore to face the prospect of being hanged for the murder of a guard in the Maryland Penitentiary in February, 1923.

Attorneys for Whittemore insist that he was not within 600 miles of Buffalo on the day of the Marine Trust Company hold-up. They are confident that they will be able to establish an alibi, and are prepared to bring eight witnesses here. Some of these, it is known, come from New York. One is said to be a well known tailor, who is prepared to testify that Whittemore bought a suit of clothes from him on the day of the murder. Who the other witnesses are, and where they come from, Whittemore's attorneys will not say, other than that two of them are high officials in a Methodist church.

Slayer Directs His Counsel.

W. Bartlett Sumner and Melvin Greene, attorneys appointed by the Court to defend Whittemore, made final preparations for the trial yesterday. Their last conference with Whittemore was on Friday. Ever since counsel was assigned him, the former Baltimore boy has directed preparations for his defense. He gave Mr. Sumner a list of witnesses who might be useful in establishing an alibi, and he made a statement to the people of Buffalo protesting his innocence and asking for a fair trial.

District Attorney Moore spent most of today at his office preparing the State's case against Whittemore. He has numerous witnesses who will testify that they saw Whittemore shoot down the bank guards. What additional evidence he holds he has declined to reveal. Whittemore's attorneys will bring with them into court copies of police posters sent broadcast over the country immediately after the hold-up. These posters offer $10,000 reward for the capture of Harry Harris and members of his gang for the murders of Clifford and Yarington. Harris, a notorious gangster, was long associated with "Dutch" Anderson, a pal of the late Gerald Chapman.

Up to the time of Whittemore's arrest in New York the local police were convinced that the Marine Trust Company job was the work of the Harris gang. Several witnesses to the hold-up had identified Harris and Mike Sperazzi from pictures in the Rogue's Gallery. The fact that Harris had jumped $50,000 bail in Detroit only a few days previous to the hold-up was regarded by the Buffalo police as additional evidence against him, since they believed that he utilized the money taken in the hold-up to make good his bondsman's losses.

Lawyers and Sheriff Clash.

These facts will be stressed by the defense attorneys. Mr. Greene said today. At Whittemore's last conference with Mr. Green in the county jail on Friday a row developed between the lawyer and Sheriff Tyler. Only a few days before a box of stationery had been received at the jail addressed to Whittemore. Upon examination the box was found to contain two hacksaws.

"Because of this," Mr. Greene said, "the jail authorities did not want to let me talk to Whittemore unless a guard was present. It was pure nonsense. Whittemore had nothing whatsoever to do with the sending of the hacksaws! Either they were sent to him by some practical joker or by some one who sight to prejudice the public against him by disseminating the idea that Whittemore planned a jail break."

It is probable that Meyers, the wounded guard, who is now convalescent in a hospital in Ithaca, will be used as the trump witness for the State. The defense will direct its efforts principally to establishing an alibi and to proving mistaken identity on the part of the State's witnesses.

The shooting of the two bank guards of which Whittemore is accused occurred just after 9 o'clock in the morning. An armored car, driven by Clifford, drove up in front of the Bank of Buffalo branch of the Marine Trust Company. Yarington and another guard, John Meyers, descended from the car when two men standing in North Division Street near the bank leaped toward them. One man carried an oddly devised rifle which fired a .22 calibre bullet from an upper barrel and a .44 from a lower barrel. The other man carried a double-barreled shotgun. Both opened fire at once. Clifford was shot through the back and died at the wheel of his car. Meyers fell with a bullet wound in the shoulder, but Yarington, though wounded, opened fire with his revolver. He is believed to have wounded both robbers before he finally collapsed. At any rate, one robber dropped a leather bag which he had seized, containing $24,000 in cash, but the other, who had seized a second bag containing $33,000, fled through Washington Street with it.

He and his confederate then leaped into an automobile in which four other men were waiting and sped away.

CRAWFORD HOUSE CLOSES.

Famous Boston Hotel, Built in 1872, Will Be Torn Down.

BOSTON, April 18 (AP).—One of Boston's famous landmarks passed into history last night when the Crawford House turned away its final guest and closed its doors to await the building wrecker. The interior furnishings are to be sold at public auction and then the hotel will be torn down.

The Crawford House was opened in 1872, and for many years was one of the leading hotels of the city. Its oyster and chop house won fame throughout the country.

Sidewalks of Paris Please Mrs. Walker, But "Never Again," She Says of Plane Trip

By Wireless to The New York Times.

PARIS, April 18.—That the sidewalks of Paris are congenial to visitors who love "the sidewalks of New York" was the opinion expressed by Mrs. Walker, wife of Mayor James J. Walker of New York, when she chatted with The New York Times correspondent at the Longchamps race track today. Mrs. Walker is visiting Europe in company with delegates of the American Hotel Association, who arrived in Paris last night. They attended the races this afternoon.

Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Allen, her mother, flew from London yesterday, as did F. H. Shamley of California, who is making the trip wearing a pair of bright green gloves and who has the enviable reputation of being "the life of the party."

"It was my first and last flight," Mrs. Walker said, adding that she boarded the airplane only because her mother was going to make the trip.

Mrs. Allen said that she spent most of the trip patting her daughter's hands because the weather was exceptionally rough and air pockets were frequent and severe.

Mrs. Walker said she had the novel experience of "sitting on air" when the airplane sank from beneath her into one of the pockets, leaving all the passengers for a second or two between the floor and the ceiling without touching either.

Asked if she intended shopping in Paris, Mrs. Walker said that she would buy only souvenirs. Her hands and feet are so small that she is obliged to have her gloves and shoes made to order at home, but she hopes to be able to find French gloves her size.

The hotel delegates are enthusiastic over the reception they are receiving in France, and all appear delighted with their visit. The party was entertained at lunch today at the Pre-Catelan Restaurant in the Bois de Boulogne, and liquid refreshments were appropriately mingled with chosen dishes prepared by the foremost chefs of Paris.

One of the French speakers who welcomed the American visitors aroused general applause when h said he was an ardent prohibitionist—but only for water.

"I want its use as a drink to be abolished," the speaker said, "when I think of the awful havoc a single drop of water plays when mixed with a glass of wine."

The hotel men will be introduced tomorrow to the President of the Republic, M. Doumergue, and Mrs. Walker has been invited to attend. Tonight they attended a gala performance at the Grand Opera.

"Every time Mr. Statler builds a hotel," his friend said, "he adopts a son. But now he has six hotels and only four sons, and we are all wondering if he will gather up two more on this trip."

PATROLMEN'S HEAD BACKS M'LAUGHLIN

DENIES POLITICAL MOTIVE

Declares Men Believe Fund Must Be Administered Within the Force, Not by Outsiders.

Declaring that Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin, in seeking legislation to change the personnel and method of administration of the Police Relief Fund, has the support of the police force, Patrolman Joseph P. Moran, President of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, said yesterday the patrolmen regretted the criticisms of Mr. McLaughlin's attitude toward the fund which have been made by R. A. C. Smith, an Honorary Commissioner under Mr. Enright.

"There is no political motive behind the bill now before the Legislature," said President Moran. "The bill is in the interests of the city and of the men who are the beneficiaries of a generous public. The patrolmen were not consulted in 1923, when the first bill to incorporate the fund was introduced at Albany. The representatives of the 13,000 policemen whose work was in the main responsible for the generosity of the people in the Field Day collections were named in the bill only by courtesy. Mr. Enright selected a large group of his personal friends, who outnumbered the policemen's representatives by five to one. The bill passed the Senate, but failed in the Assembly because there was no general demand for its enactment.

Passed the Next Year.

"In the following year another bill for incorporation was introduced. More personal friends of the Administration were added to the list of trustees. The Mayor was named personally instead of ex officio, and so was the Police Commissioner. While at no time even consulted as to their wishes, the opposition of the force to a hospital exploitation was recognized in a provision prohibiting the use of the fund for the erection of a hospital. The bill of 1924 was passed by the Senate, and on the closing day of the Legislature a personal representative of one of the trustees went to Albany to urge the passage of the measure. In the final rush of legislation the bill was passed.

"The act of incorporation never had the approval of the force, for reasons which the patrolmen are sure will convince the public of the wisdom of the course taken by Commissioner McLaughlin and supported by the force.

"Policemen are appointed for life. They see one Administration after another come and go. Each Administration has its own circle of friends and its own policy in relation to relief funds, and there seems to be a desire on the part of each Administration to perpetuate itself in connection therewith.

Wants Police Control.

"When Commissioner McLaughlin took office the Police Relief Fund held its first meeting outside the Police Department, and there was a natural feeling on the part of policemen that the administration of the fund which they had brought together by the sale of tickets should remain at Police Headquarters.

"The real question is whether it is advisable to have any group of private citizens, however friendly disposed toward policemen, placed in control of funds collected by policemen for their own benefit from the public and to give such trustees the right to perpetuate that control by naming their successors. The police force believes that such funds should be held and administered by trustees who hold office because of their election by and responsibility to the people of the city, or civic or fraternal organizations. The plan put forward by Commissioner McLaughlin is an unselfish one, beneficial to all concerned."

SANTA FE 'STEALS' TRACKS.

Relays Quarter Mile of Rails When Roadbed Owner Asks Pay.

Special to The New York Times.

GALESBURG, Ill., April 18.—The Santa Fé Railroad "stole" a quarter of a mile of its own tracks here this morning to foil alleged attempts to force it to pay $20,000 for use of the line.

Three hundred workmen brought here at daybreak on a special train from Chillicothe, "perpetrated" the "theft." They relaid the rails on railroad property. The line involved was the connecting link between the Santa Fé and the Burlington.

Some time ago D. C. Halper, a junk dealer, bought the property on which the tracks were laid. Through his lawyers he made demands on the Santa Fé and the Burlington for use of the track. The roads refused to pay, maintaining that the ties and rails were their property. The removal was carried out with great secrecy to avoid a possible injunction.

HARRISBURG, April 18.—On his return here from the first week of his tour of the State as a Republican candidate for the Senatorial nomination, Governor Pinchot directed Attorney General Woodruff to take immediate action regarding alleged forgeries in the nominating petitions for all candidates for United States Senator.

The Governor conferred with the Attorney General particularly regarding alleged perjuries and forgeries in the petition of Representative William S. Vare. Ten days ago the Governor charged that this petition, bearing 230,000 names, contained signatures by the score written by the same person. These were on parts of the petition circulated in Philadelphia, in Montgomery and in Schuylkill Counties.

While the Governor was away, representatives of Mr. Vare declared they found similar irregularities in the petition filed for the Governor as a Senatorial candidate.

Photostat copies of all the petitions of Republican candidates for Statewide office have been made at the State Department and Attorney General Woodruff has been going over them.

After the Vare petition signatures were questioned the Attorney General conferred as to criminal prosecutions with District Attorney Charles E. Fox of Philadelphia, who promised further investigation. The Governor's orders now are that his legal adviser confer with the District Attorneys of other counties where affiants swore that signatures were written by qualified Republican electors.

This action would mean proceedings against some of those who circulated Pinchot petitions, if the Vare charges of irregularities are borne out.

While no charge has been openly made against the petition of United States Senator Pepper, who is seeking a renomination, it is said that some of the signatures on his papers bear a remarkable similarity.

"On my return to Harrisburg I have conferred with the Attorney General concerning the whole question of perjury and forgery in nominating petitions, and particularly in the Vare petitions, some of which I have already made public. I have directed him to conduct a thorough examination of all the petitions filed by any candidate for United States Senator and wherever he finds evidence of fraud in the signature of a petition, no matter for what candidate it has been filed, to take the matter up with the District Attorney of the county concerned and proceed as he has in the case of the Vare petitions in Philadelphia."

BROWNINGS AT COLD SPRING

Return to Their Home, Where Radio Set Is Installed.

Special to The New York Times.

COLD SPRING, N. Y., April 18.—Edward W. Browning and his fifteen-year-old bride returned to their home here today. It is known that the wealthy real estate man plans to make Cold Spring his permanent home, motoring to Manhattan every day to his office at 153 West Seventy-second Street.

Since Thursday the couple have been living at the Gramatan Hotel, Bronxville. A radio was installed in the Browning home this afternoon. Constable John Lowry remained on guard outside the dwelling throughout the day to prevent intrusion by motorists, many of whom halted their cars for a peep at the honeymoon cottage.

When Browning goes into New York tomorrow Mrs. Browning will accompany him. She plans to take treatment for the burns on her face caused when an unidentified person threw acid on her as she slept in her mother's apartment on Washington Heights. No clue to the acid-thrower has even been obtained. After visiting the doctor, Mrs. Browning will continue her tour of the shops.

Teachers Hold Annual Dinner.

The Teachers' Union and the Teachers' Union Auxiliary held their tenth annual dinner last night at the Hotel Pennsylvania in honor of Henry R. Linville, President of the Teachers' Union. The toastmaster was John Lovejoy Elliott, of the Department of Ethics of the Ethical Culture School. The speakers were Matthew Woll, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, and Harry A. Overstreet, Professor of Philosophy at City College.

YOUTHFUL ORATORS SET HIGH STANDARD

MORE FINALS THIS WEEK

All Long Island Tests and Two in New Jersey Will Be Held Next Friday Night.

High school principals expressed much favorable comment yesterday upon the rising scale of ability the contestants in the national oratorical contest on the Constitution, sponsored by The New York Times, showed at the many borough, county and district finals held last week. Saying the steady improvement in the boy and girl orators had outdone their expectations, they predicted further interesting revelations at the more important contests scheduled in the week to come. School officials generally expressed the opinion that by the time the Town Hall championship was reached on May 14, a level of forensic power would be developed that would carry the winner far in the national finals on June 4, at Washington.

Interest in the contest, according to these observers, had passed out of the strictly juvenile stage and they particularly remarked on the hearty reaction they said had been shown by men of affairs who are volunteering their services to act as judges at these contests.

One school principal told of an incident that took place at one of the borough finals last week at his school. He said he had watched the judges closely throughout the contest in the natural concern a host felt for prominent guests who were doing a courtesy under untried conditions. He said his reassurance came early, that he experienced, first, relief, and then something of a new feeling toward the possibilities of such a competition as he watched speaker follow speaker without causing more than a casual break in the judges' keen attention.

Watched the Ballots Counted.

However, the Principal said, after the marshals had collected the ballots he saw with dismay all five of the judges leave their seats with hats and coats and tiptoe hurriedly down the aisle and out the door. He said he was preparing to admit a serious mistake when, to his great relief, he found all the judges gathered in the anteroom, where the ballots were being counted, and pressing around the marshals with what he described as almost boyish eagerness to learn first hand "how it came out."

Each judge, he said, appeared particularly anxious to know how his own markings compared with those of his colleagues. In sympathetic consideration of how hard all the young speakers had tried, each judge seemed concerned whether he had been the only one to score those at the loser's end of his list, and, of apparently more moment, whether his choice of leaders met with concurrence enough from the others for their favorites to win. The ballots finally showed general unanimity, and, the Principal said, none in the audience seemed to relish the several victories more than the judges. He said the incident had been one of the graphic sidelights of the competition. For obvious reasons the principal did not wish his name mentioned.

Apparent corroboration of these impressions from another quarter came yesterday in the following response from Cornelius Doremus of Ridgewood, N. J., former Judge of the Third Judicial District Court of Bergen County. Judge Doremus was one of those who generously contributed an evening to act as judge at the district finals of Bergen and Hudson Counties, which were held at the Englewood, N. J., High School last Friday evening.

Glad to Be a Judge.

"The Oratorical Contest took place last night as planned," wrote Judge Doremus. "I was very glad indeed to be there and to assist in the work as one of the judges. It was most interesting and I heartily congratulate The New York Times upon its vision and its good work in bringing about a contest of this kind. It is most inspiring, instructive and forward-looking. I thank you for the opportunity of participating."

Robert E. Minnich, Principal of the Fort Plain High School, has advised that the winner of the Montgomery County finals held there last Friday in the State-wide competition was James Hage of Fonda, N. Y., High School. Hage's oration was "Hamilton and the Constitution." The judges were District Superintendent N. Berton Alter of Nelliston, Professor George N. Stanton and Professor Venton of St. Johnsville.

Among the important District Finals to be held this week will be the All-Long Island contest at Hempstead (L. I.) High School on Friday night. Raymond Maure, Principal, and Chairman for the competition, will preside. The judges will be Robert W. Higbie, member of the State Board of Regents; H. B. Knapp, Director of the State Institute of Applied Agriculture at Farmingdale, and Dr. A. C. McLachlin, Principal of the Jamaica Training School for Teachers. Dr. McLachlin's acceptance, Mr. Maure said, moved him to recall when Nathan L. Miller, then Governor of New York, was asked what had been the impetus or inspiration which had resulted in his success. Mr. Maure quoted Governor Miller as replying: "It was all due to the teacher I had in the little red schoolhouse of my boyhood, a teacher now the principal of Jamaica Training School—Dr. A. C. McLachlin."

Other Events This Week.

Other interesting meetings the same night will be the Essex County, and the Passaic County District Finals, in New Jersey. Ralph E. Flies, Principal of the East Orange (N. J.) High School, where the Essex County event will be held, said the judges would be Supreme Court Justice Samuel Kalisch; Joseph G. Wolber, President of the Lawyers Club of Essex County; Dr. David B. Corson, City Superintendent of Schools of Newark; Dr. James A. Nugent, City Superintendent of Schools of Jersey City, and H. D. Steward of the English Department of South Side High School, Newark. Mr. Flies is the Essex County Chairman.

The Passaic County Finals will be held at Central High School, Paterson, where Joseph F. Manley, Principal and County Chairman, will preside. Mr. Manley announced the following as judges: Gustave A. Hunziker of Paterson, member of the New Jersey Board of Education; Edward Garrison, Superintendent of Schools of Passaic County; Austin H. Updyke, Superintendent of Schools of Hudson County; Clifford J. Scott, City Superintendent of Schools of East Orange, and the Rev. Frederick C. O'Neill, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament of Newark.

BOSTON HANGS LIGHTS FOR 'PAUL REVERE RIDE'

BOSTON, April 18 (AP).—Scenes of 1775 were re-enacted in Boston tonight when two lanterns were hung in the belfry of the Old North Church as a signal to a modern Paul Revere.

As part of the ceremony introducing Patriots' Day, the anniversary of the Battle of Concord and Lexington, services were held in the historic church on Salem Street, and a descendant of Paul Revere was chosen to place the warning lanterns. Tomorrow the mounted messenger will leave for Middlesex County as Revere rode 151 years ago to give warning of the British attack.

Mrs. Pauline Revere Auerhamern, great-great-granddaughter of Paul Revere, who has been selected for several years for the honor of placing the lanterns, officiated tonight. She walked down the aisle of the ancient church carrying her beacons, climbed the steep stairway to the steeple, and, with the aid of the sexton, raised the lanterns to the tops of masts, where they could be seen for miles. The lights, signal to Paul Revere that "the British are out," were to be left through the night.

The ceremony at the old North Church included an address by William Lanier Washington, lineal descendant of two brothers of Georgs Washington and hereditary representative of the first President in the Society of the Cincinnati.

For the part of Paul Revere, Sergeant Geoffrey T. Clifford of Troop C, 110th Cavalry, Massachusetts National Guard, has been selected. He will ride from North Square through Somerville, Medford and Arlington to Lexington Green.

At the same time Sergeant George A. Deyarmond o fthe same troop, impersonating William Dawes Jr., will ride from John Eliot Square, Roxbury, through Brookline, Cambridge and Arlington to the same destination.

SENTENCED TO DEATH, DOG SAVES FAMILY

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 18.—A scraggly, wire-haired Boston terrior by the name of Fido is heaping metaphorical coals of fire upon his owner, Ervin Bythrow of Quincy.

Neighbors had been skeptical for some time of Fido s value in the community, but when a beautiful Angora cat belonging to one was found chewed up, with wiry hairs that could have come from no other than Bythrow's Fido, indignation waxed so nigh that Bythrow could calm his neighbors only by asking the Animal Rescue League to take the dog and kill him.

Bythrow was not happy the night before Fido was to be taken. Fido, oblivious of his secret condemnation to death, slept behind the kitchen stove dreaming of more Angora cats.

At 4 A. M. today young Bythrow was awakened by a pressure on his hand and he found that Fido was nuzzling to wake him up. The room was filled with smoke. Bythrow aroused his two brothers and for half an hour they battled flames. If the dog had not awakened them they would have suffocated, they believe.

Fido's execution has been called off and the neighbors agree.

PASSAIC FIREBUG CAUGHT.

Seized in Act of Starting Blaze in Garage, the Police Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 18.—An admission that he was a professional firebug and that he had set fire to a number of buildings in Passaic and vicinity, was made, according to the police, by Philip Goldberg of 10 Prescott Avenue, Clifton, after his arrest at 3 o'clock this morning in a garage opposite the Wallington Police Headquarters. He was about to set the garag on fire, the police added.

A ten-gallon can of kerosene, fuse matches and other equipment were seized in the garage by Officer Philip Fiola and Charles Bauer. The prisoner, the police declared, said he had been paid $200 to set the ace on fire.

DEFENDS STREET MEETINGS.

Ex-Sheriff Knott Says Salvation Army Inspires Many.

During the last year the Salvation Army held 5,549 street meetings in Greater New York, according to a report received by former Sheriff David H. Knott, who is in charge of the organization's 1926 maintenance appeal.

The estimated attendance at these meetings is said to have been in excess of 758,000. There were also 4,881 indoor meetings with an estimated attendance of 312,000.

"We make a great mistake," said Mr. Knott yesterday, "if we look upon these street corner meetings merely as curiosities. They are far from that. They contribute very materially to the prevention of crime, to the inspiration of the friendless and the downhearted, and to the dissemination of a healthy respect for God and country."

BOTTLED MILK NOW UNDER GRAFT CLOUD

Millions of Dollars Profit Said to Have Been Made in Cutting Cream Content.

PLANT INSPECTION ORDERED

BOROUGH INQUIRIES ACTIVE

The Queens Prosecutor Calls More Witnesses for Light on Loose Milk Bootlegging.

An investigation into new frauds, said to involve millions of dollars and having to do with the city's bottled milk supply, will be started today by Dr. Louis I. Harris, Commissioner of Health. The recent activity of the Health Department has been concerned only with loose milk. It is now suspected that there is widespread violation of the law prohibiting the lowering of the butterfat content of bottled milk by artificial means.

Eleven inspectors will start work in this and six other States and in two Canadian Provinces, in an endeavor to check up on the 60,000 dairies and 10,000 creameries from which New York City's supply of bottled milk is received. Dr. Harris said he realized that the force was entirely inadequate for the task and that he would ask for more men. Approximately 1,350,000 quarts of bottled milk are sold in New York City daily, representing 45 per cent. of the milk consumption.

The States and Provinces where the investigation will be conducted are New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, Ontario and Quebec. It will be under the general direction of Hugh W. Taylor, Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the Health Department.

Orders Thorough Inquiry.

In his orders to Mr. Taylor, Dr. Harris said:

"Evidence has been presented to me from various sources that since the State regulations governing the total solid content of milk were changed in 1909, there has been a significant change in the cream layer of milk. It has been widely commented upon that bottled milk, in particular, shows no such thick cream layer as we were wont to see in the days before this law went into effect. As a matter of fact, in many instances, housewives report that the cream layer is scarcely discernible. It is a peculiar coincidence that upon the lowering of the fat standard the cows began to give a distinctly poorer milk, so far as butter fats are concerned.

"It is, of course, conceivable that Holstein cows were purchased to take the place of the breeds that would give a richer milk. If this be the cause, it should be susceptible of proof.

"I have no evidence that would warrant me in charging that the milk is being standardized by mechanical means, so as to abstract a portion of the cream from whole milk so that what remains of the whole milk offered for sale will be just within the law. A minimum standard was designed and intended only to protect the farmer or dairyman from legal action where the butter fat content was low, but it was not intended that a low grade—a minimum standard—should deprive consumers of the butter fat which is of such great nutricious value.

"You are herewith directed to assign such members of your staff as may be best qualified for the purpose to make a thorough investigation of this subject and to report results without delay to me."

Explains the Milk Law.

It was explained by Dr. Harris that, prior to 1909, the law provided that milk for human consumption should contain not less than 12 per cent. of solids. Largely through the efforts of Holstein cattle breeders in that year, the law was changed to make 11½ per cent. Holstein cows, Dr. Harris said, give large quantities of milk, but it is not apt to run over 3 per cent. in butter fat.

As soon as the new law became effective, Dr. Harris said, there was an appreciable decrease in the cream top on all bottled milk. This could be effected either through skimming the cream or by using a separator. Either practice, he said, was unlawful when resorted to for the purpose of reducing the butter fat content.

Although Dr. Harris admitted that he lacked proof, it was said that the practice had become widespread and that the decrease of the layer of cream on the top of milk in New York City milk bottles had resulted in millions of dollars in profits to those who had artificially brought the cream content down to a point where it would just pass the minimum requirements of the law.

It was learned yesterday that sufficient evidence had been obtained to warrant the prosecution of a Jersey City railroad official, who was said to be responsible for the introduction of large quantities of bootleg cream and untagged milk into New York City.

District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe of Queens and his assistant, Peter M. Daly, said they were "entirely satisfied" with the progress of their investigation. They declined to say whether they would present their evidence to the Grand Jury tomorrow. They said they had subpoenaed every one they believed could throw light on the milk situation, including men high in political and financial circles. Some of those who have been called are Joshua Bernstein, a lawyer in Queens; his wife, a sister of Harry Daniger, who pleaded guilty of extortion in the Bronx, and Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, former Health Commissioner.

It became known yesterday that some of the witnesses examined were women said to be on friendly terms with former Health Department officials. It was [illegible] some of them formerly held temporary positions in the Health Department, thereby avoiding the rigid provisions of the Civil Service law.

Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy will instruct the Grand Jury in the Bronx concerning the milk situation tomorrow, when it is expected a decision will be reached concerning the adoption of a new plan for the investigation there, suggested to Justice Levy by District Attorney John E. McGeehan.

PRIEST OPENS FIRE ON MODERN WRITERS

MEXICO ALSO ATTACKED

Judge Talley, In Address at Holy Name Breakfast, Says Her Schools Are Now Atheistic.

Protests against Mexico's clerical policy and against the moral level of the stage were made by speakers yesterday to 4,000 members of the Holy Name Society of the Post Office Department, who held their annual communion breakfast in the Hotel Astor. The members of the society received communion at a mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, celebrated by Cardinal Hayes, and then paraded to the hotel.

The onslaught against the modern play was delivered by the Rev. James M. Gillis of the Paulist Fathers. He named David Belasco and William A. Brady as offenders in the presentation of plays which the priest regarded as immoral. Former Judge Alfred J. Talley assailed the policy of the Calles Administration with respect to clergymen in Mexico. Thomas F. Woodlock, recently appointed a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said that the 4,000 communicants were a challenge to "the Godless epidemic of the times."

"It is a curious fact," said Father Gillis, "that this spectacle, which to us is altogether good, is under suspicion and misunderstood by a great many not of our faith. There are those who profess to see a menace to the Republic in the sight of 4,000 men gathered together in such an affair as this. 'Gathered for what purpose?' they ask. 'Is it political?' 'Positively no,' we respond. And they don't believe us.

"Backbone of Good" for Nation.

"They profess to see in a gigantic Holy Name Society of 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 men throughout the country a menace to the nation. They say you cannot get so many men together withouth an imperial political effect. Every right-minded man knows that, far from being a danger, potential or actual, the Holy Name Society is the very backbone of good for the country. In view of the fact that our acts are misinterpreted, let me briefly show you who I would class as the real enemies of the American Republic.

"The most important group I would call the writing men, the literary fellows who are straining every nerve to foist upon America the ultra-sophistication, the blasé civilization of Europe. There is no simplicity, no old-fashioned morality in their literature. Theirs is the decadent type of old French literature; that is what they are pouring out to poison and stain the mind and character of American youth. They have a contempt for Main Street, meaning, of course, a contempt for the respectable John Smith and wife who love simplicity, honesty and are unsophisticated.

Calls Plays Shameless.

"They prefer Broadway with its dirty plays and indecent, naked revues—the Broadway of shamelessness, where everything goes, where, after seeing a dirty show, the sophisticated New Yorker goes to a rotten night club, where, as we read it, in the midst of drinking and naked dancing, murder has been done at 4 o'clock in the morning.

"David Belasco puts on a dirty play and says he does it because everybody is doing it, and William Brady says 'I'll take off my dirty show if you take off yours.' Does that represent the acme of dramatic ethics? There are your enemies of America. Not 4,000 men going to holy communion."

The priest then assailed the college professors who are preaching "the doctrine that God is dead and religion a fiction."

"If there are any persons," he said, "looking for the enemies of this country, in the spring of the day, let them lay off' us. Let them have wisdom in perception. Let them know that we, Catholic men, who try to keep near our God and to observe the Ten Commandments, are the saviors of civilization."

Commissioner Woodlock said:

"We are often asked why men don't go to church. The trouble with that question is that those who don't do not know that there are some men who do go to church. I find in this morning's phenomenon a direct challenge to the Godless epidemic of the times.

Describes Trouble With the World.

"Call it what you will, the trouble with the world today is what it has been from the beginning of man—original sin. Men have lost the supernatural grace by which passions are controlled. Holy communion, confession—the sacraments are the means by which men control their passions. In the sacrament of penance a man is obliged to face the facts and in communion he receives the bread of life.

"Uncontrolled, men's passions will destroy the world. In all the history of the world there has been no denial of the control, until now—not even in the days of decadent Rome was there such lawlessness and crime. That is why I say that the sight of four thousand men going to the altar of their God is a phenomenon—a sign of the hand of God."

Judge Talley said that the Mexican Constitution of 1917 was "begotten in bigotry for the purpose of driving God out of the country." He denied that it had ever been sanctioned by the Mexican people, and, while he said that he did not argue for the Government to step in, cited cases in the past where the State Department had interested itself in religious persecution in our countries.

"The present Constitution of Mexico was never submitted for adoption by the Mexican people, but was imposed by a military convention controlled by Carranza," said Judge Talley. "Before the United States gave its recognition it asked Mexico if it would grant religious toleration. Mexico answered yes, it would abide by the Constitution of 1857. Carranza arbitrarily suspended that Constitution and imposed the Constitution of 1917, which destroyed all religious toleration. Under it the Church may not hold property, ministers and priests, even native, may not vote or teach or enter a primary school.

"There is no trial by jury for priests. No minister may criticize the laws of the country. Charitable institutions, hospitals, orphanages, seminaries, all are under control of the State. The State Legislatures may prescribe the number of priests allowed to function within this State. Priests and Bishops are never allowed to meet together. Foreign-born priests have been summarily driven out, already to the number of 202. Foreign-born nuns have suffered the same fate, and native religious have been deprived of their homes and schools. The schools have been made atheistic."

KNIGHTS AT COMMUNION.

About 400 members of Cardinal Gibbons Council, No. 497, of the Knights of Columbus, attended the annual communion breakfast yesterday. The men assembled at the clubhouse, Bedford and Tilden Avenues, Brooklyn, and marched to St. Brendan's Church, Avenue E and East Twelfth Street, where the mass was celebrated by Mgr. Hickey.

After the service the members took special cars on the Brighton Beach line of the B. M. T. to the new club building of Columbus Council, Prospect Park and Union Street, where the breakfast was served. The speakers were Mgr. Hickey, Grand Knight Robert Kelly, Deputy John W. Collins, ex-Grand Knight W. J. Ryan and District Deputy John Scanlon. The council plans to break ground on June 5 for a new clubhouse on the site of the present one. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy in a year.

CANADIAN PASTOR DECRIES SMUGNESS

Christ Had No Use for the Perfectly Correct Man, Says the Rev. Mr. Pidgeon.

A spirit of adventure, and a breaking away from routine are not in any way incompatible with a Christian life, the Rev. George P. Pidgeon of Toronto, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, said yesterday in the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street.

"Christ had no use for the 'nice' or perfectly correct man," Dr. Pidgeon added, "and He told the rich young man who came to Him for advice to launch out and break away from the smugness of his environment.

"As Paul said, the ideal life is that one which sees itself in Christ, and which is never satisfied with things easily attained. Like geese raised in a barnyard, who, when their wings are grown, feel a strange instinct to sail away into new and unfamiliar country, so men must go bravely forth to new situations."

DEPLORES BURBANK'S FAITH

Dr. L. W. Warren Says He Tried to Prove God by the Wrong Method.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 18.—"Burbank and His Religion" was the subject of a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Leroy W. Warren at the First Presbyterian Church here today. He said he fully appreciated the scientific advancement and accomplishments of Burbank, but regretted the assumption made by him a short time before his death that he was an infidel.

"The trouble was that Burbank tried to prove God a supernatural person by natural methods, and that is not possible," said the preacher. "Spiritual things must be spiritually proved. Burbank said he believed in Jesus Christ as a man and His works, but did not believe Him to be a person in God, thereby repudiating the doctrine of Christ on which religion is founded."

DISCUSSES MINISTER'S DUTY

The Rev. G. H. Baker, In New Pastorship, Condemns Hypocrisy.

The Rev. Gordon H. Baker preached his first sermon yesterday as pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, Convent Avenue and 145th Street. He was formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church of Schenectady.

"The minister's primary duty," he said, "is to preach the Gospel of the crucified, risen and living Christ. The minister should believe his own message, for no sinners are saved by other people's doubts—not even the minister's. If a minister has no positive message of salvation from sin he should give up preaching. It is nothing short of hypocricy for any man to preach what he does not believe with all his soul."

THINKS WORLD IS BETTER.

Dr. Ribourg Finds Advance Is Slow but the Growth Is Certain.

The Rev. Dr. Albert E. Ribourg, Rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, at 2,067 Fifth Avenue, in his sermon yesterday said:

"The world is better today than it was 2,000 years ago, but it has taken 2,000 years to bring the changes which make it better. A mushroom grows to full maturity in a night; an oak is the product of many years of stubborn conflicts with winds and storms, and so it is with civilization. Men cannot be made good overnight by an Act of Legislature; it takes many years of conflicts with evil, for good to finally prevail."

Warns Potential Prodigal Son Of the False Pride in Strength

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, co-minister of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, addressed a young people's conference there yesterday. The meeting was under the auspices of the Greater New York Federation of Churches and Dr. Poling's sermon was broadcast by WEAF.

"The great mistake of the Prodigal Son," he said, "was not in the fact that he left what he had—indeed, we are told that he carried that along with him. But he did go away from what he might have had, he did sacrifice his future. This should give pause to any fellow who contemplates making the kind of journey that the Prodigal made.

"Who is the potential prodigal? I am; you are. There is both a sound confidence and a false pride in strength. Know your power, but remember where it comes from."

SCORES MORAL TONE OF MODERN FICTION

SEES SOCIETY MENACED

Declares Authors Make Mistake of Viewing Frankness of Speech as Freshness of Vision.

"The sense of moral responsibility is largely acking in modern fiction," said the Rev. Dr. Frank Warfield Crowder in his sermon yesterday in St. James's Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street. The rector is delivering a series of sermons on "Present-Day Problems and Influences."

"There is, it is true, he said, "a very considerable output of some modern novelists which is on a high moral plane. But there is so much of the other kind that the stream of contemporary fiction is muddy and in parts slimy. In some ways it can properly be called pagan, although in other respects it hardly deserves this description, because it is lacking in certain of the nobler qualities of classic paganism. The average novel of today represents a definite revolt against, if not an attack upon, certain things that most of us think are essential to what we call Christian civilization.

"For one thing it is a protest against the conventional decencies of life. That novel is the exception that does not break through ordinary reticence and violate both taste and decorum. Indeed some authors go so far as to assume that in this unblushing exposure they are courageous pioneers of a new order of things and exponents of a true principle of art.

"But the plain and simple fact is that this pseudo-realistic fiction is lamentably lacking in taste. Writers have made a common mistake of these days, that is, that "frankness of speech is equivalent to freshness of vision.'

"This revolt is much more than a protest against the mid-Victorian feeling about these things, in which was so much of foolish prudery and which went on the principle that decency was of more importance than truth. It scorns the idea that reticence on certain physical aspects of life is a quality of fine behavior. In this respect the average novel of today is a menace to social morality."

ATTACKS NEW FREEDOM.

Dr. Bowie Says Many Break One Bondage to Enter Another.

The new intellectual freedom was criticized yesterday by the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, Broadway and Tenth Street, in a sermon in the Chapel at Harvard University. A copy of the sermon was made available here.

"The blunder which many in our time are making," he said, "is at they are trying to find life without knowing that only in a spiritual consciousness can the truest life be found. They are looking for self-expression, but they are forgetting that self-expression does not mean release from one set of old controls in order merely to fall into bondage of a new one. Some of our contemporaries consider themselves emancipated from anything so old-fashioned as the authority of the Bible, and then meekly accept the brazen authority of, let us say, The American Mercury.

"They think they have outgrown the ancient seers and prophets; but an oracle they must have, so they find him in 'Prophet' H. L. Mencken. In literary criticism, in their outlook upon life, and in their standards of values, their minds and spirits are being stereotyped to a common pattern.

"The real freedom which our generation must seek is the liberation of our minds from prejudices whether old or new."

BURBANK A TRUTH SEEKER.

Dr. Simons Defends the Religion of the Great Naturalist.

The religion of the late Luther Burbank was the subject of the Rev. Dr. Minot Simons's sermon yesterday in All Souls' Unitarian Church, Fourth Avenue and Twentieth Street. He said Burbank was a truth seeker.

"Burbank's religion was practical," he added. "He was a lover of his fellowmen and beloved by them. The animating spirit of his life was service, and when we are estimating the religion of a man we should keep in mind the teaching of Jesus, 'By their fruits shall ye know them.' Burbank's creative work was dedicated to the greater well-being of his fellow-men and their debt to him is beyond all estimate."

CRITICIZES MODERN WOMAN.

Rabbi Krass Says Divinity, Not Masculinity, Should Be Her Aim.

The tendency of modern woman to "mimic man" was criticized yesterday morning by Dr. Nathan Krass, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, in a sermon on "Feminism," in which he discussed woman and her relation to marriage and the home. He asserted that "her chief kingdom is the home."

"Feminism," said Dr. Krass, "does not mean to me the effort of woman to usurp the place of man. It means to me womanhood in which not masculinity but divinity predominates. The purpose of woman is not to mimic man but to develop her power of femininity to its fullest extent. Her purpose is not to make masculinity her goal in life. She should preserve her qualities essentially feminine."

TRACES THE NEGRO'S RISE.

Dr. J. H. Randall Says Spiritual Freedom Has Brought Equality.

In a sermon entitled "The New Negro" the Rev. John Herman Randall said yesterday morning in the Community Church, Thirty-Fourth Street and Park Avenue, that the negro of today had achieved a spiritual freedom which was releasing him from a bondage of inferiority and elevating him to a plane of equality and friendliness with all.

Religion Is Not Product of Infancy of Reason, Says Dr. Coit; Calls It Enduring Principle

Dr. Stanton Coit, founder of the University Settlement and director of the Ethical Church in London, took issue yesterday with the statement of Bertrand Russel that religion belongs to the infancy of human reason. Dr. Coit spoke to members of the Brooklyn Society for Ethical Culture at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. He said:

"Religion is indeed at an end if good and bad are to mean the same thing and if there is to be nothing for men to deem as utterly sacred and beyond all price. But if there is anything in the heavens above or on the earth beneath that men can regard as infinitely more important even than life itself, then they will continue to be religious.

"It is in this sense that the Ethical Society is a religious fellowship. The moment you say that something is holy, you mean that it has a boundless importance of real that you base your deepest self-respect upon conformity to it. To have this feeling of absolute principle is to be lifted up and out of oneself to a greatness attainable in no other way.

"Those pleasure-mad people to whom nothing is holy will sooner or later awake to the bottomless emptiness of their lives. When men fully confront what they are with all they ought to be, there can be no other choice but complete self-surrender and obedience to the ideal. Therein is the essence of religion."

WARNS OF DANGERS FROM NATIONALISM

POINTS TO ITALY'S DICTATOR

Suggests Proposed New Church Feast Be Observed Sunday After Ascension Day.

The Pope's recent encyclical letter in which the Pontiff set aside the last Sunday in October as a day to be celebrated by the Roman Catholic Church as the Feast of the Kingdom of Christ, was discussed yesterday by the Very Rev. Howard C. Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in his sermon in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street.

"While we warmly agree with what the Pope has said of the evils of unbridled nationalism," said Dean Robbins, "it is to be noted that these evils are not inherent, but are due to exaggerations or perversions of a sentiment which of itself is not only justifiable, but wholesome, and even sacred. It is only when men make an idol of the State, and put it beyond law, beyond good and evil, beyond all the restraints and safeguards which hedge about our corporate human life, that nationalism degenerates into chauvinism and becomes dangerous.

"This, of course, is just what has happened to Italy at the present time. It is unfortunate that a military dictator should have been permitted to indulge in an impious travesty of the words and commandment of Our Lord 'two eyes for an eye, and a whole set of teeth for a tooth' without being reprimanded.

"In the matter of the proposed Festival of the Kingdom of Christ, we welcome whole-heartedly the emphasis of the encyclical letter upon the Kingdom and the kingly offices of Our Lord.

"As to adopting the last Sunday in October for the observance of the new festival, that is another question. In a matter affecting liturgical worship, every decision should be made after having been considered by all liturgical churches, and upon the basis of ecumenical consent this matter may properly be referred to some such representative body as the Continuation Committee of the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work, or the World Conference on Faith and Order which is to meet in Lausanne in 1927. A date more obviously appropriate would be the Sunday after Ascension Day."

BISHOP STIRES WARNS AGAINST LIP PRAYING

"There is a real danger in coming to church and going through prayers," said Dr. Ernest M. Stires, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Long Island, in his sermon yesterday morning in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, Pacific Street and Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. Dr. Stires visited the parish to confirm fifty-two of its members and urged the congregation not to fall back to the level of convenience in practicing religion. He declared that religion recognized such falling away from its highest ideals as a great weakness.

"It is easy for us to sing our hymns and hail our King when it doesn't cost us anything," he told the congregation.

Addressing particularly the parents, Dr. Stires said:

"The promises of our children are easily made and quickly broken. Their quick enthusiasm in giving a promise turns to tears and humiliation when they find themselves too weak to keep it. But then they develop a self-consciousness, a realization of the powers and limits of their power of will. When the next promise is made, it is based on reality and is generally kept."

Many persons previously confirmed had drawn away from their high ideals, the Bishop declared. "There are many of you who have sold out Jesus Christ for less than thirty pieces of silver," he said. He urged them to reassert their faith with a new knowledge of self-weakness, and said that attitude was full of hope.

Dr. Stires made three suggestions to the parish members he confirmed. He asked them to remind themselves that God was always present, as a means of avoiding temptation, he advised regular prayer and suggested that the parishoners make their prayer a preparation for service.

Straton Finds Vice in Florida.

The Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton spoke last night on current topics in Calvary Baptist Church, West Fifty-seventh Street. "It is a fact," he said, "that the decadent theatrical interests and woman exploiters, the race track gamblers and bootleggers, and all of our law breakers and social parasites of today, have flooded in upon Florida and are seeking there to undermine the moral integrity of the people and their respect for law."

From a bondage of inferiority and elevating him to a plane of equality and friendliness with all.

"This great change has occurred within the last ten years," Dr. Randall said.

DEPLORES BIGOTRY, CALLING IT FUTILE

Dictum That Those Who Take Up Sword Shall Perish by It Cited by Rev. W. T. Walsh.

HE DECRIES PROHIBITION

Says Christ's View of Religion Was That of a Leaven Working Slowly to Raise the Mass.

The futility of intolerance was discussed yesterday by the Rev. William T. Walsh, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Convent Avenue and 141st Street. Among other things, he said:

"There are many who hold that it is impossible for people generally to live in such a world as ours without also being of it. The world, therefore, must be changed. Certain things must be destroyed. There cannot be temperance, they say, in a world that permits alcohol as a beverage. Therefore, destroy alcohol. There cannot be peace in a world that is an armed camp. Therefore, destroy armament. There cannot be equal opportunity in a capitalistic system, say others. Therefore, destroy capitalism. The true religion of Christ, said a dominant Church, cannot exist in a world that allows freedom of thought and speech and worship. Therefore, destroy these things, prohibit them by law.

"But experience teaches that those who use the sword shall perish by the sword. Christ's picture of the world's salvation is that of the slow almost imperceptible influence of leaven, leavening the whole lump; or the seed gradually giving its life to blade and branch and fruit, or finally the picture of the harvest with a separation of the wheat from the tares made manifest."

RANKS MATERIALISM AS FOE OF CHURCH

THINKS HUMILITY IS NEEDED

He Declares That What One Gets Out of Christianity Is a "Matter of Capacity."

The Rev. Dr. Paul Scherer, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, Central Park West and Sixty-fifth Street, yesterday warned against the loss of all capacity for religion. He said:

"People get as much out of Christianity as they can carry, and no more. Two students can take the same course in college and come out with astonishingly different results. Precisely the same wealth is presented to each, but the containers are not of the same size. To save your life you can't get the half-pint head to hold more than a half-pint. The great question is not at all: What is there in science, or literature, or art, or philosophy, or music, or religion? The great question is: How much of it can you hold? There is nothing more natural or inevitable than that you should find over here somebody that regards his religion as by far the most valuable asset of his life, and somebody over there who doesn't believe that it's worth anything. One man has got a barrel-full because he went with a barrel; the other man has got a thimble-full because he went with a thimble. It's all a matter of capacity.

"To be religious you don't have to be anemic, and you don't have to be gullible. You do have to be spiritually minded. The enemy of twentieth century Christianity is not twentieth century science; it's twentieth century materialism. The faith of Jesus Christ and our popular creed of brick and mortar, bayonets and gold can't get along together; one or the other must go. And you do have to walk with a certain humility before the mysteries of life."

SAYS PRIDE CAUSES EVILS.

The Rev. C. E. Russell Recommends Spiritual "Skyline."

"Skylines" of ambition were enumerated yesterday by the Rev. Charles Edward Russell in his sermon in St. Ann's Episcopal Church, St. Ann's Avenue and 140th Street, the Bronx. He said that some New Yorkers had education as their "skyline," and hoped thereby to life themselves from the struggles and the toil of their daily round. He said:

"What we need is a spiritual skyline symbolized in the great Cathedral of St. John the Divine that is slowly rearing its majestic face to Heaven as a token of the eternal God who is above all and over all, manifesting Himself in love, beauty and mystery.

Declares Christ's Simplicity Is an Aid in Our Complex Life

The Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke, former pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, preached there yesterday on "The Simplicity That Is in Christ." He discussed this simplicity as a help in the complicated world in which we live.

"This is a very self-conscious age in which we live," he said. "It is thinking and talking all the time about itself in most exaggerating terms. The pessimists think it is the most rotten of all the ages. The optimists think it is the most wonderful of them all. I agree with neither. There is one adjective that describes it and that is: complicated. It is growing more and more complicated day by day."

ASKS CONTINUED HELP FOR YOUTH OF EUROPE

A plea for the conservation of America's investments in the youth movement of Europe was made in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday morning by the Rev. Dr. Warren L. Rogers, Bishop Coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, who saw a chance for lasting world peace in the results accomplished by the Near East Relief Fund.

"Are you in favor of World Peace?" he asked. "Personally, if there were a war for a just cause I would draw my sword in a minute. But as long as there is a chance for peace, I am for it. Here is the chance. The end of the Near East Relief work among the children of Southern Europe must be world peace and harmonious living together. There can be no other result.

"It is this youth movement that tomorrow must concern itself with the future of Europe. Through the Near East Relief we of America have $81,000,000 invested in that movement in Southern Europe. Sixty per cent. of it is invested in children not yet in their teens. In a few more years they will be ready to stand alone. We can not afford to withdraw now, our investments and their potential results are too great. I am going to stand by."

LIKENS CHRISTIANITY TO AN ADVENTURE

Dr. Grenfell Tells How Religion Is Brought to Fisherfolk of Labrador.

LOVE BIG FACTOR IN WORK

"We Try to Help and Don't Argue About God," Says Philanthropist Decorated by King.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell of the International Grenfell Association which has aided and educated Labrador fishermen for thirty-four years, preached yesterday morning in the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, at Sixtieth Street. In describing the work of his association he said that real Christianity was an adventure, rather than an affirmation of a religious creed.

"People who go down to the sea in ships?" he said. "Believe me, those who know them best love these men for their sincerity and their devotion. We don't go down to teach them to be Christians, we don't argue about God, but we try to help them in every way we can. Labrador is a country in which you can learn a great deal. On its coast, cut off from a confusion of interests, it is possible to see things clearly.

"Perhaps the politicians and diplomats of today believe that the Kingdom of God will come through law and order and through law enforcement. But if the world is to be saved by the individual, then the force that is infinitely greater—the force of love—will be the means of saving it.

"I think that the pessimism of the world is half its trouble. We have an inclination to think that we are the best people of the world. We say to the Asiatic races, 'You are not good enough to marry with us.' We will send you preachers to talk to you about God—but these are our immigration laws.'

Dr. Grenfell, who is a medical missionary, not affiliated in his work with any church organization, was created a Companion of the Knightly Order of St. Michael and St. George by the King of England.

UPHOLDS PASTORAL OFFICE.

Rev. J. P. M'Comas Recalls Christ Bade Priests Feed His Flock.

"The Good Shepherd" was the title of the sermon preached yesterday in St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, Vesey Street and Broadway, by the vicar, the Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McComas, who said in part:

"Jesus Christ commanded His priests to feed His flock, to go before them, to protect and to defend, as did He. The pastoral office is necessary to bring out religion in men, as heat is needed to develop the life which is already in the seed.

HAYES'S TALK OPENS CATHOLIC APPEAL

$1,000,000 IS SOUGHT

Rev. J. C. Fleming Says Organization Is Second to None—House to House Canvass Begins.

The annual Catholic Charities appeal was opened yesterday with services in St. Patrick's Cathedral where Cardinal Hayes addressed 7,000 of the 16,000 workers for the appeal who will try to raise $1,000,000 by next Sunday when the drive for funds will end.

Describing the scene in the crowded cathedral as "inspirational" Cardinal Hayes went on, "the Catholic Charities organization is close to my heart and it is wonderful to know that 16,000 workers will carry on the appeal."

Urging the workers to do their best, the Cardinal told them that the appeal gave a wonderful opportunity to work for Jesus Christ. He spoke of the service performed by Catholic Charities and said that managers of the appeal hoped to obtain $1,000,000 this year.

Last year's appeal brought $959,689 from 249,943 subscribers in the Archdiocese of New York. The funds raised each year are distributed among 200 Catholic relief agencies which have a total expenditure of more than $7,000,000 annually.

The Rev. Joseph C. Fleming, Superior of the New York Apostolate Mission, delivered a sermon on charity. Father Fleming said:

"The State Board of Charities took cognizance of the Catholic charities six years ago, when their report stated Catholic charities was the most significant thing in the field of charity endeavor for the last year. How many of them, if any, had any idea that this organization was meant for time and eternity? It is only one whose eyes have been lifted up by fate who can begin to contemplate what is behind charity.

"In the field of social science, organization is the chief means for true success. Our organization is second to none; we have been well tried. We have not only organization, but we have that unlimited confidence in our faith, which is more in proportion.

"Richness of faith is that great supernatural asset that we possess which gives Catholic charities thorough meaning and power. We belong to an organization that made the Prince of Paupers its head. It has only one text book, as it has only one method—that is, the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"The program of Catholic charities is not the invention of the human mind, or something new in social science, but something Christ himself established. It is the living, breathing pulse of the Redeemer."

The workers who filled the Cathedral represented 329 parishes in the archdiocese. With the rest of the 16,000 volunteer workers they began a house to house canvass of Catholic in the arch-diocese last night.

Among the parish delegations that assembled at St. Patrick's Cathedral was the auxiliary of Holy Trinity Church, 1 West Eighty-second Street. This parish has been the banner parish in the Catholic charities campaign since it was organized. Last year the quota for the church was $12,000, which was tripled by the drive workers before the campaign closed.

OIL OPERATOR MISSING FROM NORFOLK STEAMER

Alfred H. Ramage Leaves $3,000 in Liberty Bonds in Cabin, Addressed to Friend.

NORFOLK, Va., April 18 (AP).—Police continued searching today for Alfred H. Ramage, 38 years old, wealthy oil man of Missouri and Pennsylvania, who was missing from the steamer Northland when it arrived here on Saturday from Washington. Believing the man may have fallen or leaped overboard, the authorities have asked the Coast Guard to be on the lookout for his body while they endeavor to find trace of him on shore.

He was missed when a steward went to call him to prepare to leave the steamer. All of his clothing was in place with the exception of a bathrobe and a pair of shoes, which he was wearing when seen on the deck earlier in the morning.

Ramage, whose home is at Joplin, Mo., boarded the steamer at Washington, and was last seen on the ship early yesterday morning just before it docked here. Personal effects found in his stateroom included money, a watch and $3,000 in Liberty bonds, with a note addressed to John H. Capelli, Joplin, reading:

"For you, Cappy. My blessings be with you. ALF."

Another letter was addressed to his mother, Mrs. S. Y. Ramage, at Pinehurst, N. C. Ramage was en route to Pinehurst to visit his parents. He is thought to have suffered a nervous breakdown recently because of overwork.

OIL CITY, Pa., April 18 (AP).—Alfred Hull Ramage was born Feb. 14, 1888, in Oil City and was educated at Amherst College. He went to Joplin, Mo., to take charge of a lead and zinc mine about 1910, and had since been located there with the exception of the period of the World War, when he served as a Lieutenant in the aviation division. He also was interested in oil properties in Oklahoma, Arkansas and New Mexico.

He left Joplin on a business trip to the East on April 10, and was in Pittsburgh last Monday, leaving for Washington on Monday evening.

MOTHER OF CHEOPS BURIED IN GIZA TOMB

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 18.—A communiqué states that the Harvard University-Boston Museum expedition has been working steadily on a mass of inlays found intact in the royal tomb found at Giza. A number of the patterns have been reconstructed, consisting of pieces of blue and black faience, inlaid in gold frames in new and unexpected designs.

Early in March the presence was noted of solid gold hieroglyphs which had been set in ebony and adorned the upright back of a chair. As the work progressed these hieroglyphs were found to lie in four identical lines of inscriptions, which gave the titles of a Queen who was a King's mother, a King's wife, a King's daughter, and thus held the highest position which a woman could hold in the pyramid age.

But the ends of all the four lines were obscured by decayed wood and displaced inlays.

On April 14 the ends of two of the lines were finally read.

The Queen buried in the alabaster sarcophagus in the tomb is Hetepet-Heres, probably the mother of Cheops, one of the Queens of Sneferu, and the daughter of the Pharaoh immediately preceding Sneferu.

She was of the old royal family of the third dynasty and it was clearly through her hereditary right that the Kings of the fourth dynasty founded their claim to the throne.

The eldest daughter of Cheops was also called Hetepet-Heres, and was no doubt named for her grandmother. This later Hetepet-Heres was married to a great noble named Ankhpaef and buried with her husband in the largest of the known mastabas of the old kingdom, about 100 yards east of the tomb of her grandmother.

MAX REINHARDT MAY DIRECT AT HOLLYWOOD

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—According to the Montag Morgen, Professor Max Reinhardt has accepted a contract to direct motion pictures at Hollywood at a huge salary. He is expected to go to America in the Autumn.

About two years ago, when Marion Davies was acting in New York in the picturization of "Janice Meredith," there was a report that William R. Hearst had engaged Max Reinhardt to direct films for his film company, the Cosmopolitan. It was finally declared that Mr. Hearst and Mr. Reinhardt could not agree on terms, although at the time rumor had it that Mr. Hearst's offer was something close to $10,000 a week.

A representative of the Cosmopolitan Pictures Corporation said last night that he doubted the report from Berlin, as he had heard nothing recently concerning the engaging of Mr. Reinhardt to make film productions for Cosmopolitan.

One of the undertakings which gained considerable prestige for Mr. Reinhardt in this country was his direction of "The Miracle," which was presented by Morris Gest at the Century Theatre.

CONCERT BY YOUNG MEN.

Symphony Orchestra Shows Results of Careful Preparation.

The Young Men's Symphony Orchestra, founded by Alfred Lincoln Seligman and now in its twenty-fourth season, gave a subscription concert at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon under the direction of Paul Henneberg. Sol Rudeh was the soloist, in Max Bruch's violin concerto in G minor. The orchestral numbers were the overture from "Der Freischütz." Beethoven's Eighth symphony and Smetana's symphonic poem "Vltava."

The orchestra played enthusiastically and evidently had put a great deal of work into the preparation for the concert. Beethoven's Eighth symphony began with some roughness in the allegro, but the orchestra sounded a milder note in the second and third movements. At the conclusion the hearty applause of the audience indicated a recall for the conductor and the rising of the orchestra.

Mr. Ruden was recalled twice when he had finished the Bruch concerto. He displayed discipline and valuable qualities of tone and execution. The orchestra gave him good support.

The Smetana symphonic poem closed the concert. The flow of the river and its torrential climax were given with unmistakable realism by the instrumentalists.

ELMAN PLAYS FAREWELL.

Violinist's Admirers Fill Carnegie Hall at His Last Recital.

Mischa Elman's admirers filled Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon, as if mindful that the same cool, clear weather which lured thousands out of doors was equally favorable to fiddle strings. Mr. Elman was in capital form for his season's farewell, and the violin under his hands spoke eloquently in familiar music such as the unaccompanied "Chaconne" of Bach.

With the player's sister, Lisa Elman, at the piano, the matinee opened with Beethoven's sonata in D, No. 1. Joseph Bonime later assisted in Bruch's G minor concerto, arrangements by Franko and Joachim, an excerpt from Ernest Bloch's "Baal Shem" and Saint-Saëns's "Rondo Capriccioso." An applauding house won seven encores.

Elman has announced plans for limiting his earlier activities in America next season to a first tour of the Elman Quartet. After December he will go to Europe, South Africa and the Orient for two years to come.

GIVE "ART ANTICS OF 1926."

With the "Art Antics of 1926," presented last night at the Ritz Theatre, the Three Arts Club continued its drive for the new clubhouse made necessary by recent expansion of the organization. While no admission was charged for the performance, a collection was taken up. The objective of the drive is $65,000.

The program of the Art Antics consisted of satirical thrusts at plays of the season. "Outside Looking In At Us," "That's Craig's Wife," "On Tip Toes," "Oh! Goat Song," "These Charming People in a Vortex," "The Vanished American" and "Half Cast by the Way" were some of the skits, written, staged and acted by members of the club to "glorify the Three Arter." Princess Te Ata, daughter of a Chickasaw of Oklahoma, showed talent in both comedy and drama.

The Handsome Barber.

A SOCIAL CELEBRITY, with Adolphe Menjou, Louise Brooks, Ehlie Lawson, Rose Davis, Hugh Huntley, Chester Conklin, Fresmia Wood, Josephine Drake and Ida Waterman, adapted from a story by Monte M. Katterjohn, directed by Malcolm St. Clair; overture, "Roberjere"; "Pack and White," a monofilm; "The Clarion Trumpeters"; Harry E. Murtaugh, organist; "Frank Camoria's offering, "A Bird Fantasy;" "Rough and Ready Romeos," an "Aesop Fable." At the Rivoli.

A gentle strain of pathos worthy of O. Henry accompanies the adroitly-directed and skilfully acted comedy in "A Social Celebrity," the new picture at the Rivoli in which Adolphe Menjou is starred. Curiously enough, that clever comedian, Chester Conklin, who hitherto has been conspicuous in low farces, furnishes the sentimental note; his imposing mustache and familiar spectacles help in his excellent characterization of an old barber in a small town who finds that his business drops to nothing after his romantic son leaves for New York.

New York gains its place in the sun as a film city in this production, for besides other views there are Central Park, the Plaza Hotel and the Park Lane, an agreeable change from Hollywood's low buildings and wide thoroughfares.

Mr. Menjou's part is that of Max Haben, the son of John Haben. Mr. Conklin officiates in the role of the father, who, when nobody is looking deceitfully uses a safety razor to shave himself. Max's ability as a barber is not confined to male chins and haircuts, for he also is known as the best "bobber" in town. Before the young man leaves for Gotham, the shop's shelves are filled with shaving mugs, but soon after his departure these steady customers dwindle gradually until the old barber gazes mournfully at a solitary mug, and that is his own.

This light but pleasing story was adapted from one written by Monte M. Katterjohn. Soon after the preliminary scenes, a Mrs. Jackson-Greer is introduced. She is so struck by the way Max trims her hair that she suggests that he ought to go to New York and open a "beauty shop." She even volunteers to help him. Now Max is very much in love with Kitty Laverne, who had left his father's employ to go to New York. Therefore he decides to throw in his lot with others in a big city; but soon after his arrival he is forced to take employment in a busy barber's shop. He is sent one day to shave one of the guests in a room of a hotel, and this customer is surprised to see such a handsome barber, and he comments upon Max's appearance while the barber is preparing his razor.

A telephone message from a hostess announces to the man who is about to be shaved that Count Havare de Maxim cannot be present at a dinner the woman is giving, and the disappointed social light wants somebody urgently to take the Count's place. Hence Max is selected to go to the gathering arrayed in impeccable evening clothes topped off with a fur coat. He is introduced as a Count and instantly becomes very popular with the other guests. Unfortunately, Mrs. Jackson-Greer appears upon the scene, but after frowns and grimaces from Max she shakes his hand and informs her hostess that she has known the "Count" since he was quite a little "shaver."

Malcolm St. Clair, who won his golden spurs as the director of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," displays remarkable ability in portraying the thoughts of his characters in a distinctly entertaining fashion, whether it is by means of gradual close-ups or scenes of a sensible length in which the players have ample time to register some particular individuality.

In the first chapter Mr. St. Clair takes things a little too slowly, but there is no gainsaying the fact that he elicits personality from the performers, which enhances the interest in the narrative. He makes, with the assistance of Mr. Conklin's capable acting, a sound sympathetic character out of the old father. He also inspires Mr. Menjou and Louise Brooks in their respective roles. Incidentally, Miss Brooks, who impersonates the heroine, sometimes reminds one a little of Beatrice Lillie.

Some of the subtitles in this feature are especially good. There are a couple of captions in French, supposed to be addressed to Max when he is posing as a French Count. He looks dumbfounded when a Frenchman says to him:

"Qu'en penses vous de la crise financière, Monsieur?"

Frank Cambria presents a rather interesting stage offering called, "A Bird Fantasy." Another number on the surrounding program is a DeForest Phonofilm entitled, "Puck and White."

Marion Davies as a Prince.

BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK, with Marion Davies, Antonio Moreno, Creighton Hale, Roy D'Arcy, Ibert Gran, Paulette Duval, Max Barwyn and Charles Clary, adapted from George Barr McCutcheon's novel, directed by Sidney Franklin; overture, "Fourth Symphony," Tchaikowsky; "Up the Waters of Minnetonka," a Burton B. Carrick production; Doris Niles, "Indian Sun Dance"; "A Night of Love," with Gladys Rice and William Boyce, "Will o' the Wisp," with Albertina Vitak and ballet corps. At the Capitol.

Although Marion Davies, in a somewhat free film translation of George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly of Graustark," is undeniably good-looking while masquerading as Prince Oscar in well-tailored uniforms, she is much more attractive when she returns to feminine frills. As the young man she has her hair cut closely without a scintilla of a wave and her appearance is further enhanced by the jaunty angle at which she wears her military cap. But she is really very pretty as a girl.

This picture is produced with stunning uniforms and costumes, compelling scenic effects and elaborate settings. In the part of Beverly Calhoun, Miss Davies is in her element, and she displays no mean ability in the handling of the rôle. She looks petulant, shocked, and mildly frightened in turn. During the more or less forced impersonation of the Prince, she sometimes appears to enjoy the idea, but on other occasions she finds herself in awkward situations, some of which are brought about by General Marianx, the crafty villain. It is he who decides that the Prince must preside at a dinner of the officer's mess, when the dandies of the Graustarkian armed forces are in the habit of drinking three toasts, the last one calling for the draining of the tankards. Beverly spills most of her wine, but Marianx will not be cheated, so he orders a menial to fill the receptacle again. This results in Beverly being in a swirling condition following the last toast.

An amusing scene is where Beverly is playing chess with the gallant Prince Danton. As a girl, she has arranged to meet him at 8 o'clock that evening. As the young Prince, she insists that he finish the game, and when he calls check-mate she tantalizes him further by moving one of the pieces while he is not looking and then endeavors to make him continue the game, being albeit surfeited with joy that he is so anxious to see her as the young woman.

Her first appearance in feminine raiment is accomplished in an artful manner. Marianx plots to have her, or him, flirt with a vampire named Carlotta. Beverly suggests to Carlotta that they go in the swimming pool. Carlotta changes to her bathing suit, and the instant she leaves her cabin Beverly enters it and emerges in a few minutes clad in Carlotta's fur-trimmed silk dress. And not long after that Prince Danton, not knowing that Beverly is the same person to whom he has been talking, falls madly in love with her. Apparently the only excuse for his not recognizing Beverly is because her countenance is slightly concealed by a dainty lace mask.

Among the other numbers on the interesting program are "Will o' the Wisp," with Albertina Vitak and the Capitol ballet, and Gladys Rice and William Robyn in a presentation called "A Night of Love."

OPERA HEAD ARRESTED.

Then Pays Singer of New York Civic Company in Charlotte, N. C.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 18 (AP).—Robert Seelay, President of the New York Civic Opera Company, which last night concluded a three-day engagement here, was arrested early today, just as he was about to board a train for New York, on a warrant sworn out by Lois Ewell, opera singer, who used this method, she said, to obtain compensation for her appearances here.

Seelay paid her at the train and gave a small bond for his appearance in Recorder's Court here tomorrow morning. His business assistant, George Gordon of New York, meanwhile had been seeking Miss Ewell for an hour to deliver to her the money which Seelay had given to him for her, Gordon explained.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The only unmistakable inference to be drawn from last week's markets was that spontaneous activity on the Stock Exchange, whether through buying or selling, had come to a halt. Whether it is destined to be revived in either direction depends on developments not yet unfolded in the general situation. But experience is unanimous in teaching that the usual tendency, after such sweeping movements as have stirred up the markets of the past six months, is at least a temporary lapse into apathy and inertia. This is why the falling of a full day's business on the Stock Exchange, a week ago, below a million shares for the first time since last Summer, and the shrinkage of Saturday's transactions to the smallest total of any day since October, 1924, were accepted as natural incidents of the period.

It is so long, however, since the speculative market has been allowed a breathing-space to stop and consider things, that it may require some time for inactivity of the sort to be recognized as a continuing condition; indeed, the sudden and violent stirring about of prices by last week's not very effective "bear demonstration" appeared to Wall Street like return to the accustomed order. Yet there are always intervals in which the markets can discover no immediate cause for changing prices and, however distasteful it may be to speculative Wall Street, are compelled to stand quietly by and watch for actual developments.

The surplus of imports in our foreign trade, which has now continued without interruption during the whole of 1926 to date, has been discussed in what may be described as a purely perfunctory manner. Before the war, an excess of imports over exports was usually interpreted to mean that something was wrong. Since the country then had to provide a large surplus of merchandise exports in order to meet its obligations to Europe on other accounts, reversal of the merchandise balance usually foreshadowed gold exports, sometimes with unpleasant consequences on bank reserves. Under present circumstances the United States has no foreign debit balance to meet, except such as may be created by large advances of capital to foreign borrowers, and the problem of our gold holdings has been, not how to preserve or increase the existing American stock of gold but how to distribute it judiciously.

It was therefore natural that a series of monthly "import surpluses" in our foreign trade with merchandise should be regarded with equanimity. On the other hand, an excess of imports resulting from decrease in our export trade would not be taken kindly in the industrial markets, nor would a large increase of purely competitive imports. All of these considerations have entered into the discussion; which, however, has at no time been animated.

It is doubtful if the $124,000,000 excess of imports in the first quarter of 1926 throws much light on the problem of Europe's payment of its current indebtedness to us in merchandise. The detailed statement of exports and imports for February has just been published; it shows that both the decrease in exports for that month and the increase in imports (which together resulted in $21,565,000 excess of imports) were occasioned by a very few products. Exports in February were $27,822,000 less than the year before, but shipments of cotton alone were $43,643,000 smaller and shipments of grain were down $15,592,000. Except for those two branches of trade, therefore, our exports must have increased, and so in fact they did, notably in manufactured goods, of which shipments of iron and steel products alone increased $5,291,000. As for the $54,782,000 increase over 1925 in February's imports, nearly the whole of it is accounted for by $40,201,000 larger importation of crude rubber and $12,837,000 increase in silk. Our import of textile and metal manufactures actually decreased; the only other item of large increase was coffee, of which we bought abroad $8,044,000 more than in the same month last year.

Of all the products cited, rubber is the only one whose influence can be taken for granted as continuous. An abundant grain harvest this year would change the showing of that product; a small crop of cotton, with the resultant effect on prices, would remove another cause for decreased exports. The abnormally great increase in value of imported rubber has been partly a matter of higher prices, but much more a consequence of an increase of one-third in the quantity imported. That is only a sidelight on the immense American demand for motor-car appliances.

It would be difficult to reason out, from this array of causes, a permanent change in the balance of merchandise trade; that will have to come from other influences. It may, however, be argued that the existing changes, even though largely due to temporary circumstances, at least show tendencies. It has been rather widely believed that, with the intensive activities of foreign agriculture, our export trade in grain should normally grow smaller. If cotton culture is not again put out of order by insect pests, the price should not return to the high level of the last few years. So long, moreover, as the United States continues in high prosperity, import of foreign products such as silk and rubber, which contribute to the wants of a well-to-do community, will cut an important figure on the balance-sheet.

Crop Outlook in Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—Winter crop reports continue to show all the principal grains in better than "middling" condition, but less satisfactory than in April, 1925.

LONDON HOPES FOR COAL TRADE PEACE

Financial Market Considers Outlook Favorable If Dispute Can Be Adjusted.

INVESTORS' ARE NERVOUS

Offering of New Loans Held Up by the Labor Deadlock—Revival Likely Unless Negotiations Fail.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 18.—Despite the appearance of deadlock at which the coal mining crisis has arrived, there was a more cheerful feeling in financial circles last week. This was especially true of the stock market. The idea seems to be that all concerned in the coal negotiations, while apparently prepared to make little concession, are really thoroughly alive to the fact that a resort to extreme measures for forcing victory for either side would prove so disastrous to the whole industry, and to the country generally, that a settlement will be effected before the time limit is up.

Brokers were saying at the end of the week that when the markets "get this coal dust out of their eyes," they will see a prospect of entirely pleasing nature. For weeks past a stream of investment money has been held back by fears of a labor upheaval, starting with the coal strike, while a quiet but steady liquidation has been in progress owing to vague talk of a "revolution," which some people in responsible positions tended to foster by the expression of too outspoken opinions.

Hopes and Misgivings.

Nobody really believed in such talk, but the timid investor undoubtedly has been busy making his resources more liquid. If real peace is secured in the coal industry, there is certain to be a sharp turnabout in the market, with such a revival in business as has not been experienced for a long time.

A coal settlement which should leave dissatisfaction behind it would cramp the markets more than ever, simply because there will still be the fear that trouble lies ahead. Speculative investors, however, are laying their plans as if a real industrial peace is coming and are just waiting for the "coal storm" to blow over. No new securities have been issued since the week before Easter. This inactivity is normal at the holiday period, although on this occasion it has been emphasized by the coal crisis.

Plans for New Loans.

Many new capital issues have been prepared and, if industrial conditions develop favorably, they will feature the financial market during the next three months. The Glasgow Corporation is about to issue £3,000,000 in 5 per cents. at par. Rumors, however, to the effect that new issues will include another £5,000,000 instalment of Greek Refugee 7s are quite incorrect.

Currency notes outstanding at the end of the week aggregated £295,314,070 compared with £297,728,098 one week ago, and £295,337,267 two weeks ago. The circulation is now contracting owing to the close of the Easter holiday season. The aggregate of one week ago was the highest of the year; the lowest was £284,178,770 of the week ended Feb. 19.

MANY DIVIDENDS PASSED BY GERMAN COMPANIES

No Payment by 68 Out of 165 Reporting Corporations—Conserving Resources.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—Out of 165 corporations which have thus far published reports for 1925, dividends were passed by sixty-eight. This is practically the same proportion as in 1924, but is much worse than in the years immediately preceding the war, when only 1 per cent. of the German corporations passed dividends.

It is pointed out, however, that shipping companies and other concerns which have lately passed dividends had mostly earned sufficient profits to make possible a liberal writing-off policy, thereby strengthening themselves for the future.

EUROPE'S CROP OUTLOOK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 18.—At the present time prospects for the harvest of Central Europe are only moderately satisfactory. Some decrease in estimates has resulted from a dry spell and the general outlook is certainly less favorable than it was at this time last year.

The Vienna wheat market is rising, because of smallness of available supplies. The market now brings 21 to 23 schillings per hundredweight, as against 19 to 20 last Autumn and Winter.

FRENCH DEBT NEGOTIATIONS

Financial Paris Thinks They Will Be Resumed After Vote on Italy.

PARIS, April 18.—It is generally believed in financial circles here to be certain that the Washington debt negotiations will be resumed. The conferences are expected to begin again immediately after your Senate's vote on the Italian debt settlement.

Furthermore, it is expected that a speedy arrangement will then be arrived at.

TRADE BALANCE FOUND HEAVY AGAINST ITALY

ROME, April 18.—The first quarter of 1926 shows for Italian trade a decrease of 57,000,000 lire in exports and an increase of 221,000,000 in imports. The surplus of imports for the period stands at 1,716,000,000, against only 1,407,000,000 in the same period a year ago. Although this result is disappointing in view of the more favorable harvests of last Autumn, it is readily explained by several circumstances.

In the first three months of 1925 Italy's trade with Germany showed an export surplus of eighty-eight millions, whereas the same period of 1926 produced an import surplus of 264 millions. A similar change has occurred in Italian trade with France, and these changes are ascribed to the boycott by Germany of Italian agricultural goods, which have been replaced by Spanish products, and the depreciation of the French franc.

Comparison of imports with the same quarter of last year shows increasing demand for raw materials. For instance, import of coal increased from 1,233,000 tons to 1,575,000, of copper ore from 86,000 to 132,000 of steel ignots from 8,000 to 110,000, of iron and steel bars, from 149,000 to 216,000, of cotton bars, from 149,00 to 216,000, of cotton from 433,000 to 503,000, of wool from 68,000 to 77,000, and of rubber from 16,000 to 19,600.

On the other hand, importation of certain important foodstuffs has shown a marked decline, wheat having fallen from 279,000 tons to 163,000, sugar from 23,000 to 2,000 and frozen meats from 3,000 to 2,000.

GERMAN COURT UPHOLDS VALORIZATION STATUTE

Appeal of Italian Holder of German Bonds Rejected—May Apply to League.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—The Court of Appeals has rejected the plea in the test case brought by an Italian citizen that the republic must valorize imperial pre-war loans to 100 per cent., on the ground that the valorization law of July, 1925, does not apply to foreigners. The court decided that the loans are subject exclusively to German law, which makes no exception in regard to foreigners.

The Italian contention that the valorization law is unconstitutional, the court added, "has not been proved and the petitioner has also failed to present any claim under general international law." The court further declared that if allied citizens base a claim to 100 per cent. valorization on the Versailles Treaty they must apply to the Mixed Arbitration Court, which handles treaty claims.

TARIFF WAR THREATENS IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 18.—The question of import tariffs between the Central European countries has again become urgent. Rumania has advanced many duties to as great an extent, in some instances, as 600 per cent. and this has apparently hit the Austrian metal industry. Bulgaria, by decree, has virtually put a higher tariff into force before the bill to that effect has been adopted by the Parliament.

As a result of this new situation the Austrian Government, hitherto rather leaning in the direction of free trade, has introduced revised tariffs raising all duties about 25 per cent. Some of the increases proposed are designed as a weapon for use in the forthcoming negotiations with Germany and Czechoslovakia, others fulfill the wishes of Austrian farmers for increased duties on cattle, butter, hogs, grease, rye, milk and frozen meat. The proposed increase in duties on dyes, petroleum and oil products is particularly heavy.

GOLD COMING TO LONDON.

£700,000 to Arrive From Transvaal in the Next Week.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 18.—During the next week £700,000 gold is to arrive in the open London market from South Africa, this being the first important shipment since early last month. The export demand is at present light and it is, therefore, possible that the Bank of England will secure a considerable portion of this new gold.

The Bank again took in no gold during the past calendar week. Withdrawals were £104,000, of which Holland took £5,000, the balance going to unstated destinations.

MARKET HIGHER AT ROME.

Industrial Shares Advance, but Public Securities Decline.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 18.—The Italian stock market last week witnessed a light volume of business but with improving prices, especially in the industrial stocks. Government securities on the other hand reacted moderately.

The trend of the wholesale price index in Italy has closely followed the variations of the lira since June, 1925, when the purchasing value of the currency fell to 14.6 centimes, whereas in March of the present year it was reckoned at 15.62. In the same month of 1924 it stood at 15.96.

SLOW RECOVERY DISAPPOINTS BERLIN

UNEMPLOYMENT IS LARGE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—The trade situation in Germany continues to improve, but the slowness of recuperation has begun to arouse considerable distrust. This was emphasized last week by the declaration of the Prussian Ministry that the next Winter is likely to see unemployment at least equal to and possibly exceeding that of last year.

The actual decline in unemployment from the highest point of last Winter has been proportionately much smaller than it was in the Winter preceding. The improvement has in fact been so small that it could be largely explained by the usual seasonal influences without assuming any fundamental increase in industrial activity. The report just issued as of April 1 shows 1,942,000 laborers out of work, or only 117,000 less than at the highest point.

Trade Uncertainties.

As for the trade situation itself, the only metal branch to show increased demand has been sheets. The textile position is undoubtedly improved, but the past few months has shown a large increase in textile imports from England, and apprehensions were occasioned by the reported demand of English manufacturers of knitted textiles for import duties.

England at present takes between one-third and one-half of Germany's exports. The slowness of industrial recovery is illustrated by pig iron production, which in March reached 716,654 metric tons, as against 990,606 in March of 1925, and an average monthly output of 848,000 last year.

Effects of Easy Money.

On the other hand, the money situation continues extremely favorable, with day-to-day money at 4 and 5 per cent., and the private discount rate reduced to 4⅞, with a 4½ per cent. rate really in force. The market for new securities has also shown further improvement.

The Intermunicipal Union's 8 per cent. home loan was heavily oversubscribed, with the result that a banking syndicate is taking up a second series of the same bonds at a slightly higher price.

IMPORT SURPLUS AGAIN IN TRADE OF FRANCE

Quarter's Excess 1,585,000,000 Francs, Against 1,032,000,000 Export Surplus in 1925.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 18.—The foreign trade returns of France for March again show a surplus of imports, as has been shown in every monthly statement since last August. The March figures show imports of 5,096 million francs, representing an increase of 1,777 millions over the preceding March. Exports were 4,960 millions, an increase of 1,205 million francs. The surplus of imports for March, therefore, was 135,000,000 francs, comparing with an import excess of 525,600,000 francs in February and an export surplus of 455,500,000 in March of last year.

For the quarter imports have footed up 14,822 million francs, an increase of 499 millions over 1925, while exports were 13,237 millions, an increase of 2,377 millions. The import surplus for the quarter has therefore been 1,585 millions, against an export surplus of 1,032 millions in the same quarter last year. During the same three months of 1913 imports exceeded exports by 476 millions.

The fact that the increased valuations of exports and imports have not been due altogether to higher values is shown by the statistics of quantities, which show increase of 279,286 tons in imports for the quarter and of 76,797 tons in exports. As compared with the same quarter of 1913 the quarter's imports showed increase of 1,311,837 tons and exports an increase of 3,203,305.

LONDON, April 18.—Pig iron production in Great Britain during March totaled 868,800 tons, against 802,000 in February and 807,000 in March, 1925. The 1925 monthly average was 819,700 tons. Steel output was 784,100 tons, against 703,800 in February and 684,700 in March, 1925, and a 1925 monthly average of 816,400 tons.

Furnaces in blast at the end of March aggregated 151, being an increase of five for the month.

MOSCOW BOURSE CLOSES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—As a result of the demoralization in the tchervonetz, the Moscow Bourse has closed down. The danger does not appear to lie in absolute currency inflation, because the circulation of all Russian currencies combined has been rather steadily decreasing and in March fell further by 41,000,000 rubles to 1,304,000,000.

It is the persistent rise in commodity prices which has caused uneasiness.

LONDON WATCHES HER EXCHANGE MARKETS

Credit Still Indirectly "Rationed"—Conjecture on Coal Strike and Sterling Rate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 18.—The foreign exchange situation is attracting more attention than for some time past owing to the recent weakening of sterling. That market is watched more closely since sentiment has been affected by the mental picture of England in the throes of an industrial upheaval following the coal strike. It is quite unnecessary to stress the bad effect which a breakdown of our export trade, as a result of a prolonged cessation of work in the coal fields, would have upon the exchange situation.

For this reason the money market is watching coal developments with keen anxiety, although hoping strongly for the best. This underlying hopefulness is evidenced in the absence of any advance in the discount rates, which are still more than one-half of 1 per cent. under the bank rate. The immediate future is so charged with possibility, however, pleasant and unpleasant, that the mony market is restricting its activities to a considerable degree.

Credit is also still being rationed as a part of the policy to keep the bank rate effective, thereby supporting sterling. This rationing is not done directly but indirectly by the Bank of England, which, by reducing or increasing its holdings of securities, contracts or adds to the supply of credit. That control over the money market will undoubtedly be maintained until such time as the gold standard is working normally, which cannot be until the present unbalanced state of world finance gives place to stability. The easier tendency of money rates in New York is noted with satisfaction, but it is not held to be an excuse for relaxing those precautions here by which alone steddiness in sterling can be maintained.

AUSTRIA TO ASK POWER TO FLOAT NEW LOAN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 18.—It is announced that at the June session of the League of Nations the Austrian Government intends to demand restoration of freedom to raise public loans after discontinuance of the international finance control. According to the Neue Freie Presse, the plan contemplates the raising of a large loan secured on the Federal Railways, the proceeds to be used for reconstruction purposes.

Consent of the Reparations Commission and of the thirteen so-called "relief States," including the United States, will be required before this arrangement can be put through.

BREAK AND RECOVERY ON BERLIN STOCK MARKET

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—The Berlin Boerse experienced sharp ups and downs of prices during the past week. On Wednesday prices declined heavily, the more active stocks falling 4 to 5 points, but next day a substantial recovery occurred, followed by a slight further rise on Friday.

Strength was most conspicuous in the electro-technical stocks. Shipping stocks had been ignored and there was considerable foreign selling. Even during reactions, however, the Boerse showed a resisting power, which was partly due to several favorable dividends recently announced for 1925.

Business sentiment is just now largely under the influence of the varying reports dabled daily concerning the prospects of the American bill to restore sequestrated German property. Last week this played a very considerable part in the securities market.

MARKETS OF MIDDLE EUROPE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 18.—Influenced by the hesitant attitude of the Berlin Boerse, stagnation prevailed last week in business on the Central European stock exchanges. At Prague the bear operators had the upper hand in all branches of the market. At Vienna and Budapest, orders for abroad were lacking and there was no buying of shares by the local public.

Practically all business during the week was done by professional speculators, and, as a result, prices of all shares declined slowly but steadily.

REICHSBANK LOANS REDUCED

Advances Made for Quarterly Settlements Paid Off.

BERLIN, April 18.—The Reichsbank's return of last week, covering conditions as of April 7, merely shows the relaxation in use of credit usual after the month-end settlements. This, however, was shown only in a decline of advances from 72,087,000 marks to 7,686,000, and by a reduction of 84,000,000 marks in rediscount liabilities.

Against these reductions, discounts were increased by 13,000,000 marks.

EUROPE WATCHING SITUATION HERE

LONDON BUYS OUR STOCKS

LONDON, April 18.—There appears to be so considerable diversity of opinion among American business men themselves concerning the future of trade in the United States that it has become increasingly difficult for foreign observers to make up their minds as to whether the present adverse trend in American foreign trade is but a passing phase or a development of more permanent character. In its present condition, Europe still finds it necessary to buy as little as possible abroad, and a repetition of last year's good crops on this continent would still further diminish not only the price, but the volume of American wheat exports.

Lower prices in the United States may act as an offset to financial weakness in Europe and encourage larger buying of American raw materials. But the feeling is that the long outlook for American foreign is less favorable than it has been. On the other hand, there is a disposition in usually well-informed quarters to ascribe last week's decline in sterling at New York, where it touched the lowest rate since early in March, to a considerabl amount of English buying of American securities, following the severe decline in Wall Street prices.

There was probably little or no British participation in Wall Street's prolonged boom, because by the time sterling had returned to parity there appeared to be little attraction in American securities at the high prices then ruling. With exchange more or less secure around parity, however, American securities at their reduced prices have had more attraction for investors here, and payment for recent purchases is believed to have depressed sterling exchange.

Berlin Thinks London May Lose Gold.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—There is a feeling in this market that England may be compelled to part with still more gold. This expectation is partly based on the decline of security prices in Wall Street, which, it is assumed, must have attracted British buyers who could not purchase to advantage when sterling was depreciated and who were subsequently prevented from buying by the extremely high level to which prices went on the New York Stock Exchange last year.

In the Berlin market the past week's slight decline in sterling exchange was largely ascribed to that cause. In general, Berlin banking circles look for no material change in the Bank of England's policy. The view taken is that during the year which has elapsed since the resumption of free gold payments the Bank's policy has not been guided primarily by a desire to increase or even to maintain the gold reserve.

DEMAND FOR A HIGHER TARIFF IN GERMANY

BERLIN, April 18.—The German Cabinet has announced that the new general tariff, which is to replace the Buelow tariff of 1902, will not be ready for submission to the Legislature this year. Strong influences are being brought to bear, with a view to making the new tariffs highly protectionist.

The Food Ministry has created something of a sensation by declaring that the breadstuffs duties, which were reimposed last year, are insufficient to protect agriculture and must be increased. The view commonly taken is that this would involve a counterdemand for increase of the industrial duties.

STATE REPAYS FRENCH BANK

PARIS, April 18.—The market was somewhat relieved by the Bank of France statement of Thursday, showing repayments of 600,000,000 francs by the State to the bank, and a decrease of 508,060,000 francs in note circulation. This was preceded, however, by increase of 1,250,000,000 francs in advances to the State during the preceding fortnight, and by an accompanying 1,359,000,000 increase in note circulation.

It was noteworthy that the decrease in circulation for the past week occurred notwithstanding an increase of 137,000,000 in bills discounted.

RISE IN GERMAN PRICES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 18.—The index of wholesale prices in Germany as of April 14 stands at 123.6. This compares with 122 a week earlier, with 118.3 the average for March and with 120.1 in January.

The sharp advance of the week was due to a decided increase in price of food.

WATCHING EVENTS IN FRANCE AND ENGLAND

Continental Market Inclines to Suspend Judgment on Situation in Both Countries.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 18.—In spite of a continued hopeful view of the general European situation, the Italian market is watching with some uncertainty developments in France and England. The feeling is that, notwithstanding the fiscal laws voted by the French Parliament, the problems of French public finance cannot yet be said to have been definitely settled. The test of the large payments due on capital and interest account during the year, both on the internal and foreign debts, have yet to be faced, and the franc shows little signs of being stabilized.

Naturally, the English situation is considered to be complicated by such social movements as the threatened coal miners' strike, but the Italian market is not inclined to a premature judgment of the matter. It is felt that the attitude of the English markets themselves shows equanimity even in the face of this unpleasant possibility.

PRICES A FACTOR IN BRITISH TRADE SHOWING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 18.—The March figures for British foreign trade show again a substantial visible adverse balance. It amounted to £28,379,000 against £29,787,000 in March, 1925, and the adverse balance for the quarter, although £8,599,000 below last year, is £25,743,000 greater than in 1924. The feature of the returns is the falling off in average values, although, broadly speaking, declining prices have affected the position in a rather marked degree ever since the commencement of the year.

The first quarter shows a reduction of nearly 9 per cent. in both imports and exports. Last month's figures accentuated this feature; but taking the quarter in preference to one month's returns, it is shown that on the export side lower prices played an important part, especially in the reduced value of coal, cotton yarn, woolen yarn and artificial silk.

Steel exports increased by 15.6 per cent. in quantity, but only 3.3 per cent. in value, although in this case the larger volume of trade was distinctly satisfactory. As regards imports, the quarter's raw cotton receipts decreased 27.6 per cent. in quantity, but 42 per cent. in value, while wheat imports were 7.4 per cent. larger in quantity, but 7.7 per cent. lower in value. Larger crops are held responsible for lower cereal and cotton prices.

These are leading examples, but they reflect more or less a general trend as regards values. There is some cause for satisfaction in this adjustment of prices, but everything would be disturbed again if the present threatened coal strike were to become an accomplished fact.

PREDICTS SHORTAGE OF RUBBER SUPPLY IN 1930

The annual report of the Bah Lias Rubber Estates Corporation, London, views as follows the situation and outlook in the world's rubber production and consumption: "Output of rubber during the current year is very unlikely to reach 630,000 tons, and unless it comes forward in much greater quantities than it has done during the last two or three months it may not be much more than 600,000 tons. The total planted area at present is under 4,500,000 acres, most of which is now being tapped. By 1930, when this is practically all fully mature, its yield is not likely to exceed 700,000 tons, and it may be considerably less. If we add a possible maximum of 50,000 tons of dry rubber from wild sources, the total world output for 1930 and the following year or two, until the areas planted since 1925 become tappable, will not exceed 750,000 tons.

"Turning now to absorption, the total quantity used by manufacturers during 1925 amounted to 555,000 tons. The average annual rate of increase in absorption since 1910 has been 13 per cent. If this rate of increase were maintained, a shortage of rubber would develop not later than 1928, but there are some reasons for thinking that the increase may be less than this.

"Assuming, therefore, that during the next few years the amount of crude rubber in the manufacture of automobile tires and tubes increase by only 10 per cent. per annum, while that used in the manufacture of other rubber goods remains about the same as at present, the world in 1929 would require about 760,000 tons of crude rubber, and by 1930 it would require 830,000 tons. It would seem, therefore, even with a shortage will develop not later than 1930, and that unless extensions are now taken in hand the future progress of both the rubber industry and the automobile industry may be seriously curtailed."

SMALL AUSTRIAN DEFICIT.

Monthly Revenue Turns Out Far Above Estimate.

VIENNA, April 18.—The Government has just published the report on the State finances for February. Instead of the estimated deficit of 11,000,000 schillings, the actual deficit turns out to be only 190,000 schillings, including investments.

This very favorable showing is primarily due to an increase in public revenue to 82,000,000 schillings for the month, whereas 72,000,000 had been estimated.

PARIS PUZZLED AT WEAKNESS OF FRANC

Financial Markets Had Thought Conditions Favored Recovery Rather Than Decline.

CHIEF CAUSES COMMERCIAL

Budget Is Regarded as Balanced in Principle and No New Taxes Are at Present Expected.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 18.—The renewed weakness of the franc during the past week has puzzled the financial market where most bankers declare it is impossible to predict whether a further depreciation is probable. The feeling has been that general conditions of the moment should have favored improvement rather than renewed weakness, and the decline is explained mostly by unexpectedly large commercial requirements of foreign exchange.

It is also believed, however, that franc balances held by Belgium, Italy and England have been realised on with a view to supporting their own currencies in the exchange market. But speculation in the franc has been of restricted proportions during the week and has appeared to be confined to domestic operators.

Question of Taxation.

The budget is now considered to be balanced, at least on paper, and no fresh taxation is officially projected for 1926. Nor does the Treasury anticipate any difficulties in the Government maturities. On the other hand, the question of creating an amortization fund may necessitate the obtaining of fresh resources. If so, this would be done through an increase in the death duties. Such an increase will also be needed to replace the Loucheur taxes and the socalled civic taxes, both of which were temporary.

On the Bourse both foreign and domestic securities have been very dull, especially foreign bonds, which were not influenced by the firmness of foreign exchange. The market ascribed the reactionary tendency to the weakness in Wall Street and to closing out of local commitments for the rise. French Government bonds have hardly changed appreciably, but other securities appeared to be depressed by the exceedingly heavy taxation to be imposed on industrial profits, on interest and dividends distributed, and on Stock Exchange dealers.

Foreign Trade Conditions.

The continuing surplus of imports shown in the March returns is not considered satisfactory in view of the depreciation of the currency. It is ascribed, however, largely to the fiscal measures which have paralyzed industrial and commercial activity—a fact clearly shown by the March figures of the turn-over tax, which produced much less than the Government had estimated.

The reduced investments of France in foreign countries are insufficient to make good, as they did before the war, an accumulating import surplus. There is left the tourist payments, but even of these the complaint is made that the increased consumption through such expenditures tends to raise internal prices.

AVERAGE PRICES RISE SLIGHTLY FOR WEEK

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, April 18.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of American commodity prices for last week, based on 100 as the average of 1913, is 151.6, comparing with 150.7 the week before, 151.8 two weeks before, 151.7 three weeks before and 153.6 four weeks before. The average of a week ago was the lowest for the year to date, and also lower than any reached in 1925; the highest thus far this year was 159.7, on Jan. 20.

The highest weekly average reached in 1925 was 164.4, on Jan. 31, which was also higher than any reached in 1924; the lowest was 154.1, on May 2. The highest percentage since the war was 247, in May, 1920; the lowest, 130, in January, 1922.

Crump's British index number, as cabled for the past week, is 139.3, unchanged from the week before, and comparing with 138.8 two weeks before, 140.6 three weeks before and 140 four weeks before. The highest Crump average thus far in 1926 was 146.7, in the week ended Jan. 9; this week's average is the lowest for the year to date, and also lower than any reached in 1925. For that year the highest was 166.5, on Jan. 10; the lowest, 146.4, on Dec. 31.

The index number of average Italian prices, compiled by the Chamber of Commerce at Milan, was 636.6 last week, as against 638 the week before, 639.4 two weeks before, 639 three weeks before and 641.9 four weeks before. This week's average is the lowest of 1926 to date; the highest was 660.8, on Jan. 8.

The average for the full month of March is 640.3, comparing with 654.6 for February and 660.6 for December. The average for the quarter ending with March is 650.5, against 664.9 for the December quarter.

Car Buying Below Recent Pace.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, April 18.—The Pennsylvania Railroad has bought 2,000 automobile cars and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy 500 hopper cars. This, however, makes only 5,500 cars bought in the past five weeks, so that the recent pace has not been maintained. About 57,000 freight cars have been ordered since Nov. 1 and the orders are being filled rather slowly, so that there is a fair volume of business on books and changes in the pace of buying have scarcely any influence upon the actual production of steel.

PROGRESS IS SHOWN IN WINTER WHEAT

CHICAGO, April 18.—Where weather was warm and there was plenty of moisture Winter wheat made fair growth the past week and on the whole Southwestern conditions are most promising.

Fair progress was made in seeding small grains all over the Northwest during the week and a little increased. The crop is one to two weeks late for Spring wheat States, and in some sections where a year ago the early sown wheat was up it has not been seeded so far this year and rain is needed all over the Northwest.

Neither Winter nor Spring wheat made any particular progress in the Middle West during the week except during the last two days. Seeding of oats is progressing irregularly. Plowing for corn is delayed by wet weather and little planting has been done except in the extreme South and in parts of the Southeastern States, while in Texas and Oklahoma early planted has rotted in the ground.

Seed corn tests in Iowa show a germinating prospect of 78 per cent., against 93 per cent. last year, and indications are that there will be enough good seed for all requirements.

In all, agricultural conditions as summarized by experts who have been over leading sections are favorable and the condition of the farmers is better than generally pictured. Reports from the Southwest say that there are many new farmhouses and barns going up, which would indicate a satisfactory situation.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS ARE TAPERING DOWN

Lamb Is Lower Than It Was a Year Ago—Average Steers Bring Higher Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 18.—It begins to look as if the turning point for cattle and sheep is at hand. As to hogs, packers regard the period of small marketings as passed and larger arrivals are looked for. Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota cattle raisers sent in the best beef steers last week and secured $10.65 to $10.85 for choice heavy steers, and fine yearlings brought $10.65.

The quality on the whole was better. In-between grades brought about the same prices as the previous week with feeders gaining 25 cents and butchers' stock 10 to 25 cents for the week. The average for beef steers was $9.50, gaining 5 cents, and were 90 cents over last year.

With a good supply of heavy packing hogs prices held well but closed easy, while light butchers gained 10 to 20 cents. Packers bought 94,000 and shippers 32,000 for the week. The top on light was $13.85 and average $12.10, or 5 cents more than the previous week, and compared with $12.80 last year. The average weight was 247 pounds, against 234 pounds last year.

Sheep averaged $8.25, gaining 10 cents, and were $1.10 over last year.

Cattle receipts at Chicago for the week were 52,000; hogs, 113,000; sheep, 70,700, cattle being over and hogs and sheep under last year. Estimates for this week are: Cattle, 55,000; hogs, 125,000; sheep, 72,000.

PAST FISCAL YEAR IN FINANCES OF ENGLAND

The complete report on Great Britain's public revenue and expenditure during the fiscal year ended with March shows increase of £12,626,063 in total receipts and of £30,323,067 in expenditure chargeable against revenue. Important changes in the revenue were decrease of £14,425,000 in property and income tax and of £6,430,000 in corporation profits tax, but increase of £4,143,000 in customs receipts of £5,830,000 in supertax, of £1,892,000 in motor vehicle duties, of £1,850,000 in estate duties, and of £1,850,000 in stamps.

Under expenditure, interest on the national debt decreased £3,932,015, but sinking fund payments increased £5,000,000. Army, navy and air force outlay increased £4,677,000, civil service expenses £17,129,000 and other expenditure for supply services £3,974,000.

The floating debt was reduced £37,898,000 during the year, and now stands at £704,296,000.

HOME TAKINGS OF COTTON.

Southern Trade's Explanation of Record March Consumption.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, April 18.—The surpassing of all monthly records by the March consumption of cotton at American mills, as shown by last week's census report, created some surprise here. Although efforts have been made to attribute this large domestic mill consumption during March to the quite extensive use of low-grade cotton, in the handling of which at the mills there is considerable waste, the fact remained that the consumption total reported did not fit very well with the claims that have been made that there had been considerable curtailment by the mills.

Apparently it means that there was practically no curtailment during March, and there would now have to be a very material falling off in mill activity to bring monthly consumption down to what might be considered small figures.

Coarse Grains Gain in the Week.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 18.—In the coarse grain situation higher prices are the result of sympathy with wheat and short covering and the turning over of their hedges from May to July by the elevator people. Corn futures are up 2¾ to 4¼ cents, oats 1 to 1⅝ and rye 3⅝ to 4¼ as compared with a week ago. A little export business is on in these three grains, but it is insufficient to attract new speculative buying.

SLIGHT SLACKENING IN BUYING OF STEEL

But April Production Is Expected to Be Up to That of Months Before March.

PROMPT SHIPMENTS MADE

Prices Harden as the Competition for Business Becomes More Strenuous.

PITTSBURGH, April 18.—There is slightly heavier buying in a few steel products and slightly lighter buying in a larger number. As to sources of demand, the automobile trade has slackened off a trifle more, while all other manufacturing consumers seem to be maintaining former rates of operation. In freight cars there has been some buying after four weeks of scarcely any, while the flow of fabricated steel jobs holds quite steady.

The influence of the particularly heavy buying of previous months extends over into this month; steel mill operations have not materially decreased. With a little slipping here and there April will in all probability show a decrease from March in the rate of steel ingot production, but may equal the pace of the four months before March.

Steel production has broken all records for periods of from one month to nine months, inclusive, and there is no doubt that additional records for longer periods will be successively broken. The longer the period the easier it is to break the record, for in the past high rates have not been sustained. This steadiness of steel production at a very high rate is a new phenomenon.

This experience tends to confirm what has often been argued as to steel—that the rate of consumption has varied much less than the rate of production by buyers accumulating stocks at one time and liquidating them at another. For months past the hand-to-mouth buying has been representative of the current consumption, and accordingly it has been steady and it is quite unlikely to decrease sharply. Considering the exceptionally high rate that has prevailed, a further increase would be quite improbable.

This has been a new phenomenon in the steel trade, with repeated comment in market reports that the steel mills had little backlog business and were making very prompt shipment. With continued hand-to-mouth buying for prompt shipment, the mills daily have fresh indications of the state of trade among their customers and sudden or decided changes in the pace of buying are correspondingly unlikely.

There has been strenuous competition for steel orders for a couple of years past, and while the competition has lately been growing still more strenuous the mills have become hardened in the matter of prices, which rest upon a definite resisting power largely lacking in the old days when the steel market rested so largely upon excitement and what was called "confidence."

There has been very little of price changes in steel products in six months and scarcely any change in the past few weeks, even in the direction of mere stiffening or weakening.

There has been slightly heavier buying of merchant pipe and merchant bars this month than last, the former representing a seasonal swing, but such swing is lacking in wire nails, which seem to be moving a trifle less freely than in March.

In plates and shapes the turnover has been running a trifle lighter. In sheets there is a distinct decrease from thirty days ago in the volume of buying, while in tin plate the lateness of the season relieves buyers' anxiety as to deliveries. There is no slackening in tin plate production, but there is not the delivery pressure that sometimes develops this month.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATES.

Where the French and Belgian francs had previously been the centre of interest because of the steady decline to new low levels, there were noticed last week special movements in other documents which perforce absorbed some of the limelight heretofore directed to the francs. This included a resumption of activity in the Continentals and Easterns, with strength in the Spanish, Norwegian and Japanese, and weakness in the Chinese descriptions.

Its recent loan success and approaching end of hostilities with the Riffs helped the Spanish; fresh speculation for the rise, despite rumored Government intervention to prevent it, sent the Norwegian kroner higher. Heavy purchases of the Japanese yen improved the Yokohama bill, but caused a reaction in the Chinese. Canadian continued to feature by rising to a new high premium. Sterling, lire, guilders and others were moderately active and firm. French francs established a new low record with the Belgian unit unsettled. Greek drachma was weak. South Americans finished strong.

BUYING IN THE WEST HURT BY WEATHER

Easing Up Is Seen in Steel—Commodity Sales Are Below Those of Last Year.

CHICAGO, April 18.—A few days of bright weather brought good buying among the retail trade and more orders for wholesalers of dry goods, clothing and shoes, but the aggregate for the week was a disappointment for the commodity dealers in general with the volume of business smaller than last year. As it was Spring market week in Chicago more buyers were here from the Midwest than a year ago, but all reported that until weather conditions are more favorable a large general buying movement is not to be expected. For the present the disposition is to buy only for immediate requirements.

The future of trade is considered good unless there is a shortage in crops. But there is not the necessity of buying goods so far ahead as has been the custom for many years, because deliveries are made with more rapidity and there is not the tying up of money as formerly. With a close adjustment of supply to requirements, a more healthy situation is regarded as likely to continue throughout this year.

Building activity has been interrupted by bad weather and the movement of materials retarded, but numerous contracts have been made and those in close touch with construction work say that the outlook is most favorable in the Chicago territory and that contracts in hand are about equal to last year.

A little easing in buying in spots is noticeable in the steel industry, although new tonnage in a number of lines continues to be sufficiently large to offset losses in a few specialties. Sheets are not being specified as fast as recently and operating capacity is reduced, but on the whole there is nothing to be pessimistic over in the steel industry.

A few bank failures are occasionally appearing in the agricultural region, due to inability to turn over frozen assets. The general banking condition of the West, however, is good. Chicago banks show decreases in loans between Dec. 31 and April 12 of $24,998,000; deposits, $32,657,000; cash resources, $43,477,000, and savings deposits $6,840,000, yet the latter are the largest on record with one exception, and loans, deposits and cash resources show heavy gains over a year ago, loans being up $115,716,000; deposits, $80,194,000; cash resources, $7,799,000 and savings deposits, $13,938,000.

COTTON EXPORTS PICK UP.

Exceed 1925 Period for First Time in Many Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 18.—While the census report showed that domestic mill stocks of cotton were rather full, the current weekly statistics prove that European stocks are comparatively moderate. There were reports at the end of last week that British spinners stocks of American cotton were running short; which under normal conditions would warrant the expectation of some revival of exports, which is greatly desired as exports for this season to date are now over half a million bales behind last season, notwithstanding the much larger crop.

During the past week exports picked up some and exceeded the corresponding week last year by a small margin for the first time in many weeks.

Week's Primary Grain Receipts.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Primary receipts of wheat for the week were 2,790,000 bushels; corn, 2,494,000. Last year, wheat, 2,839,000; corn, 2,257,000. Shipments of wheat this year were 2,337,000 bushels; last year, 3,281,000. Corn shipments this year, 2,506,000; last year, 4,405,000.

Associated Gas and Electric System

Founded in 1852

$1 Revenue from $5 Capital

The electric light and power industry requires large amounts of capital for the gross revenue produced. In 1925 the industry produced $1 gross revenue per $5.10 invested capital.

The unusual amount of capital annually required is due chiefly to two factors: (1) A large investment in relatively permanent equipment is necessary to produce and distribute electricity economically. (2) The industry is one of the most rapidly growing ones in America. The electric output has doubled practically every five years during the past quarter of a century.

The public desires good service and is willing to pay for it. Fortunately it recognizes that the community may best be served by permitting the investment to earn a fair return.

The electrical output of the Associated System increased approximately 20% in 1925 over 1924. During that year over $17,000,000 was put into new construction and equipment to take care of the normal increase. This steady growth provides continued opportunity for sound substantial investment.

Sell and Grow

Progressive Business is a train of departments pulled by a twentieth century selling engine. Production, generally, is limited only by the capacity to sell. To sell is to grow—in size, in profits, in power to serve.

Growth is the evidence of the healthy turn-over of working assets. It is accompanied by decrease in unit costs—selling and production. Larger profits can be taken, or selling prices reduced to increase sales.

As fundamental to Growth, modern management applies scientific Market Analysis and sound methods of Cost Accounting. One gives the sales department absolute knowledge in place of impressions; points the way to efficient selling plans and successful selling action. The other furnishes the management facts and figures from every department—the timely, dependable guides to safe and steady progress.

It has been the pleasure of the Ernst & Ernst organization to cooperate with firms, nationwide, in establishing the simplest and most economical methods of Market Analysis—eliminating waste fields in selling; and sound methods of Cost Accounting—furnishing the power to control inventories.

COTTON PROSPECTS IMPROVE IN SOUTH

Better Weather Convinces Traders Crop Will Get Satisfactory Start.

MILL CONSUMPTION LARGE

NEW ORLEANS, April 18.—There was little change in the influences controlling the cotton market until the end of last week, when prices developed a substantial decline on the prospect of more seasonable weather in the cotton belt. Up to Friday the market had been sustained by fears that the constant rains and cold weather had so delayed crop preparations and planting that with a continuance of bad weather the crop would make an unfavorable start that might cause some curtailment of acreage and affect growing cotton.

One day of good weather coupled with map indications that the better conditions might continue proved sufficient to dispel recent fears and convince most traders that although the planting of the new crop is several weeks behind last year, when the season was early, it is not much, if any, delayed compared with the average normal crop. They have consequently been readily convinced that a brief spell of good weather would see the crop in normal shape, with an exceptionally good season in the ground in the Western belt, where last year moisture was deficient.

Prices Lowest of Season.

While prices fluctuated narrowly during most of the week and as late as Thursday May showed a decline of only 7 points from the preceding Friday and October a loss of only 16 points, Friday's close showed May 26 points down and October 47 points net lower. At the lowest of Friday, which was likewise the close of that day, new crop months reached the lowest levels of the season to date.

In addition to the day to day weather conditions the market was sustained early in the week by the weekly weather report, which was unfavorable in so far as it showed that the weather had been too wet and cold to permit proper field work, had delayed planting and prevented such seeds as had been planted from properly germinating. Another helpful influence was the record-breaking total of domestic consumption for March, which exceeded any other month in the total of lint cotton consumed as well as in combined consumption of lint and linters.

Why Prices Declined.

The decline shown in Friday's market was accompanied by quite a spurt of activity, which is something the market has been unaccustomed to of late. This fact suggests that a lower level of values might encourage a good investment demand for new crop months. The recent practice has been to cover commitments in old crop months and sell the new crop positions, which accounts for the greater net declines shown by October and December compared with May and July.

Summer hours will go into effect on the local exchange Monday, April 26, when trading will start at 9 o'clock in the morning instead of 9 o'clock, as at present, and close at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, thus adding an hour to the trading period, even on Saturday, when the session will be of three hours' duration instead of two, as has been heretofore the rule.

AMOSKEAG DENIES SALE OR MERGER PLAN

No Intention to Sell to Ford or Consolidate With American Woolen, Agent Says.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 18.—The Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, through its agent, W. Parker Straw, denied today rumors regarding the concern.

He said that the Amoskeag had no intention of disposing of any of its property to Henry Ford and characterized as ridiculous the story that the Amoskeag was to consolidate with the American Woolen Company. He also said that Amoskeag had no intention of selling any of its vast properties to shoe manufacturers and would not sell any of its tenement property which houses 4,000 employes.

Mr. Straw said he believed that Amoskeag had passed the worst of the textile depression and that it would be possible to start up machines long idle in the cotton section.

Business in the cotton section of Amoskeag is showing improvement over the corresponding period in 1925. At capacity Amoskeag in all sections would employ from 18,000 to 18,000 operatives.

JOINS MISSOURI PACIFIC.

H. W. Hewey, Passenger Agent of Boston & Maine, Resigns.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 18.—Herbert W. Hewey, district passenger agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, one of the best-known railroadmen in New England, has resigned after twenty years of service to become traveling passenger agent of the Missouri-Pacific lines, with headquarters at New York.

Mr. Hewey entered the Boston & Maine service as a messenger in the office of former General Passenger Agent Dana J. Flanders. He worked his way up to a clerkship and then to the chief clerkship. Traffic men of several railroads tendered Mr. Hewey a farewell dinner at one of the local hotels.

WHEAT PRICES SHOW A HIGH NET ADVANCE

May 14 Cents Above Two Weeks Ago and Other Deliveries Are Almost Up to It.

JULY IS TAKING THE LEAD

Decline in the Visible Supply as Compared With Past Years Is a Factor in Trading.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—For the past two weeks grain prices, particularly wheat, have finished at the highest point. Prices have advanced nearly 14 cents on May and 11¼ cents on July and 8 cents on September in two weeks, the gain for the week being 8 to 8 cents, the latter on May and the former on September, while the July is up 7⅝ cents.

Recently July wheat, which is now the most active trading future, was on a good shipping margin of profit as compared with Liverpool, both from New York and Gulf ports, but the advance in Chicago has been faster than in Liverpool and the spread has been reduced.

The change in sentiment has been brought about by stronger conditions abroad and a realization of the world's wheat situation. While the advance is considered as discounting part of the bullishness, the situation in Europe and North America favors the maintenance of the present level of values for the time being.

May Wheat in a Class by Itself.

May wheat continues in a class by itself and the trade is divided as to the outcome. There are operators who predict that it will sell at 30 cents over the July, and at one time the past week it was 27 cents.

From a purely technical situation this spread would ordinarily invite sales of May and purchases of July, regardless of the fact that the May represents the scarcity of old wheat and the July expectation of a large crop, particularly in the Southwest, where the largest surplus is raised. Each week sees supplies being cut down and the holders of May and July wheat appear to have conditions more in their favor. At the same time there are many in the trade, ordinarily radically bullish, who predict that May wheat will eventually go out at 5 cents over the July.

The trade on a whole accepts the theory that there is a large outstanding short interest in May by foreigners, hedgers and Eastern speculators, although the latter were heavy buyers early in the week and were largely responsible for the advance in prices. The market has taken a heavy load of realizing sales by local holders and absorbed it in a way that surprised the trade.

Despite the advance, the new crop deliveries are regarded as oversold, and unless there is considerable cash wheat brought in from the Northwest and Southwest the position of the May shorts is an unpleasant one. There is this feature, however, that is being freely commented on by traders—that the largest holders of May contracts do not want to take on a big line of cash wheat at fancy premiums over the July, but it is apparent that unless there are larger reserves in the country on farms and mill stocks to come out on any big advance, there will be little old wheat available by the end of June and consumption will start in on the new crop as soon as available.

Decline in "The Visible."

There are 23,000,000 out of the total of 31,000,000 bushels in the visible supply at seven points; a year ago they had 41,000,000 bushels. The other points in the visible now have only 8,000,000 bushels against 14,000,000 bushels last year, and the total visible is around 24,000,000 bushels short of a year ago. The seaboard has practically no stocks, while a year ago it had good supplies.

It is considered fortunate that Canada has around 100,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export and its reserves are larger than last year, which more than makes up for the decrease in the exportable surplus in the Argentine.

COMMODITY PRICES.

Strength in the cash grains and metals featured last week's cash markets. As groups both were affected by factors which included a wave of buying in the foodstuffs which lifted wheat, corn, rye, oats and flour substantially above the previous week's finals, while the metals felt the influence of better foreign and domestic inquiry. Sugar was another to go higher, as refiners contemplated a cut of 10 per cent. in the next crop cut of Cuba.

Lower values were found in butter, eggs, pork, beef, lead, cotton, printcloths, silk and rubber. In the reaction beef, butter, printcloths, silk and rubber established new lows. Firmness prevailed in iron, steel billets, hides, gasoline, crude oil and coffee.

While Generating Capacity in This State Doubled, Users Saved $3,000,000.

FEWER COMPANIES NOW

Consolidations Have Resulted in Increased Efficiency and Economy.

New York State has almost doubled its electrical generating capacity and has increased its consumption of electricity by one-third in the last three years. It is estimated that seventy-six reductions in rates during the period have saved consumers more than $3,000,000 annually. Ranking first in installed hydro-electric generating capacity as well as in steam generating capacity, this State produces and uses one-sixth of all electricity produced in the country.

In the last three years electrical service installations have increased at the rate of 120,000 a year and now number more than 2,500,000. The installations serve more than 10,000,000 of the State's population. Since 1922 the yearly per capita use of electricity in this State has increased from 715 kilowatt hours to 940 kilowatt hours, according to an estimate by the New York Committee on Public Utility Information. While the sources of electrical supply and the use of electricity have thus increased, the spread of consolidations has decreased the number of companies in that period by thirty-seven.

New York State's installed generating capacity amounted to 1,858,890 kilowatt on Jan. 1, 1923, according to the United States Bureau of Census, while on Jan. 1, 1926, it had an installed and operating generating capacity of 3,823,000 kilowatt. Consumption of electricity increased from 7,420,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1922 to a record of 10,000,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1925. This increase in output has been accompanied by seventy-six voluntary rate reductions, twenty-four in 1924 and fifty-two last year.

The number of operating companies in the State is 254, against 291 in 1923. Privately owned companies have decreased from 232 to 201, and of the fifty-nine publicly owned plants operating in 1923 six have been supplanted by privately owned systems. Interconnection of plants has been responsible for many of these changes, as is evidenced by the fact that in 1925 for the first time the country's public utilities spent more for transmission and distribution lines than for generating plants. In New York State, in line with this general trend, the number of operating systems decreased from 6,355 on Jan. 1, 1923, to 6,235 in 1926.

The installed generating capacity of the country as a whole increased in the three-year period by more than 7,000,000 kilowatts and output was increased by 16,000,000,000 kilowatt hours to a record total of nearly 60,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

SAYS ELECTRIC POWER HAS HELPED WORKERS

Swope Declares Wages Increased 107% in Twelve Years and Cost of Living 68%.

Electricity has increased the worker's capacity to earn, according to Gerard Swope, President of the General Electric Company. In recent comment on a survey of the company's largest factory, which is at Schenectady and which employs 21,000, Mr. Swope traced how man first utilized animal power, then mechanical power and then electrical power. The survey on which Mr. Swope based his remarks covers the twelve years from 1914 to 1925, inclusive.

"During this period the cost of living increased about 68 per cent.," he said, "while the average earnings of the workers (not the hourly rate, but the actual dollars they received each week) increased 107 per cent.—in other words, more than doubled.

"Let us assume that the average earnings in 1914 were $20 per week and the average cost of living was $18 per week, leaving a margin over and above the cost of living of $2 per week, or 11 per cent. In 1925 the average income would be increased 107 per cent. to $41.40 per week, while the cost of living would have increased 68 per cent. to $30.24, leaving a margin of $11.16 per week, or 37 per cent. over and above the cost of living.

"In this same period the electric power consumed in this plant, much of which is purchased from a public utility company operating hydroelectric plants, has more than doubled—from 45,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1914 to 93,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1925, while the average number of workers increased 24 per cent.

"This is in line with the declared policy of this country in the restriction of immigration. The problem, therefore, is to make workers more efficient and do the work that is necessary without a great increase in number, and to gain these advantages it is necessary to supplement their ability and strength by more power, and that power electrical."

RECORD FOR SOUTHERN.

1925 Was Railroad's Best Freight Carrying Year.

The Southern Railway Company established several new records for 1925. Gross freight revenue of $106,776,782 represented the largest year's revenues from freight movement in the history of the company. Movement of 8,273,604,283 tons of freight carried one mile established a high record for freight movement. Average receipts per ton per mile were 1.291 cents, as compared with 1.316 in 1924 and 1.531 cents in 1921. This reduction of 15.74 per cent. in the average ton-mile revenue since 1921 offers a measure of the operating efficiency of the road, in the opinion of its managers.

Total freight charges paid to the Southern for carrying 1925 traffic, they say, were nearly $20,000,000 less than they would have been had the average ton-mile charge of 1921 prevailed in 1925.

TRADE SLIGHTLY LESS ACTIVE IN NORTHWEST

Decreased Income From Grain Partly Offset by Business in Live Stock.

According to the preliminary summary of the Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, the volume of business in the Northwestern district in March "was smaller than a year ago, as shown by carloadings other than less-than-carload lots, which declined 3 per cent. during the first three weeks of the month, and as shown by check payments through banks in seventeen representative cities, which declined 6 per cent. during the full month. The potential purchasing power created during March by the marketings of grains and live stock combined was 8 per cent. less than for the same month last year. Grain receipts were lower by 15 per cent., declines being shown for all grains except rye. Live stock receipts were greater, all kinds showing increases except hogs. All grain prices were lower, while live stock prices exhibited mixed tendencies.

"It is apparent from the foregoing that live stock has helped greatly to sustain agricultural income and business activity, but has not attained an importance equal to wheat and the other cash grains. The smaller decline this month than last in hog receipts is to be explained by the holding back in February of marketable animals for longer feeding, as the average weight of the hogs marketed has increased. Current opinion as to the live stock outlook is tempered by a heavy slaughter of all kinds of feeders to the farms, the increase over last year being 47 per cent. for cattle."

D. & H. SAVES ON SCRAP.

Has Reduced Handling Cost From 79.6 Cents to 34.1 Cents a Ton.

The Delaware & Hudson, though but 883 miles long, has a traffic density sufficient to call for expenditures for material and supplies, other than fuel, ranging from $400,000 to $900,000 monthly. In addition to these purchases the road carries supplies from month to month for current needs varying in value from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000.

A feature of the store-keeping is found in its methods and facilities for handling scrap. Scrap accumulations on this road range from 20,000 to 30,000 tons a year, while the sales range from $500,000 to $600,000 annually. Prior to 1921 this scrap was gathered at several points on the line and prepared for sale at longitudinal scrap docks with elevated platform facilities. In 1923 the method was radically changed by shipping all scrap to Colonie, with the exception of a small proportion sold in Pennsylvania markets. For the better handling at Colonie a radical type dock was built.

This facility has proved a profitable adventure to the Delaware & Hudson, as indicated by the fact that in 1924 the company prepared 32,341 tons of scrap for sale at this dock at a cost of only 34.1 cents per ton, as compared with 79.6 cents per ton for handling 20,567 tons in 1921. On the basis of the tonnage handled in 1924 the net saving, after deductions for interest on investment, depreciation and maintenance of the plant, was $11,666.

RUBBER MARKET FIRM; PARA GRADES DULL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 17.—The rubber market of the past week opened with plantation grades quiet, but they improved later, closing firmer.

First crepe and smoked sheet spot and April sold from 1s. 10⅝d. to 1s. 11¾d. per pound and sellers; May, from 1s. 10⅝d. to 1s. 11¾d. and sellers; June, from 1s. 10⅝d. to 1s 11¾d. and sellers; July-September, from 1s. 10⅝d. to 1s. 11¾d. to 1s. 11¾d. and sellers; October-December, from 1s. 10⅝d. to 1s. 11¾d. and sellers.

Para grades were dull. Hard and spot were quoted at 2s. ball, 1s. 7d. sellers.

The tin market reported 200 tons of East sold at £279 15s. c. i. f., an advance of 25s., and a better business in America was reported at slightly firmer rates.

Here the tone was quieter and moderate realisations caused some easiness cash, closing at 30s., and three months 10s. lower.

Sales were 600 tons cash at £283 10s. to £286 to £285; cash today, £285 15s.; April, £284 10s. to £285 5s.; May, £282 to £281 10s. to £282; June, £275 to £278 5s.; July, £274 and three months £272 10s. to £274 to £273 5s.

Australian tin shipments in March comprised 75 tons to the United Kingdom and 40 tons to the United States. The export of tin from the Federated Malay States in March amounted to 3,501 tons, compared with 3,546 tons in February, making for the first three months of this year 11,010 tons, against 11,474 tons in the same period last year.

Straits shipments for April are expected to amount to 5,000 tons. Ore shipments from Bolivia in March were 2,803 tons fine, based on 60 per cent. content, compared with 2,520 tons in February, and 1,863 tons in March of last year.

Lead met a poor trade inquiry and closed at a loss of 3s. 9d. for both near and forward deliveries. Sales were 700 tons April at £28 17s. 6d. to £28 18s. 9d.; May, £29 2s. 6d.; June, £29 7s. 6d.; July, £29 7s. 6d. Settlement price £28 17s. 6d.

Steel Scrap Off Fifty Cents More.

PITTSBURGH, April 15.—Heavy melting steel scrap sold off 50 cents this week, two mills down the river from Pittsburgh buying at $16.50 and $17, respectively, the difference in price being due chiefly to differences in specifications, rejections, &c. Dealers pick up odd lots at $16, making the market range $16 to $17, which compares with $19 to $19.50 when the scrap market was at its recent top, up to the early part of January.

Foundry pig iron, long stagnant, has been only moderately active since the $1.50 decline to $19, valley, recently reported. There was no accumulation of demand awaiting the price readjustment.

Week Ends With Provisions Higher.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Packers are bearish on provisions, considering prices high, and predict larger receipts of hogs in the near future. Cash business in meats has improved both on domestic and export account, but lard is largely a speculative proposition, although stocks are not accumulating, as generally expected, considering the fact that hogs are weighing more than the average. The week closes with lard up 10 cents, short ribs 15 to 25 cents and bellies 2½ to 5 cents.

HOLDS RECORD AS TRAINMAN

Penn. Conductor to Pensioned After 50 Years Without a Demerit.

Closing almost a half century of service on the Pennsylvania Railroad, Franklin Peter Fair of Brusbern, Pa., a Catasauqua Division passenger conductor, retired on the first of this month on a pension and had his name placed on the railroad's Roll of Honor. He was 70 years old on March 22.

The record is said to be unequaled in some respects on the entire Pennsylvania Railroad. In nearly fifty years of service he has not had a single mark of discipline against his name. In his record of more than thirty years as a passenger conductor, no passenger on any of his trains has suffered a personal injury. There was no accident to any of the trains he ran, either in passenger or freight service, although he has had several narrow escapes.

UTILITY EARNINGS RISE.

Report of the Twin State Gas and Electric Company for 1925 shows that gross earnings including merchandising sales amounted to $1,705,771. This compares with $1,547,377 for the previous year and is a gain of 10 per cent. The increase in gross earnings is said to be due to additional business and to the extension of the company's service to new communities.

Net earnings for the year were $391,110, which, compared with $334,631 for 1924, shows an increase of $56,452, or approximately 11 per cent. On Dec. 31, it is reported, the company was serving 35,500 electric customers, an increase over the previous year of 2,428. Gas customers were also increased from 4,933 to 5,213, making a total of 30,811 customers served.

Some "Shading" in Steel Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, April 18.—This week steel plates are reported a trifle easier in the week, while in the Pittsburgh district it was only recently that a 1.90 minimum was established, and this seems still to be observed. In black and galvanized sheets the shading, long prevalent, is a trifle more widespread, and some reports have it that in black sheets it has gone a little further from the regular price. In automobile sheets it is doubtful whether there has been any decided shading thus far. But there is the prospective competition of cold rolled strips as body material, the strip having already largely supplanted the sheet as fender stock.

RAINBOW HUES MARK NEW BUILDING VOGUE

Material Manufacturers Note Change in Popular Fancy and Try to Meet It.

INSPIRED BY TOURISTS

Prosperous American Travelers Bring Home Decorative Schemes of Spain and the Levant.

Architects and interior decorators have had an opportunity to see within the last week what the interior of the new home of the prosperous American will probably look like as far as decorative color scheme is concerned, writes Allen E. Beals in the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

Some have been shocked at the audacity of this treatment of home interiors. Others have accepted it as a matter of course, saying that it is exactly in line with the rebelliousness of contemporary American nature against anything that savors of post-war repression and mid-Victorian conservatism. Its proponents, on the other hand, declare it be as interpretive of the popular trend of modern home decoration as jazz was to music before the modern American became accustomed to it and came to accept it more or less gracefully as symbolic of the times in which he lived.

Building material manufacturers who have steadfastly postponed the day when they would have to recognize and meet the craze for colors as something more than the passing whim of returning auto and transoceanic tourists have at last convinced themselves that rainbow hues in both interior and exterior building decoration have come to stay long enough, at least, to establish a new decorative vogue.

In faiences, for example, the surrender to popular demand has evidently reached a point where the cost of a structure raised by a well-to-do American may not only be gauged by the variety of contrasting high colors employed inside and out but, in the peculiar remark of a critic, the wealth of the prosperous American citizen may henceforth be approximated by the ornateness of his bathroom.

While the trend in color decoration and treatment in the exterior of the newer homes is easily recognized by any one who rides mile after mile through thriving suburbs of New York City, particularly in roofs and house trim, façades of brick and variocolored stone and even in stucco, the largest investment in machinery, employment of artists, color experts and merchandising seems to have been put into the manufacture of what heretofore has been known as ordinary sanitary white wall tile, which has had a comparatively limited use in the walls of bathrooms and kitchens.

Science has been put to work to produce a tile that is no longer cold, like marble, to the touch of hand or foot. Besides, science has found a way to surface tile so that rugs adhere to floors of tile when laid in carpetry design in either parlor, living room or bedchamber. The modern home will have its fireproof stairs of decorative tile, both safe of tread and radiant of color to carry the American-Spanish color scheme from one floor to another, that is, if the tile man's interpretation of the modern trend of high color decoration is correct.

At any rate it is evident, from the opinion of those whose business it is to interpret public demand in the matter of building style and adornment, that a new building and decorative vogue has set in, in which rainbow hues on the inside and the brightest colored roofs, façades and trim on the outside will dominate the newer homes of the East, in protest against the subdued tones that blended well with the spirit of the post-war readjustment period, when the house and home construction was dominated by the sense of meeting a national emergency where building by the wholesale was the order of the day and individual taste and artistry were pushed aside by heavy costs and urgent need for shelter.

In recent years vast numbers, by motor car and transoceanic tourist lanes, who never would have journeyed far except for fortune's smiles, have visited in tropic climes, in South America and the southern tier of the United States. Great charted steamships have transported thousands more to Spain and the Levant. They have seen the highest profusion of color, from bird-life in the jungle to the bowels of the Indian, from the toreador of the bull ring to the palace of the King on the hill.

Architects and decorators retained by these returning travelers are met by insistent arguments that high colors in decorations are more cheerful, they lend themselves to the greater use of the electrical outlet for lamp illumination; that rainbow colors, whether in faience, tile, marble, stone, stucco or just plain wood and paint, make the misses of the careless servant's dustcloth less noticeable to the housekeeper and her guest; and meet, in addition, the demand of the day for low maintenance cost, for radiant colors shine through dust stirred up by heating plant or passing street traffic much more successfully than sombre colors do. When done in faience or tile there is the further advantage of decoration plus sanitary and sound resisting virtues, and it is heat conserving in Winter and heat repelling in Summer.

However, whatever the pros and the cons may be for or against rainbow colors in interior and exterior adornment of homes, a new vogue is certainly dawning in building if material manufacturers have taken it seriously enough to put their money into the production of gaudy commodities.

The general outlook for building is good by volume, but there is an undercurrent of unrest, as far as labor is concerned, in spite of wage awards and the progress of negotiation. Building material price tendency is downward. Glass had a bad time of it in January and February. March was better, and April continues the change for the better.

KELLOGG DECLINES LEAGUE INVITATION TO GENEVA MEETING

America Will Not Discuss the World Court Reservations With Other Nations.

STANDS ON SENATE ACTION

Secretary Declares That He Has No Authority to Change "Unequivocal" Terms.

EACH NATION MUST REPLY

WASHINGTON, April 19.—A refusal on the part of the United States to participate in a conference of members signatory to the World Court resolution for the purpose of discussing the American reservations to the protocol was contained in a note sent today by Secretary of State Kellogg to Alan F. Winslow, American Chargé d'Affaires at Berne, for transmission to the Secretary General of the League of Nations at Geneva.

The note was in reply to a communication addressed to this Government by Sir Eric Drummond, as Secretary General of the League of Nations, under date of March 29, inviting the American Government to send delegates to such a conference to be held in Geneva on Sept. 1. Secretary Kellogg stated that he did not feel that "any useful purpose" could be served by American participation and that the reservations are "plain and unequivocal."

Secretary Kellogg administered a mild reproof to the League in his note of today in connection with the League's communication addressed to the members of the World Court, pointing out the difficulty of treating with the American reservations by direct exchange of notes with this Government.

"It would seem to me to be a matter of regret," he declared, "if the Council of the League should do anything to create the impression that there are substantial difficulties in the way of such direct communication."

Text of American Reply.

The full text of the reply addressed to the Secretary General of the League of Nations today is as follows:

Sir:

I have the honor to acknowledge your communication of March 29, 1926, in which you enclose an extract from the minutes of the meeting of the Council of the League, proposing that invitations be issued to the Governments of the States actual signatories of the protocol of the Permanent Court of International Justice, and to the Government of the United States, to appoint delegates to meet in Geneva on Sept. 1 of the current year for the purpose of discussing any questions which it may be proper for them to discuss in this connection, and for the purpose of framing any new agreement which may be found necessary to give effect to the special conditions on which the United States is prepared to adhere to the protocol.

I further note your statement that invitations have been issued to the various States signatory to the Protocol and you now extend an invitation to the United States for such purpose. I am also advised that in the invitation sent to the States other than the United States, the League has asked them to indicate to the United States Government the difficulty of treating the American reservations to adhesion to the Protocol of the Permanent Court by direct exchange of notes and to point out the need for a general agreement.

Stands on Senate Resolution.

While acknowledging the courtesy of the invitation of the League of Nations to attend such a meeting, I do not feel that any useful purpose could be served by the designation of a delegate by my Government to attend a conference for this purpose. The Senate gave its consent to the adherence of the United States to the statute of the Permanent Court with certain specific conditions and reservations set forth in the resolution, which I forwarded to you as the depository of the protocol.

These reservations are plain and unequivocal and, according to their terms, they must be accepted by the exchange of notes between the United States and each one of the forty-eight States signatory to the statute of the Permanent Court before the United States can become a party and sign the protocol. The resolution specifically provided this mode of procedure.

I have no authority to vary this mode of procedure or to modify the conditions and reservations or to interpret them, and I see no difficulty in the way of securing the assent of each signatory by direct exchange of notes as provided for by the Senate. It would seem to me to be a matter of regret if the Council of the League should do anything to create the impression that there are substantial difficulties in the way of such direct communication.

Thinks New Agreement Not Needed.

This Government does not consider that any new agreement is necessary to give effect to the conditions and reservations on which the United States is prepared to adhere to the Permanent Court. The acceptance of

Warm Weather Due Today; No More Cold Is in Sight

The forecaster at the Weather Bureau, while saying last night that the thermometer would drop to the freezing point again during the night, promised that today would be warmer and tomorrow "considerably warmer."

Considerably warmer, he explained, meant that the temperature would be getting above normal. His most emphatic statement was, "No more cold weather is at present in sight."

Yesterday the lowest recorded was 31 degrees, the coldest April 19 in many years, but there is a grain of comfort in the fact that it was not as cold as April 19, 1875, when it was 10 degrees lower.

COOLIDGE DEPLORES DESERTION OF POLLS

Pointing to 50% Vote in the National Election, He Declares Self-Government Is Menaced.

HITS DISOBEDIENCE OF LAW

His Speech to D. A. R. Is Echoed by Their Leader, Who Also Calls for Dry Enforcement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—President Coolidge, addressing the Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution tonight, declared the failure of American citizens to exercise the franchise was a growing peril which threatened to place the Government in the hands of practical politicians and selfish persons.

He also said there was lack of reverence for authority and of obedience to law, apparently having reference to the enforcement of prohibition. This same point formed the keynote of the opening address by Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, President General of the society.

Mrs. Cook pleaded for a new era of law enforcement and law obedience, and asserted the country was at the crossroads of law enforcement. She strongly urged women to uphold national prohibition and decried the "trend" toward socialism and scoffing in the public schools.

Longworth Against League "Agencies."

Speaker Longworth made an address defending the Administration's policy of "aloofness" toward nations less fortunately situated, even if it were called "selfish," and declared his opposition to this country's "association in any manner" with the League of Nations or "any of its recognized and directed agencies."

Ambassador Berenger of France was also on the program of speakers.

"Citizenship in America is not a private enterprise, but a public function," the President said in his speech. "Although I have indicated that it is my firm conviction that this requirement will be met, it cannot be denied that if it is not met disaster will overtake the whole fabric of our institutions."

In the last two Presidential elections the President said that less than 50 per cent. of the qualified voters participated and disregard of the franchise was worse in other elections. In the Senatorial election of 1922 "not a single successful candidate secured anything like a majority of the total possible vote." In some States, he added, the candidates elected received as low as 7.9 or 10 per cent. of the total vote.

The President's Address.

Coming to address the Thirty-fifth Continental Congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution reminds me

MALVY CLEARED OF CORRESPONDING WITH WOMAN SPY

Writer of Love Missives to Mata Hari, Executed by French, Was Gen. Messimy.

PUBLIC HAD BEEN MISLED

Believed When Malvy Was Exiled on Treason Charge He Was the Author.

RECORDS PARTLY TO BLAME

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 19.—There was heard in Paris today an echo of the shots of the firing squad which on a cold October morning in 1917 pierced the head of the beautiful Mata Hari as she stood bound to a stake at the foot of the grim walls of Vincennes citadel. She had been found guilty of being a spy.

That same echo brought back to the French capital memories of the trial by the High Court of the Senate of a French Cabinet Minister and his banishment from the country for five years and who lives today to read in this afternoon's papers at least a partial vindication of his name.

For despite his denials, Louis Malvy, Minister of the Interior from 1914 to 1917, had been regarded as Mata Hari's lover, and only four short weeks ago a denial of that charge were the last words from his lips before he fell in a faint at the tribune of the Chamber of Deputies defending himself against the attacks of those who would still call him a friend of Germany during the war days.

Letters Written to Dancer.

Ever since the day when the court-martial condemned the Javanese dancer because she sold French lives for German gold gossip of the French capital has had as a choice morsel a story of letters written to Mata Hari by "a Cabinet officer whose name began with M and ended with Y." That is the way it showed on the court-martial records. And when in 1918 M. Malvy was tried for having been false to his charge it came to be the popular supposition that it was he who wrote the ardent love letters to the dancer who was a spy. No voice except his own was raised to deny it and none but his friends, few in those days, believed him.

He was banished to Spain, but the story remained behind. His name began with M and ended with Y. He had been found guilty of being untrue to his duty. When he was amnestied almost at the end of his banishment, M. Malvey returned, and in the sweep of the Left bloc parties to wipe aside all that done by their Nationalist predecessors M. Malvy was returned to the Chamber. He became Chairman of the Finance Committee and when, during the Geneva meeting last month, M. Briand formed his Cabinet overnight he made M. Malvy Minister of the Interior, the same position he had held during the war.

Two weeks later Briand faced the Chamber, and the Right launched a savage attack on M. Malvy, calling him a traitor. When some one yelled "Mata Hari" as M. Malvy advanced to the tribune to defend himself he made a strong emotional effort at denial, fell in a faint, was taken away unconscious to his home and shortly afterward resigned.

Letter Writer General Messimy.

But it was not M. Malvy who wrote the letters to M. Hari. It was another Minister whose name began with M and ended with Y. There was made public today a letter written by General Adolp Messimy, who was Minister of War for three years up to the end of 1914, to Le Temps, the French writer, saying it was he who wrote the letters. At his home on the Rue Bonaparte the General later confirmed the authenticity of the letter. He denied that he was Mata Hari's lover, but admitted that he admired her and wrote her gallant letters, and

Not Justified Now, Says Judge Gary When the Policy Is Attacked at Meeting.

HINTS AT HIS RETIREMENT

Chairman, 79, Assures Stockholders That Organization Will Protect Them When He Quits.

The dividend policy of the United States Steel Corporation was the chief topic of discussion at the annual meeting of stockholders yesterday at Hoboken. Several shareholders questioned the policy of the corporation and urged the management to distribute more of its profits instead of adhering to the plan of plowing profits back into improvements and property account. In his remarks to stockholders Judge E. H. Gary, Chairman of the board, said that he was in favor of increased dividends, but added that no extra distribution, either in the form of cash or a stock dividend, could be declared by the directors "with safety at this time."

There was also much speculation following the meeting as to the possible retirement of Judy Gary from active service. Judge Gary, who is 79 years old, said that in the natural course of events the time would come "when some of us will have to say good-bye," but he impressed upon the stockholders that they could feel assured that "we have carefully built up an organization" which will assure "protection and advancement of the stockholders." These remarks were viewed as significant both at the annual meeting and in the financial district.

Later at his office, Judge Gary said it would be unfair to the stockholders for him to enlarge upon these remarks, and referred to the record of the meeting as an expression of his views.

Reassuring Stockholders.

Associates of Judge Gary pointed out that he was getting along in years, and the occasion for his remarks to stockholders was merely for the purpose of assuring them that when the time came for him to relinquish control of the corporation, they could feel confident that the men selected to fill the various offices would work in the full interest of all concerned.

In his prepared statement to stockholders, Judge Gary reviewed the history of the corporation for its first twenty-five years of existence, and gave facts and figures outlining its progress since it was organized on April 1, 1901. Aside from his comment on the dividend policy, what Judge Gary had to say about the destiny of the corporation under other hands attracted most attention.

"While we are all strong and vigorous today, yet we know," said Judge Gary, "that in the natural course of events, it will probably soon be time for some of us to say 'good-bye.' But whatever happens, be assured we have carefully built up an organization and established plants which will insure protection and advancement to the interests of the stockholders of the corporation, and this without detriment to the public welfare.

"If these were the last utterances of your Chairman concerning the officers of the corporation, he would, in behalf of the holders of the securities of the corporation, express to its subsidiaries and their officers and employes words of cordial and grateful appreciation for their high-toned, thoughtful and successful work pertaining to the operations of the properties in their care."

Dividend Policy.

In reference to the agitation for increased dividends and the company's dividend policy Judge Gary said:

"We would not voluntarily or unnecessarily hurt the feelings of any stockholder of the corporation, nor say anything against declaring and distributing additional dividends, if and when the same could properly be done. Neither would we hold out any promises for the future without the most careful study and consideration.

"However, I may say the time may come when it would be legal, just and proper toward all interests, and safe to the cash requirements of the Steel Corporation, to issue additional common stock as a stock dividend to the common shareholders, against a part of the new improvements heretofore charged to capital expenditures. Of course, if this were done it would add to the amount of cash dividends on common stock, if and when declared, and might possibly in times of depression, interrupt their continuity.

"It should not be done without painstaking and conscientious consideration. It cannot be done with safety

KIDNAP GIRL, NINE, ASK $6,000 RANSOM ON THREAT OF DEATH

RANSOM NOTE FIRST NEWS

CLUE IN TELEGRAPH OFFICE

Manager Describes Man Who Sent the Note—Father, Prosperous, Declares He Will Not Pay.

Emma Martucci, 9 years old, disappeared yesterday at noon while on her way from school to her home at 2,286 Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn, and an hour later her father, Joseph, a well-to-do tile manufacturer, received at his home a message threatening death to the child and to the five other members of the Martucci family unless $6,000 were paid to a messenger by 2 P. M. tomorrow.

Mr. Martucci immediately notified the police of the Miller Avenue Station. Twenty detectives, including a half dozen skilled Italian operatives, were assigned to the case and began a search which was being continued at a late hour last night with a cellar-to-roof inspection of every house in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, where the Martuccis live.

The only clue to the identity of the child's kidnapper was furnished by Miss Anna Stegman, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company office at 2,471 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, whence came by messenger the ransom message to Mr. Martucci. Miss Stegman said the note, written in pencil and enclosed in an envelope addressed with a pencil, was left at noon by a young man who said his name was Cohen and that he lived at 28 Heyward Street, Brooklyn. She described the man as 17 or 18 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall, who spoke good English, had brown hair and a light complexion and wore a dark suit without an overcoat, and a gray cap. Detective Herman Caesar could not find any one with that name or that description at 28 Heyward Street.

Emma, who is in the 4-B grade at Public School 156, Belmont Avenue and Ashford Street, the police learned, left promptly at noon, accompanied by Anna Vitale, 9 years old, of 2,354 Pitkin Avenue; Viola Spitz, 9, of 411 Barbey Street, and Paul Bryan, 9, of 353 Cleveland Street, to go home for luncheon, after which she was to have returned to school.

The other three children left her, the police said, standing at the southwest corner of Pitkin Avenue and Ashford Street, in front of a candy store, a half block from her home, waiting for her sister, Ellen, 8 years old. She always waited at this corner for Ellen, who was dismissed from the same school a few minutes later than she.

This was the last time any one who knew the child saw her. Ellen was accompanied home by other pupils of the schools. The Martuccis, who, the police learned, were careful about their children's playmates and did not allow them to play in the streets or to speak to strangers, were worried. Mr. Martucci went to the sidewalk several times to see if Emma was in sight. Then at 1 o'clock came a ring at the doorbell of the two-story house occupied by the family, and Mr. Martucci, going to the door, received a white envelope from the hand of a Western Union messenger.

"You Are Being Closely Watched."

He signed for the message, he said later, without noticing the boy. Breaking open the envelope he read the following message:

"We have your child and unless we receive $6,000 by Wednesday, 2 o'clock, when another messenger shall call at your home, you shall never see her alive. One false move and we will get your whole family.

The message was on a good grade of white paper in a vertical hand, suggesting that it was written by a young person. The word "watched" in the final sentence was underscored.

Mr. Martucci, a slightly built man of 37 years, was almost overcome by the message and shouted excitedly to his wife, who is 30, that Emma had been kidnapped. She screamed and ran to her other children, Anna, 8; Ellen and Carlo, 3½, who was named after Mr. Martucci's father, a Prefect of Police at Florence, Italy. Her hus-

STATE REFERENDUM ON LIQUOR IS VOTED 87 TO 62 BY ASSEMBLY; NOW UP TO SMITH; STRICTER DRY LAWS URGED ON CONGRESS

SENATORS GET CHURCH PLEA

PROSECUTOR CITES DATA

Mrs. Willebrandt Says Prohibition Is a Success, With Enforcement Gaining.

MRS. BOOLE LAUDS DRY ACT

W. C. T. U. Is Backed by the Salvation Army in Testimony at the Senate Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Supporters of the prohibition law, bringing their heavy artillery to bear upon the hearings before the Senate Committee on Judiciary, today introduced six witnesses, one of whom was Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the dry enforcement, who declared that the Volstead act can be enforced and was being enforced with gradually increasing success.

Others heard included Mrs. Ella A. Boole, President of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union; Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Fred B. Smith, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee of One Thousand for Law Enforcement, all of whom urged even more severe dry laws and denounced modification bills as moves for the return of the saloon.

Colonel Walter F. Jenkins, National Secretary of the Salvation Army, also brought such a message from Commander Evangeline Booth, now ill in bed, while Philip Kiag, former Princeton football player, submitted a similar memorial from the Christian Science Church of Boston.

53,000 Convictions Last Year.

Enforcement, declared Mrs. Willebrandt, was "increasingly effective," as shown by the number of convictions in Federal courts for violations. Her figures showed that while there were 24,000 convictions and $4,000,000 in fines in 1922, these jumped respectively to 38,000 and $7,681,000 in 1925. Jail sentences increased from an aggregate of 5,052 years in 1922 to 4,569 years in 1925.

It was in the great cities, such as New York, that the chief difficulty was encountered by the Government in enforcement, Mrs. Willebrandt testified. New York, she said, was "doing nothing" toward enforcemenet, while New Orleans was "doing less."

Mrs. Willebrandt showed no sympathy for District Attorney Buckner's proposal to do away with jury trial in small violations and to let these offenders be sentenced by Police Court Judges. The Department of Justice had taken no stand on the matter because it recognized that every man was entitled to a trial, she declared.

Asked by Senator Harreld if there was any way to compel States to aid the Government in enforcing the dry statutes, Mrs. Willebrandt replied: "No, and there is a bad spot when a State fails to do its duty."

Mrs. Boole and Senator Reed of Missouri, the wet member of the committee, engaged in a sharp clash when the Senator sought to get Mrs. Boole to say whether it was more destructive to have stills operated in private homes in the presence of children or to have liquor made outside. Taking the attitude that her organization was against the liquor traffic in any form, she declined to answer, a position warmly applauded by dry spectators in the crowded committee room.

Bishop Cannon Assails Wets.

"The lawlessness of the legalized liquor traffic precipitated prohibition," Bishop Cannon told the committee. "And now the issue is whether men can snap their fingers in the face of the Government or be met by the declaration that the law cannot be flouted or nullified."

Saying that other laws besides prohibition were broken, he asked what community demands the repeal of the Form of Referendum As Drawn for Election

ALBANY, Tuesday, April 20.—The form in which the Karle-Phelps prohibition referendum was voted in the Assembly last night, and previously by the Senate, for submission at the polls at the election next November is as follows:

"Should the Congress of the United States modify the Federal Act to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective States."

WILLIAMS CONVICTED BY COURT-MARTIAL

BUTLER WILL 'DRY UP BASE'

He Says There Will Be a 'House-cleaning and No More Cocktail Parties.'

MARINE BASE, SAN DIEGO, April 19 (AP).—The conviction of Colonel Alexander S. Williams on a charge of intoxication brought against him by Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler was indicated by the military court which tried him when the tribunal adjourned today "to await action by the convening authority."

While the court made no comment or announcement other than that it had adjourned, the circumstances were a tacit admission that it believed the Colonel guilty of appearing drunk in the public rooms of the Hotel del Coronado on the night he gave a dinner party in honor of General Butler.

Officers familiar with court-martial procedure explained as the court departed that adjournment without definite announcement of acquittal is a military court's courteous way of informing a defendant he has been convicted.

Findings and recommendations of the court will be sent direct to the Judge Advocate General of the navy at Washington and communicated by him, together with his recommendation for sentence, to the Secretary of the Navy. The verdict is expected to be officially announced in the national capital within a week or two.

Dismissal from the service is the maximum penalty which can be assessed under naval regulations.

In cases not involving drunkenness on duty, such as the present case, the punishment usually is reduction in rank or numbers.

When the court returned shortly after 1 o'clock and filed silently into the room in which deliberations had been carried on, there still was no official announcement of a verdict or that a verdict had been reached.

Acquittal Would Be Made Known.

At 1:40 P. M. the Judge Advocate announced that the court, "having no further cases before it, had adjourned to await the action of the convening authority."

This announcement was interpreted by officers familiar with court-martial procedure as confirming previous indications that the Colonel had been convicted.

Court-martial precedent is that in the case of an acquittal a military court never adjourns without notifying the defendant that it has acquitted him. The only interpretation possible under the circumstances, therefore, was that Colonel Williams had not been acquitted.

Before the court retired to deliberate on its verdict, the Judge Advocate, Captain Leo Hermle, asked Colonel Williams if he had any statement to make to the court.

"I have not," said the defendant.

Captain Hermle, accordingly, opened his brief argument, which was to the effect that while many issues extraneous to the issue at hand had entered the testimony introduced last week, the real issue—whether Colonel Williams was drunk or sober on the night of March 6, at the Hotel del Coronado—had been sufficiently illuminated to permit the court to draw its own conclusions.

With a passing reference to the "utter failure" of the defense contention that the defendant was sick, rather than drunk, Captain Hermle said he knew the court would not be influenced by "public clamor or camouflage introduced by the defense" and sat down.

Defense Counsel Scores Butler.

Lewis R. Kirby, civilian counsel for the Colonel, in his argument reminded Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, President of the court, that it must be shown the defendant was drunk; not merely that he staggered, or that he was loquacious, or that he stepped upon a woman's shawl in a crowded room or seemed dizzy when he arose from a chair.

Referring to the positive testimony of Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, Colonel Williams's guest on the night of the alleged drunkenness, that the Colonel was "full, staggeringly drunk,

WETS WIN IN ASSEMBLY

DEBATE LASTS 3 HOURS

THRONG CROWDS CHAMBER

Measure Has Already Passed the Senate and Governor's Signature Is Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Tuesday, April 20.—The wets won a smashing victory in the dry Assembly last night when that body, by a vote of 84 to 64, and against the explicit order of Speaker McGinnies, voted to discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration of the Karle-Phelps Prohibition Referendum bill and then passed that measure by an even larger vote.

The vote on final passage was 87 to 62. The bill has already passed the Senate, and now goes to the Governor, who is expected to give it his approval.

The bill provides for the submission, at the general election in November, of the question whether Congress shall modify the Volstead law so as to provide that in States which have adopted enforcement acts of their own, the Federal Government shall refrain from intrastate enforcement of the Federal statute in regard to alcoholic beverages which are not in fact intoxicating under the State law.

McGinnies Order Defied.

In directing that the referendum bill be kept in the Rules Committee and in causing a statement to be made from the floor of the Assembly by Assemblyman Simon L. Adler, Republican floor leader, to the effect that he disapproved of the motion to take the Karle-Phelps bill from the Rules Committee, Speaker McGinnies took sharp issue with United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., titular leader of the Republican Party in the State, and lost.

The final vote on the motion to take the bill from the Rules Committee, which was made by Assemblyman Phelps, Republican, of Manhattan, sponsor for the measure in the lower house, came long after midnight.

On the motion twenty-five Republicans joined the Democrats in supporting it. Twenty-eight Republicans when the roll was called on the bill itself voted in the affirmative.

Republicans Who Voted for Bill.

The Republicans voting for the motion to bring the bill out of the Rules Committee were Blumberg of Kings, Bernhardt and Borkowski of Erie, Brooks of Rensselaer, Cilano of Monroe, Davison of Nassau, Dyckman and Fay of Kings, Ferguson of Oneida, Freiberg of Erie, Gedney of Rockland, Grenthal and Hofstadter of Manhattan, Knapp of Sullivan, Linen of Albany, Nicoll of Schenectady, Parmenter of Monroe, Phelps of Manhattan, Ricca of Kings, Rogers of Herkimer, Sargent of Onondaga, Slater of Monroe, R. B. Smith of Onondaga, Sprague of Erie and Wallace of Nassau.

The three additional assemblymen who voted for the bill, after it had gone before the assembly, were Copley of Chemung, McCleary of Montgomery and Shonk of Westchester. Assemblyman McCleary represents the Assembly district in which Republican State Chairman George H. Morris lives and votes.

The debate was of three hours' duration. One of the most startling statements that was made came from Edmund B. Jenks of Broome, chief apostle of the drys in the Assembly. In referring to the referendum bill, which was drafted by Elihu Root, Mr. Jenks declared that the venerable elder statesman of the Republican Party was in his dotage. Speaker McGinnies made no move to challenge or censure this declaration.

McGinnies Votes in Negative.

On the final vote Speaker McGinnies was compelled to stand up and be counted with the rest of the dry Republican Assemblymen. Louis A. Cuvillier of Manhattan brought this to pass by rising, asking how the Speaker had voted. Speaker McGinnies then voted in the negative.

In the course of the debate Assemblyman Bloch, leader of the Democratic minority, intimated that the move to discharge the Rules Committee, a very rare procedure, could not have been undertaken unless it had been understood that Speaker McGinnies would make no difficulties. This statement was challenged by Majority Leader Adler, who declared that he was speaking on the authority and with the approval of the Speaker himself.

The Assembly, preparatory to the battle, had cleared its calendar of all non-controversial measures. The first

A jury in the Supreme Court will decide in a few days whether a man who dances at a supper club with a woman partner, and falls on her and breaks her leg when he is alleged to be in no condition to dance, is to be held liable for her injuries. This was disclosed yesterday when suits brought in Queens County two years ago, by Russell Gomez, a stockbroker, and his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Gomez, of 246 West End Avenue, against William J. Wilkinson, a color printer, were transferred to New York.

Mr. Wilkinson was divorced by Mrs. Elsa Wilkinson several years ago after she had been accused of accepting the attentions of William F. Schlemmer, hardware merchant. Later Wilkinson married Maria Marietta, said to have been his stenographer. He lives at Great Neck, L. I., where the Wilkinson and Schlemmer families were neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. Gomez and Wilkinson were members of the Supper Club, which meets biweekly at the Hotel Astor. The complaints filed yesterday allege that on Oct. 27, 1923, at a meeting of the club, Mrs. Gomez was dancing with another partner when the "Paul Jones" was announced. The complaint says:

"The defendant attempted to execute and perform with the plaintiff the said dance, and in attempting to dance with her as partner, because of his lack of reasonable skill, knowledge and ability to perform the dance, and because of his physical condition and inability to maintain his own equilibrium he negligently fell and carried the plaintiff to the floor and fell on her."

The complaints allege that Mrs. Gomez was seriously injured. It was said yesterday that her leg was broken in eight places and that she was treated in the Polyclinic and Presbyterian Hospitals for six months, in addition to which she was compelled to have surgical and medical treatment, all at a cost of $1,500. Mrs. Gomez asks $50,000 for her injuries, while her husband asks $10,000 for "loss of services of his wife and comfort and happiness in her society."

The answer filed in behalf of Mr. Wilkinson denies responsibility for the accident. Harold L. Allen of 120 Broadway, counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Gomez, said yesterday that at the time of the accident Wilkinson "walked away without even apologizing to Mrs. Gomez." The attorney said that "a bunch of roses might have ended the whole thing in the beginning."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 19 (AP).—United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., speaking at Republican dinner here tonight, came out definitely in favor of the proposed State referendum on the prohibition question.

The Senator's declaration, made at the close of a long address, in which he avoided State issues almost entirely, drew several minutes of applause from the large audience.

It was the one opinion which legislative leaders and Republicans of the State have been seeking from Senator Wadsworth.

As he voiced the hope that the Legislature would give the people a chance to vote on the prohibition question shouts arose from all parts of the room and the Senator was forced to await the end of the applause.

"None of us can watch all the things going on in the Legislature," the Senator said, as he neared the close of his talk. "None of us can express an opinion on all of the details. We have elected the members of the Legislature and trust them to carry out the will of the people.

"I would not seek to inject a controversial issue here tonight—in this gathering of Republicans. Not every body will agree about the referendum, and I can only give my personal view, but I frankly hope that the Legislature will give the people of the State a chance to vote on the prohibition question as expressed in this proposed referendum."

flurry over prohibition, however, occurred before the third reading calendar was reached.

Bloch Taunts Republicans.

As soon as the Assembly had gone through its preliminary work and was ready to proceed to consideration of the calendar, both Assemblyman Phelps and Maurice Bloch, leader of the Democratic minority, arose in their seats and demanded recognition. Minority Leader Bloch intended to move discharge of the Rules Committee on a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Cuvillier, Democrat, of Manhattan, identical with the Karle-Phelps bill. Speaker McGinnies recognized his Republican colleague.

"I think it is important that we should proceed to the consideration of the referendum legislation at once," Minority Leader Bloch said. "We in the minority are not overanxious to help the Republican Party secure an advantage in connection with legislation which that party now seems to regard as a popular measure.

"Up to the present moment, Mr. Speaker, your party has always strongly objected to this sort of legislation, while we of the minority have done all in our power to promote liberal measures dealing with prohibition. Now that liberalisation has become popular the Republican Party is trying to steal the glory that rightly belongs to us."

"The Chair, however, feels," the Speaker said, "that the Assembly ought to adhere to regular procedure and go through its calendar before entertaining motions of this character."

The Assembly then settled down to somewhat cursory work on the calendar, laying aside until today most controversial bills. When the end was reached Assemblyman Phelps made his motion. The debate was opened by Assemblyman Cuvillier.

Cuvillier Opens Debate.

"Had it not been for the Democratic votes in the Senate this bill never would have been before the Assembly tonight," said Mr. Cuvillier, "and if it were not for the 59 Democratic votes in this house it would not stand any chance of being passed."

Assemblyman F. A. Miller, Democrat, of Manhattan, followed. "Prohibition is no longer an experiment, it is a farce," he said. "Prisons are being overcrowded by prohibition and it is causing a general disrespect for all laws. In 90 per cent. of the homes of the well-to-do alcohol can be found in some quantity, but the poor working man can't even buy a glass of good beer for himself. Drastic prohibition must go or bootlegging, which has been the curse of this country, will continue to grow worse every day."

The first Republican member to speak for the measure was Assemblyman Sargent of Syracuse. He voted for the enforcement bills and was one of the dozen Assemblymen who went to Speaker McGinnies last week and asked to be released so they could vote for the Karle-Phelps measure.

Says People Should Vote.

"I am not a wet," Assemblyman Sargent declared at the start, "but I want to make it plain that I believe the people of the State are entitled to vote on this question. There is a widespread demand among the voters that they be given an opportunity to express themselves on this question.

"The Common Council of Syracuse by a vote of 18 to 1 requested the Onondaga members of the Assembly to vote for this measure so that the people of Onondaga could have a chance to express their views on this question.

"There is no reason why any one should say that because a law is now on the statute books it should never be changed. If the people are not in sympathy with a law they have the right to demand that it be changed. I believe that many New York Representatives in Congress want the people to vote on this question, so they will know just what the people of the State think of prohibition.

"They say the drys will not vote on this, but I think they will if they believe in their cause. If a majority of the vote is dry, then modification will be dead for a long time to come."

Assemblyman Gedney, Republican of Rockland, said he believed every voter should have an opportunity to express himself or herself on this question.

"Many of the people who are objecting to prohibition say they have never had an opportunity to express themselves on this question," he went on. "Then there are the veterans of the World War who say prohibition was put over in their absence, and I am inclined to think there is some truth in what they say."

Assemblyman Nugent, Democrat, of Manhattan, contended the Republicans favored the referendum now because an important election was coming on this Fall.

"Many Republicans here tonight will vote for this because a certain gentleman, who is not so far away, has told them they could do so."

Calls Proposal Unconstitutional.

Assemblyman Phelps spoke briefly in urging that his motion be adopted.

"It is high time," he said, "that we adopt this means of finding out how the people who sent us here feel about this matter."

Behind the Assembly desk there was a stir as a hush fell upon the Assembly. Preparations were being made by the clerks to call the roll, although not a single voice had been raised in opposition to the bill. Then Assemblyman Edmund F. Cooke of Erie, who himself had urged a referendum on the question of whether Congress should be urged to call a constitutional convention to consider the Eighteenth Amendment itself, arose.

"The Democrats, and this includes the gentleman on the second floor (Governor Smith)," he began, "have been throwing dust into the eyes of the people. They are trying to lead the people to believe that there is a short cut by the way of this measure to something to drink which has a kick in it. But there isn't. There are only two ways in which they can arrive at that result and both involve an amendment to the Federal Constitution.

"What we are doing here is unconstitutional. We have no right to put a question like this to the people. The Constitution provides that the law-making power in the State shall be vested in the Senate and Assembly. We cannot delegate that power to the people. The people divested themselves of that power when, through their own Constitution, they lodged it in the Legislature.

Warns of Consequences.

"Everybody here has been talking not for the people, not for the State, but for his own political side. Let me sound this solemn warning for what effect it may have. You are dealing at this very moment with the most fateful legislative measure that has come before this body in the four years I have occupied a seat in it. You are setting a precedent new and dangerous that for a hundred years to come will affect not only this State but the nation, if you vote this bill out of committee. It is the most radical piece of legislation that since the time when Southern States were legislating on the right of a State to secede from the Union.

"And it is all so futile, because no one in the Legislature, let alone Congress, will be bound by the result of any vote that may be taken under the proposed referendum. You are merely doing this to tide yourself over an election—that is all."

There was a ripple of applause as he ended. He was followed by Assemblyman Esmond of Saratoga, another dry.

"This referendum is an incitement to nullify the Constitution," he said. "You can accomplish nothing through this measure beyond stirring up among the people of a great State a spirit of rebellion against the Federal Constitution and against a Federal statute."

Assemblyman John J. Boyle Jr. of Suffolk warned his Republican colleagues against looking "around with the tiger that walks like a man."

"This bill," he said, "is not so much of a referendum as it is an unblushing attempt to break down the Eighteenth Amendment."

Illegal, Asserts Jenks.

Assemblyman Jenks made the chief attack on the bill. He charged that a referendum would be illegal and maintained that any taxpayer could prevent its submission to the people. Holding a copy of an opinion rendered by Louis Marshall for Elbert H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and other industrial prohibition supporters, in which he held that the submission of the proposal would be unconstitutional, Mr. Jenks declared:

"The wets says that Elihu Root, the great constitutional expert, has said that this would be constitutional, but I challenge them to produce a statement from Mr. Root to that effect. You can't get it out of him for fun, marbles or money. He has some sense left, even if he is in his dotage."

Assemblyman Bloch followed.

"Tonight in Schenectady," he said, "a distinguished member of the Republican Party, the Senior United States Senator from this State, came out for the Referendum Bill we now are debating.

"No one realizes more that he the desperate plight of his own party. He knows it is on the rocks, shipwreck and without a leader. When he spoke tonight, he was making a valiant attempt to save it from itself.

"I want to recall to the men in this circle that if prohibition has been dragged into politics, this was accomplished in 1918 by the then Republican Speakers of this House who, when the question of ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment came up, drove the Republican members into caucus and cracked the party whip good and hard over their heads.

"On that occasion one of the Democratic members of that day, Mr. McElligott, moved an amendment to the ratifying resolution, providing for referendum to render it valid. So that in voting as we shall on this measure we are consistent, which the Republicans are not. Tonight the great Republican Party will turn turtle and move to discharge the Committee on Rules."

Public sentiment is a great master. Occasionally it performs marvels. When we have voted under this referendum we shall have a clear-cut expression showing that the people of this State are in accord with us in desiring modification of the Volstead law."

Speaker McGinnies yesterday afternoon definitely decided to hold the Referendum bill in the Rules Committee and let Assemblyman Phelps and his supporters take the strenuous to bring the measure before the House for a vote.

Apparently this decision was reached by the Speaker without consultation with United States Senator James W. Wadsworth. Senator Wadsworth, whose presence at the Capitol had been expected at this crucial time, was at Schenectady, less than twenty miles away, but had not made his appearance at the Capitol prior to the night session.

Assemblyman Phelps was in a hesitant mood when he reached the Capitol yesterday afternoon. At that time he expressed himself as inclined to defer making his motion until today on the ground that a number of the Democratic members would be absent at the night session. Without the solid support of the Democratic minority he thought it would be inviting defeat to make the effort. Later, on receiving assurance that there would be a full attendance of Democrats, he went to Speaker McGinnies and told him he would move for the discharge of the committee from further consideration of the bill.

Assemblyman Phelps said that last week he had more than eighty votes pledged to support his motion to discharge. There were indications, however, that the dry forces had made gains over the week-end.

Bellefonte (Pa.) Invites Coolidge.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., April 19 (AP).—President Coolidge has been invited to spend the Summer at Bellefonte, on the Eastern slope of the Allegheny Mountains. Mayor Hardman P. Harris announced today that he had extended the invitation on behalf of the citizens of Bellefonte and that the home of the late Governor Daniel H. Hastings had been offered as the Summer White House. Mrs. Hastings, who spends most of her time in Harrisburg, is said it was these letters which he supposed figured at her trial.

Mme. Severine, who had discovered the truth, wrote to General Mesimy asking him to correct the popular mistake and notifying him that she would publish his reply. In his letter the General said:

"It would be contrary to all my life to dodge the pressing appeal you address me in the name of equity, and I will not let pass the occasion to correct what you call so justly a detail.

"During long months—fourteen years ago now—Mata Hari, by all the means of seduction which she knew so well, tried to gain the right to be known as my mistress. I found her charming but full of mystery and as disturbing as she was attractive and I was imprudent enough to write to her.

"You ask what was in the letters I wrote her so long ago now and which she kept so carefully. I have forgotten, having never had the habit of keeping copies of this sort of letters. Surely those letters must have been gallant, for writing them I felt I was repeating the history of Potiphar and her servitor.

"Let this be a lesson to young Deputies who pursue beautiful women. I thank you for the occasion given me to put right an incident which while it may not be flattering for me leaves me no remorse or regret."

Seen at his home the General said he had nothing to add to this letter.

The trial of M. Malvy by the Senate sitting as a high court occurred in 1918, almost a year after the execution of Mata Hari as a spy. He was accused of dereliction of duty as Minister of the Interior and of being on friendly terms with the Germans.

The records of the woman's trial by court-martial, in accordance with frequent French custom, did not given the name of the Cabinet Minister who had corresponded with her, merely indicating it by the letters M and Y with dashes between.

When under the Clemenceau Government Malvy and Caillaux were accused of treasonable conduct the newspapers concluded that the M.—y whose letters were found in possession of Mata Hari could be none other than Malvy and public opinion held the initials to confirm this conclusion absolutely.

Supper Dance in Aid of Cripples.

A supper dance in aid of the New York State Society for Crippled Children will be held tonight in the grill-room at the McAlpin. A feature will be dances by Baron Giorgio Mario Surani, an Italian, who on this occasion will make his début as a dancer, and Drusilla, who has appeared in several "revues" in Paris. Raymond J. Knoeppel is President of the society.

LEWIS DARES DEITY TO STRIKE HIM DEAD

DENOUNCES CHRISTIANITY

Asks Why Did Not God Down Luther Burbank When He Said He Was an Infidel.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 19.—In what he said was his last public utterance in Kansas City, Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, author of "Babbitt" and other books, speaking from the pulpit of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church last night, ridiculed Fundamentalist ministers, said the trouble with the average preacher was that he was too dull, damned the Christian religion, and then dramatically placed his watch on the pulpit and called on God to strike him dead within ten minutes.

His challenge to God was in the nature of an experiment, he explained to the crowd.

"Here is a lovely chance for God to show what He can do," he said, as he challenged God; "if he is a Fundamentalist God," to strike him dead.

"Many ministers are seeing in the death of Luther Burbank a divine sign," Lewis said. "They say he forgot Heaven and hell. I say, somewhat impertinently perhaps, that Burbank gave back to God all that God gave him. If he had to stop to take care of Heaven and hell they must be puny institutions indeed.

"Is there no joy, no greatness in living? Is it the fear of hell that makes us good? If this theory is part of the Christian religion, then damn your Christian religion.

"Burbank said he was an infidel and was 'struck down.' Bryan said he was a Fundamentalist and he became a 'martyr dying in his glory.' Bryan died fifteen years younger than Burbank. Why didn't God strike Burbank down at the time of his utterances and make things clear, if, as pious people say, he died only because he was an infidel? The Fundamentalist God moves slowly and by the death bed when there are no witnesses.

"Whenever you criticise the ministers there are two answers. One is that the criticism is in bad taste and the other is that the ministers do some good anyway. Is it bad taste to criticize God? According to their theory, He is All-Knowing and All-Supreme, then He could not possibly be injured by what we have to say."

Mr. Lewis was questioned after his talk by several persons who were dissatisfied with the author's remarks on "Flaming Youth" and asked him how he proposed to "stem this growing tide of youthful folly."

"Who of you are wise enough to lead them?" he asked. "Give them food, clothes, and tell them the truth, and about the time you think they are still children you will discover they have grown up and you will be following them."

A businessman asked Mr. Lewis if he did not believe that the harnessing of the wild horse of the plains, while it interfered with his glorious freedom, was best in the end.

Mr. Lewis replied: "It might be best for me to have the horse to plow my garden, but if so I wouldn't have the infernal nerve to tell the horse that I did it in his behalf."

that I have had that privilege several times in the past. You represent one of the most distinguished patriotic orders of our nation in cherishing the memory of the people and the record of the events of the great struggle which resulted in American independence.

It is a marked honor to be invited to speak in your presence. But I do not wish to be the sole recipient of such opportunity. Perhaps you might profit by some change in the future. In a fresh view of a great period, animated by a great purpose, consecrated by a great result, you are more likely to secure a much larger inspiration.

In Massachusetts the 19th of April is known as Patriots' Day. It is honored and set apart. The whole nation is coming more and more to observe it. As the time lengthens from the occurrences of 1775, its significance becomes more apparent and its importance more real.

It stands out as one of the great days in history, not because it can be said the American Revolution actually began there, but because on that occasion it became apparent that the patriots were determined to defend their rights.

The Revolutionary period has always appeared to me to be significant for three definite reasons: The people of that day had ideals for the advancement of human welfare. They kept their ideals within the bounds of what was practical, according to the results of past experience. They did not hesitate to make the necessary sacrifice to establish those ideals in a workable form of political institutions.

As I have examined the record of your society, I believe that it is devoted to the same principles of practical idealism enshrined in institutions by sacrifice.

Hails Heroines of the Revolution.

This is but the natural inheritance of those who are descended from Revolutionary times. In this day, with our broadened view of the importance of women in working out the destiny of mankind, there will be none to deny that as there were fathers in our Republic so there were mothers. If they did not take part in the formal deliberations, yet by their abiding faith they inspired and encouraged the men; by their sacrifice they performed their part in the struggle out of which came our country.

We read of the flaming plea of Hannah Arnett, which she made on a dreary day in December, 1776, when Lord Cornwallis, victorious at Fort Lee, held a strategic position in New Jersey. A group of the Revolutionists, weary and discouraged, were discussing the advisability of giving up the struggle.

Casting aside the proprieties which forbade a woman to interfere in the counsels of men, Hannah Arnett proclaimed her faith. In eloquent words, which at once shamed and stung to action, she convinced her husband and his companions that righteousness must win.

Who has not heard of Molly Pitcher, whose heroic service at the Battle of Monmouth helped the sorely tried army of George Washington? We have been told of the unselfish devotion of the women who gave their own warm garments to fashion clothing for the suffering Continental Army during that bitter Winter at Valley Forge. The burdens of the war were not all borne by the men.

Praises Aim and Work of Society.

Such a record made it eminently fitting that in the course of time there should be founded the Daughters of the American Revolution. Starting in 1890, small in numbers but great in purpose, it is little wonder your society has grown great in membership and influence. From four chapters and 300 members at the end of the first six months, it has reached a total enrolment of more than 156,000 and a chapter roll of over 2,000.

In recent years there have been periods when new members have been taken in at the rate of 1,000 a month. Truly a powerful force for good in our country—such a body of high-minded women with such a heritage of sacrifice and devotion to an ideal! What possibilities for future service rest in such a devoted body of citizens!

I have been reading your constitution and considering the objects of your society there set forth. It declare your purpose:

"To perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence by the acquisition and protection of historical spots and the erection of monuments * * *."

How well this has been carried out is known to all who have visited such spots. That it has been done is a reason for your existence. Who can measure the inspiration that may be drawn from such symbols of heroic deeds!

You have encouraged research into Revolutionary history, published the results, aided in the preservation of documents and relics, of the individual service records of soldiers and patriots. You have promoted the celebration of patriotic anniversaries. Worthy acts of service to the nation, each and every one!

You undertake to promote institutions for the diffusion of knowledge to the end that there may be developed "the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens." You have added to your endeavors of this character the very practical and necessary work of helping the foreign-born to understand and acquire the full benefit of living in America.

Practical Ideals of Citizenship.

But it is the third and last, and the most important, paragraph of your declaration of purpose that arouses the keenest interest. In it you say it shall be your endeavor:

"To cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom; to foster true patriotism and love of country and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty."

These are principles worthy of the best support that the country can give. Yet it is not beyond the capacity of the humblest citizen to make some contribution for their establishment.

However exalted is the conception of our institutions, they are not beyond the reach of the common run of people. They are ideal, but they are practical. They rest on the every-day virtues—honesty, industry and thrift. As the overwhelming mass of our people are thoroughly loyal to these principles, we can feel a warranted assurance that the foundations of our institutions are secure.

But while we are justified in the assumption that the heart of the people is sound, and that they are moved by worthy motives, it can not be denied that we always have and do now suffer from many minor afflictions. That would be disturbing if one did not realize that more serious maladies have been met and overcome in the past, and that there is every reason to believe that our people have sufficient character to meet the requirements of the present day.

Our Republic gives to its citizens greater opportunities, and under it they have achieved greater blessings than ever came to any other people. It is exceedingly wholesome to stop and contemplate that undisputed fact, from time to time. Then, it is necessary to contemplate the inescapable corollary that the enjoyment and perpetuation of these conditions necessarily lay upon our people the obligation of corresponding service and sacrifice.

Citizenship in America is not a private enterprise, but a public function. Although I have indicated that it is my firm conviction that this requirement will be met, it can not be denied that if it is not met disaster will overtake the whole fabric of our institutions.

Our very success and prosperity have brought with them their own perils. It cannot be denied that in the splendor and glamour of our life the moral sense is sometimes blinded. It cannot be disputed that in too many quarters there is a lack of reverence for authority and of obedience to law. Such occurrences are sporadic and produce their own remedy.

When society finds that its life and property are in peril from evildoers it is very quick to organize its forces for its own protection. That cannot fail to be done in our country, for our people as a whole are thoroughly law-abiding.

It is not in violence and crime that our greatest danger lies. These evils are so perfectly apparent that they very quickly arouse the moral power of the people for their suppression. A far more serious danger lurks in the shirking of those responsibilities of citizenship, where the evil may not be so noticeable but is more insidious and likely to be more devastating.

We live in a Republic. A vital principle of that form of government is representation. More and more as our population increases it becomes necessary for the people to express their will through their duly chosen delegates. If we are to maintain the principle that Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, if we are to have any measure of self-government, if the voice of the people is to rule, if representatives are truly to reflect the popular will, it is altogether necessary that in each election there should be a fairly full participation by all the qualified voters.

This is very far from being the case in recent years. Since 1880 there has been a marked increase in the tendency to remain away from the polls on the part of those entitled to vote. But, despite a steady decline in the vote in the five Presidential elections in the period 1880-1896, there was a voting average of 80 per cent. Out of every 100 persons entitled to vote eighty went to the polls.

Half at Polls in National Election.

For the last two presidential elections the average has been less than 50 per cent. and that in the face of a sincere effort on the part of numerous organizations to get out the vote. In this effort it is reported many Daughters of the American Revolution took part.

From its early inception the town meeting, featuring New England life, an example of pure democracy, was generally well attended. Although representative government did not originate here, our form of representative democracy is our own product.

The national election day was fixed in the Constitution, and most of the States accepted that first Tuesday after the first Monday in November as the day upon which the voters should choose their local officials. Election day in the olden times was generally considered more or less sacred—one to be devoted to the discharge of the obligations of citizenship.

In the intervening years customs and habits have changed. Opportunities for recreation have increased. Our entire mode of life has been recast through invention, the great growth of cities, and for other reasons. Undoubtedly, this has been responsible in no small measure for the widespread disregard on the part of so many of our citizens of the privilege and duty of voting. But back of these conditions there are probably some deeper and more fundamental reasons.

It was hoped that giving the vote to women would arouse a more general interest in the obligations of election day. That has not yet proved to be the case. The Presidential election in 1920 was the first after the adoption of the universal suffrage amendment. There is no way to divide the total vote cast by men and women.

But, after that election some rather complicated calculations were made, based on the assumption that the accession of women might be presumed to double the vote. The calculators reached the conclusion that of the approximate 27,000,000 votes cast only 37 per cent. represented the votes of women. Some say the percentage of the feminine vote was greater in 1924. Others say it was less.

I am not disposed to accept these conclusions as altogether fair to the women. And it stands to reason that it would take some time for them to become used to exercising the privilege which had belonged to the men of this country for many generations.

It is not my purpose to draw any distinction between the men and the women as to the extent to which they take advantage of their privilege and perform their duty at the ballot box. But rather it is my idea to call your attention to the startling fact that in the last two Presidential elections barely 50 per cent. of those qualified to vote have done so. In the Senatorial elections in off years the voting percentage is much smaller.

A published study of the Senatorial vote of 1922 revealed some astonishing facts. In not a few of the States the total vote cast for Senatorial candidates was less than 30 per cent. of the total possible vote. In not a single case did the successful candidate secure anywhere near a majority of the total possible vote. There was one State in which the percentage was 42 and another in which it was 33. From that it ran down sharply to certain States where the candidates elected received as low as 7, 9 or 18 per cent. of the total possible vote.

Asks United Action to Curb Evil.

If we are to keep our representative form of government and to maintain the principle that the majority shall rule, it behooves us to take some drastic action to arouse the voters of this country to a greater interest in their civic duties on election day.

Many remedies have been proposed, from disfranchisement to criminal action. The most practical, I believe, however, is for all bodies of men and women interested in the welfare of this country to join together under some efficient form of organization to correct this evil which has been coming on us for more than forty years, but which within the last decade has become most acute.

Having in mind the poor showing made in the Presidential election of 1920 an effort was made to get out a larger participation on election day in 1924. Such prominent bodies as the National Civic Federation, the National League of Women Voters, the American Federation of Labor, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and a large number of other organizations, business as well as civic, each in its own way, attempted to get people to the polls. Members of the Daughters of the American Revolution took part as individuals but not as an organization, I understand.

When the vote was counted it was found the percentage of vote cast was very little greater in 1924 than in 1920. One of those most earnestly interested in the movement writing about it later said:

"Was it a tragedy or was it a farce—the result of the great and more or less spectacular campaign by voluntary organizations to 'Get Out the Vote'?"

Despite all this effort the percentage of those voting was barely 50. The question naturally arises. Had it not been for all this work would not the decline have reached an extraordinary and a humiliatingly low point? The very fact that there was little net increase after all the self-sacrificing and disinterested work would seem to show clearly the growing strength of the tendency to remain away from the polls on election day.

Led by our example, country after country in various parts of the world has adopted a representative form of government and extended its franchise for the election of parliamentary bodies. There was a time when America led the world in getting out the vote. It is not pleasant to find that now we have dropped far behind some of the other nations in our participation in popular elections.

We are told that 82 per cent. of the men and women qualified to vote went to the polls in the Parliamentary elections in England and Wales in 1922. The British electorate is maintaining a voting average of 60 per cent. better than ours. In Germany in 1920 the vote approximated 75 per cent. of the total electorate. And it is estimated that in 1924 this was increased to 82 per cent.

In 1921 in Canada, in voting for members of the lower House of Parliament, a little over 70 per cent. of the voting population participated. Over a period of twenty-one years Australia has maintained an average of somewhat better than 70 per cent. The percentage in Italy in 1923 was 64.

The perilous aspect of this situation lies in its insidiousness. With the broadening of popular powers, the direct election of practically all public officials, and the direct nomination of most of them, there is no opportunity for an expression of the public will except at the ballot box.

It is perfectly evident that all those who have selfish interests will go to the polls and will be active and energetic in securing support for their proposals and their candidates. The average voter supports what he believes to be the public interest. Unless they appear on election day, that interest will go unrepresented.

Self-Government at Stake.

As our resources increase, as the relationship between individuals becomes more intricate, the Government becomes more and more important. We do not need to fear a frontal attack upon it. Whenever the public scents that it is in danger, they will be quick enough to give it adequate support. It is only the approach of some silent and unrecognized peril that needs to give us alarm.

Such a situation will develop if the Government ceases to represent the people because the public has become inarticulate. We are placing our reliance on the principle of self-government. We expect there will be mistakes, but they will be the mistakes which the people themselves make, because they control their own Government. But if the people fail to vote, a Government will be developed which is not their Government.

This is not a partisan question, but a patriotic question. Your society, which is organized "to cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom," may well take a leading part in arousing public sentiment to the peril that arises when the average citizen fails to vote.

The women of the country ought to be especially responsive to an appeal from you. I feel quite certain that with the men it would be almost irresistible.

The American people have been especially responsive in meeting the requirements of taxation. They ought to be even more responsive in meeting the requirements of voting. The whole system of American Government rests on the ballot box. Unless citizens perform their duties there, such a system of government is doomed to failure.

Delegates Cheer Dry Law Plea.

Mrs. Cook's demand that the women use their influence to strengthen law enforcement was cheered by the delegates.

"Rather than continually searching out what's wrong with our young people, might it not richly repay our investigation to inquire what's right with the young folk and what's wrong with the elders?" Mrs. Cook asked.

"In America we are at the crossroads as to law enforcement. There can be no negative conduct in relation to this great issue, for all conduct is positive. We are either for or against law observance and law enforcement.

"Let it be understood that we cannot pick and choose from among the laws those we will obey and those we nullify in personal conduct.

"Based upon a nation-wide survey conducted during my three-year term it is my deliberate opinion the people of America will never repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. Nor do I think we should.

"I am, rather, steadfast in the opinion that as members of the largest women's patriotic organization in the country we should pledge ourselves not only to do whatsoever we can to prevent the repeal of the amendment but to do our utmost by precept and example to aid and assist in the observance of enforcement.

"I am confident that as a nation we are about to do this completely, enthusiastically and successfully."

Longworth Defends "Aloofness" Policy.

Speaker Longworth, asserting that the United States is the richest and happiest country in the world, declared himself against abandoning "our policy of aloofness, if you please to call it so," and entering "into definite contractual relations with nations less fortunately situated than we."

Granting that this might be called a selfish point of view, he said, he was willing "to be selfish when the interests of my family and my country are at stake."

"As I have followed the proceedings of the League of Nations, admitting that it may have accomplished some good for its members in minor matters," he said, "I feel assured that instead of diminishing, it has in substantial degree not only increased existing sentiments of envy, hatred and malice among its members, but has engendered new ones.

"Whether I am right or not, whatever the truth may be, I want none of it for America.

"I am unalterably opposed to my country's entrance into the League of Nations. I am opposed also to its association in any manner with the League or any of its recognized and directed agencies. I want America to continue as she now is, unrestricted by any covenant, free to take such action as she may herself determine either in aid to her less fortunate friends or in the preservation of her own national interests."

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, April 20—Belts have always been in style, but style has not always been in belts. From clumsy circlets of leather they have recently been refined into objects of uncommon good looks without detracting from their forthright utility.

A novel belt for spring is fashioned of smart, sturdy natural-grain pigskin. It is equipped with two nickel rings which, fitting over each hip, lend added pliability.

Then, there are the brilliantly striped belts of silk or lisle elastic webbing for the sportsman in club, college, regimental and blazer colors. Exclusive, but not expensive.

TACNA-ARICA CRISIS NEARING SETTLEMENT

REJECTION REPORT UNTRUE

South Americans Study Plan to Make Disputed Area a Neutralized State.

OPTIMISM NOW PREVAILS

Failure Had Been Feared as a Blow to Mediation Policy in Latin Republics.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The Tacna-Arica crisis took an optimistic trend this evening. A wordy report from South America that the Chilean Government had rejected the proposals for adjustment made by the United States was shown to be untrue.

A conference this afternoon between Secretary Kellogg, Dr. Herenan Velarde, the Peruvian Ambassador, and Señor Miguel Cruchaga, the Chilean Ambassador, not only disclosed that neither disputant had declined to accept the alternative proposals, but had taken them under advisement.

While nothing concrete developed out of the conference, the nature of the discussion between the three conferees left a hopeful feeling that an amicable settlement might be reached. This hopefulness was accentuated by Secretary Kellogg's decision that the situation would justify his absence from Washington tomorrow to attend the annual luncheon of The Associated Press in New York, at which he will deliver an address.

Alternative Proposals Studied.

The chief purpose of the conference was to enable the Peruvian and Chilean plenipotentiaries to ascertain the exact meaning of each of the alternative proposals. They were credited with being especially anxious, in accordance with instructions from heir Governments, to have a clearer idea of the scope and character of the suggestion that Chile and Peru agree to the following:

"The territory of Tacna and Arica shall be constituted as a neutralized State, either independent or under the protect'on of South American States, as may be agreed."

Little concerning what went on behind the closed door of the Secretary of States's office was made known, but it became known that neither South American Government had reached any conclusion as to the response it would make to either proposal. After the conference the impression existed, although without any authoritative sanction, that the Chilean Government desired to be assured whether the creation of the Tacna-Arica territory into a neutralized or buffer State would mean that troops of the United States or other foreign nations would be quartered there to guarantee the neutrality agreed upon.

It is taken for granted that President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg had no such idea in mind, certainly with respect to the United States. The proposal of this Government says specifically that the suggested neutralized area should be "either independent or under the protectorate of South American States, as may be agreed." Should the protectorate idea be adopted. It would be for Chile and Peru to determine how neutrality should be maintained. That is a matter of detail for the two disputants to work out. It is a phase of the situation that would be handled by negotiation after the neutralization of Tacna-Arica under a protectorate had been accepted by Peru and Chile.

May Adopt Locarno Plan.

To constitute the Tacna-Arica area an independent nation might involve more prolonged consideration, but the groundwork for carrying out that suggestion is afforded in offering the Chilean and Peruvian nationals of the territory the election citizenship in the new State with a possible application of the principle of the security treaties negotiated by European nations at Locarno. For the present, however, the chief aim of the United States Government appears to be to obtain assurance that Peru and Chile will accept a principle that will insure the removal of the Tacna-Arica question from the dangerous position it now occupies.

The alternative proposal of the United States was that "the provinces of Tacna and Arica shall be transferred (upon an apportionment of equitable compensation, and appropriate economic arrangements, to be agreed upon) to a South American State not a party to these negotiations." The only suggestion thus far advanced in explanation of this proposal is that Bolivia might be willing to purchase Tacna-Arica. The impression prevails in informed circles here that neither Chile nor Peru would care to make any such disposition of the disputed territory. This impression was heightened by the understanding that this afternoon's discussion between the Secretary of State and the Peruvian and Chilean Ambassadors was confined to the proposal of constituting Tacna-Arica a buffer State.

The two plenipotentiaries were closeted with Secretary Kellogg for an hour and a half. Immediately after they left the State Department Mr. Kellogg went to the White House for a conference with President Coolidge. This was indicative of the great importance that the Administration attaches to the Tacna-Arica question. While officials concerned are refraining from expressing any views as to the situation, it is apparent that they regard it as of much consequence to all countries of the Western Hemisphere and have been extremely perturbed over the report that the Administration's tender of good offices had failed.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that those who have a deep interest in the political and economic welfare of Latin America feel that an abortive ending of the current exchanges would result in a retrogression in the favorable public opinion toward that part of the world created in recent years. The constant aim of successive Washington Administrations has been to establish most cordial relations with the other American Governments and it would be a severe blow to this endeavor to have world opinion, and especially opinion in the United States, adopt a critical view of Latin American capacity for maintaining national and international tranquility.

Loss of World Favor Feared.

Latin America has assumed a notable leadership in the adjustment of international disputes through arbitration and it is feared that a failure of Chile and Peru to settle their long standing troubles over Tacna-Arica would bring a popular reaction detrimental to the best interests of the whole of South America.

From an immediate practical viewpoint, the Coolidge Administration would find itself extremely embarrassed if its tender of good offices failed and it felt obliged, perforce, to carry out the "laws" of the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary commission, originally headed by General John J. Pershing and now by Major Gen. William Lassiter.

Judged by Peruvian objections that might mean that Peru would advise its citizens in Tacna-Arica to refrain from voting in the plebiscite, and thus place the United States as arbitrator in the uncomfortable position of having to determine whether ownership of the disputed area should be confined to Chile by reason of the votes cast by Chilean citizens alone.

Out of the private discussion of the Tacna-Arica problem has come a suggestion that the dispute might be brought before the League of Nations for solution. There is no warrant for attributing this suggestion to any official source and nothing has taken place to indicate that the League is being considered as a factor in the matter.

SOLDIER DOUBTS THE STORY

But He Sees So Many Wonders He Is Puzzled—Report Esthonians Fired On Norge.

By WALTER DURANTY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, April 19.—The Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile expedition is likely to provide Russian villages with a topic of interest for years to come. Already in Leningrad there is circulating a rumor, which even found its way into one of the more popular newspapers, that Esthonian troops fired on the dirigible Norge in passage—presumably with the idea that she was a new Bolshevik plot.

But here in Moscow this afternoon THE NEW YORK TIMES got a contribution from a peasant woman in a street car which is veritable folklore. Amundsen's purpose, she declared, was to carry off the daughter of the Ice King, who lived in a silver palace at the North Pole. All the furniture and vessels of the palace were of pure gold, which Amundsen was to bring back to Russia to help her in hard times. Furthermore, the Ice King was extremely annoyed by the project, and that was why the Spring thaw this year was delayed three weeks beyond normal. Altogether, in the old woman's opinion, the voyage was a dangerous experiment.

The origin of such stories—which the speaker declared were known to most people in her village fifty miles north of Moscow—doubtless arises in references in the press to the possible general wealth of undiscovered polar land and from such cartoons as appeared in one newspaper here today, showing a sort of Father Christmas labeled North Pole, saying:

At the same time a soldier in the street car made a comment on the woman's story which illustrates the curious effect on the Russian peasant masses of the new wonders of science. He said:

"I don't believe in the Ice King's palace, or the English would have stolen the gold long ago, but it is perhaps true, for many things which I didn't believe I have since seen with my own eyes. When I was told we could have cold light burning in the street without setting fire—an electric lamp—or that men could fly like birds or that one could speak in a tube at Moscow and a comrade answer in Red Peter—Leningrad—I knew that they were lies and impossible, yet lo, behold it!"

PUBLICATION OF NOTES CAUSES STIR IN CHILE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, April 19.—The correspondent of La Nacion, in Santiago, Chile, wires that publication of the notes exchanged between William M. Collier, American Ambassador, and the Foreign Office regarding the attitude of Augustin Edwards, Chilean member of the Plebiscite Commission, concerning the proposed neutralization of the disputed Tacna-Arica territory, has caused lively comment.

A member of the Government told the correspondent that the affair was not as important as it was being made to appear, and that there would soon be an explanation that would prove Señor Edwards' procedure to have been correct. His idea was communicated in an intimate manner, like other formulas discussed for settling the Tacna-Arica question, and was not an official proposition. The correspondent asserts that the neutralization proposal had other important partisans beside Señor Edwards. At the time it was believed that the United States might declare the plebiscite impractical.

When Señor Edwards heard of the affair he cabled to Foreign Minister Mathieu explaining, confirming and amplifying the information previously given, and asking its publication. Señor Mathieu replied that a decision would be made tomorrow, it being understood that the Government wishes to avoid difficulties, especially after publication of the Collier statement.

A Cabinet official, asked when the Washington conference of good offices would end, said laconically, that it would end of itself. It was to be understood that he thought the good offices conference would be a fizzle unless it took on a more practical and more feasible objective, something that is very difficult when dealing with opponents who do not wish to agree.

For all these reasons there exists the opinion that there may be a decision within the plan proposed by the United States. The United States may have had the intention to give a hearing to Bolivia at the conference, and perhaps will insist upon it, but thus far the opinion of Chile and Peru is against such intervention, and instructions to that effect have been given to their respective representatives.

It is thought that the problem will get more and more complicated, with new incidents arising.

LIMA, Peru, April 19 (AP).—The Secretary of State has conferred with President Leguia, concerning the situation arising from the attack by a mob of 2,000 on the Peruvian legation at La Paz, Bolivia, Friday night. The attack followed the killing of two Bolivians by a Peruvian customs official, on the Peru-Bolivian border. The conference was followed by a visit of the Bolivian charge d'affaires to the Secretary of State to present his Government's regrets that the incident occurred.

SONS GET WILSON ESTATE.

Chief Beneficiaries Under the Late Social Leader's Will.

The two sons of Marshall Orme Wilson, retired banker and social leader, who died on April 1, are the principal beneficiaries under his will, filed for probate yesterday. Legacies of $500,000 each are left to the sons, Orme Wilson of 11 East Sixty-fourth Street and Richard Thornton Wilson of 1 Sutton Place South, who also receive equal shares in the residuary estate in trust for life. They are empowered to dispose of it by their wills.

Mrs. Caroline Astor Wilson, the widow, inherits all effects, both personal and household, which the will provides are to be taken in lieu of dower and dowe: rights in any real estate. Mr. Wilson specifically declares in his will that "nothing in this will shall be deemed an execution by me of any power or powers of appointment that I have under a deed of trust dated Nov. 15, 1884, between Richard T. Wilson, the United States Trust Company and myself, it being my intention not to execute hereby such power or powers of appointment."

The late Richard T. Wilson was father of Marshall Orme Wilson. By waiving any intention of disposing of the principal of the trust the decedent causes the money to pass to his children without the imposition of a Federal or State inheritance tax. The amount of the trust was not disclosed.

MISSING GIRL A BRIDE; PARENTS AT MARRIAGE

When Alphonse Sepe, father of Rose Sepe, a seventeen-year-old student at New York University, who eloped with a barber last Friday and who was married to him in New Haven yesterday in the presence of her parents, stepped from the train at the Grand Central Terminal last night he was somewhat downhearted because of his daughter marrying a man not of his choice. His gloom increased materially when Detective Vincent de Guida of Brooklyn stepped up to him and placed him under arrest, so that he could be held as a material witness in connection with the hold-up of his garage at 114 Roebling Street, Brooklyn, on Aug. 18 last.

On that day three men robbed Sepe of a diamond ring valued at $1,500 and $1,500 in cash. The men were caught and indicted, but Sepe disappeared and a warrant for his arrest was issued. De Guida, who had the warrant, was unable to find Sepe until he read of the elopement and the visit to New Haven. The detective went to the Grand Central and waited till Sepe came along.

Miss Sepe left her home at 2,111 Quentin Road, Brooklyn, on Friday with Joseph Petrillo, a barber of 102 Sullivan Street. The couple went to Boston and tried to get married, but were prevented by the five-day law in effect in Massachusetts. They started back for New York, but the father had put detectives on their track and they were taken from the train at New Haven. Mr. and Mrs. Sepe were notified and they went to New Haven. After a conference, Miss Sepe and Petrillo were married by Justice of the Peace Clifford Sturgis.

Sepe said that he was building a $10,000 home for his daughter, to be given to her after she graduated and if she married in accordance with his wishes. She will not get the home now, he said. Mr. and Mrs. Petrillo said they were both happy and were not bothering about Sepe's house or money.

WILKINS PLANE AWED NATIVES OF ALASKA

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 19.—Jonathan H. Wagner, Chief of the Alaska Bureau of the United States Department of Education, received today a letter from Point Barrow, the Arctic base of the Wilkins polar expedition, mailed two weeks ago.

Ordinarily it requires four or five months at this time of year for mail delivery from Point Barrow to Seattle. The phenomenal speed made by the letter was a mystery until it was learned that it arrived with the aid of Captain George H. Wilkins, who recently flew from Fairbanks to Point Barrow and return.

The letter, written by George Sylvester, a Government teacher, revealed that Captain Wilkins's flight amazed the natives, as it was the first time they had ever seen the white man's "thunderbird."

"There was great excitement and elation as Captain Wilkins and Pilot Eielson made a perfect landing in a thirty-mile wind," wrote Sylvester.

The letter also brought first news of the Winter from the isolated Government post, most northernmost tip of the American Arctic. Sylvester wrote that a mild typhoid epidemic is now under control.

HOSPITAL HAD ACTIVE YEAR.

The annual report of the Knickerbocker Hospital, which is making a public appeal for funds for new buildings and extension of its dispensary service, was issued yesterday by the President, James C. McGuire.

The report announces the establishment of a prenatal clinic and a nose and throat clinic, which will be put in operation when the new emergency building at Convent Avenue and 130th Street is completed in the Fall.

During the past year, the report says, 4,833 emergency calls were answered by the three ambulances; patients received the equivalent of 25,599 days' treatment; 2,495 patients were admitted, 3,600 were treated in the emergency ward, 1,537 operations were performed in the hospital and 3,225 in the dispensary and 12,829 persons were treated in the dispensary.

CHURCH PEW KNOWN AS LOVE NEST, HE SAYS

Pewter Files Affidavit to Aid Parishioner's Separation Suit Against Husband.

So open and so ardent was the love-making of Benjamin Tuthill, a married man, and Miss Henrietta Carpenter, Sunday school teacher, that the pew they occupied became known to the parishioners of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, as the love nest, according to an affidavit filed yesterday in the Brooklyn Supreme Court by the Rev. Robert McCaul, pastor of the church.

Mr. McCaul made the affidavit in support of a suit for separation brought by Mrs. Margaret M. Tuthill of 511 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, who charges cruel and inhuman treatment. Tuthill, an engineer employed at the Brooklyn Museum, entered a general denial of his wife's charges.

Affidavits were filed before Justice Carswell by Mr. McCaul, by the pastor's wife and by Miss Annie Schrimpler of 184 De Kalb Avenue, Secretary of the Children's World Crusade of Long Island. Mr. McCaul recently faced trouble in his church which culminated when those in the congregation opposed to him applied to the Supreme Court for a restraining order, which was refused.

Tuthill, according to the pastor's affidavit, went to church alone for eight years and it was assumed from his attitude that he was unmarried. He observed, he said, that Tuthill always sat in the same pew with Miss Carpenter. This continued until the latter part of 1924, when Tuthill went to Egypt for three months. When he returned, he said, the couple sat together again.

"I learned," the affidavit continued, "that their intimacy had reached such proportions that their seating was being characterized by my parishioners as a love nest."

Last October, he said, he discovered there was a Mrs. Tuthill, and called upon her, and found her with her face scratched and bearing other evidence of having been assaulted. He said it was about that time that Mrs. Tuthill had her husband taken before a Magistrate and placed in $500 bond to keep the peace.

Miss Carpenter of 660 Dean Street, Brooklyn, in an affidavit, characterized as false the charge that she was responsible for any trouble between the Tuthills. Tuthill, she said, was a Christian and a gentleman. "I heard Mr. McCaul tell Mr. Tuthill he would not need any coal this Winter as he would make it hot for him," she said. The Court reserved decision.

SAY KELLOGG BALKED OIL DEAL WITH RUSSIA

Paris Hears Standard Oil Backed Out of the International Combination.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 19.—It is reported here that the attitude of the American State Department has had influence on the debt negotiations between the French and Russians.

One of the many proposals which have been under consideration was that the Soviets should hand over to an international oil consortium concessions for Russian petrol, part of the profits going to pay the Russian debt to France. Under this proposal English oil companies would have cooperated with the Standard Oil.

The plan has fallen through and there may have been many reasons, but one reported reason is that the Standard Oil refused to enter the combination, acting under the influence and advice of Washington.

As far as the negotiations are concerned, their total result so far has been nil. The French wish to collect from Russia and the Russians do not wish to pay anything. That makes a difficult situation always. Only a few days ago the Russians let it be known that the Banque de Paris des Pays-Bas was going to head a big combine to take over Soviet concessions, but the bank has issued an official denial. Ambassador Rakowsky is very anxious to make a paper settlement with Paris, but the French interfere with his plan by insisting that part of any settlement shall be provision for Russian payments to France. For Russia owes France more than France owes America.

KIDNAP GIRL, NINE; ASK $6,000 RANSOM

band shouted to her not to permit any one to enter the house except persons brought by him, and ran to the Miller Avenue station to notify the police.

The detectives under Inspector Sullivan came immediately. Mr. Martucci could not tell them anything about the messenger, but after he related the circumstances in which it was received Inspector Sullivan assigned the detectives to investigate the various features presented.

They learned of the delivery of the message to the Western Union office on Atlantic Avenue and were told that the young man had specified it was to be left at the Martucci home promptly at 1 o'clock. The message was delivered by Thomas Capale, a company messenger, who lives at 394 Crescent Street, Brooklyn. He was unable to tell the detectives anything about the young man.

None Found Who Saw Child.

The three children who accompanied Emma to Pitkin Avenue and Ashford Street told of having left her at that corner. Louis and Ida Rosenberg, owners of the candy store, whence a display of wares prevented an unobstructed view of the sidewalk, reported, the police said, that they did not see a little girl standing on the corner at noon and that no other persons were noticed loitering there. No other persons who had noticed the child could be located during the afternoon and evening.

Emma's teacher, Miss Rose Rivkin, corroborated the statement of the Martuccis as to the child's good behavior. She said Emma was an ideal pupil, obedient and bright, and that she knew the child carried out her parents' instructions not to play in the street nor to speak to strangers.

The Martuccis were at a loss to explain why any one should want to kidnap their child except for ransom. Mr. Martucci, who has lived in the United States for thirteen years, has prospered. He owns the Liberty Tile Company and the Liberty Concrete Company, which employ eighty workmen. These firms' offices are on the ground floor of the building occupied by the Martuccis. On the roof of the structure he built a playground for his children, so they would not need to seek recreation in the streets or in the public playgrounds, and usually, he said, they played alone.

He insisted last night he would not pay ransom, although Mrs. Martucci was sobbing and pleading for the payment and return of their child.

"I will not be a victim of criminals," he said. "My father, who was a prefect of police, always told me never to give in to criminals, especially blackmailers, but to fight them. I will fight them, and the police will help me. We shall get these men."

Mother Prays for Girl.

Meanwhile Mrs. Martucci was sobbing prayers for the safety of the child.

"Just tell them to treat my litti girl right," she said. "Tell them to send her back to me as well as she was when she went away, and God will bless them."

Emma was described as 4 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 75 pounds and having brown hair, brown eyes and a light complexion. She wore a blue coat, a yellow dress, a blue slip-over sweater, brown shoes with buckles and blue silk hat.

In addition to Inspector Sullivan the search for the child was conducted by John J. McCluskey, Acting Captain of the Sixth Division; Harry Hanley, Sergeant of Detectives of the Sixth Division, and Lieutenant Anthony Duffy of the Miller Avenue Station. The Italian detectives, all of whom have had years of experience in similar cases, were Detectives Grieco, Dardio, Giordano, Melli, Bonano and De Guider.

They were told by Mr. Martucci that he was not aware he had any enemies. He said he got along well with his employes, that business was good and that he rarely had to dispense with any one's services and that so far as he knew none of his relatives of the present generation in Italy had enemiese here who might seek to revenge themselves through him.

The search, accordingly, was conducted on the theory that strangers who knew of Martucci's prosperity had kidnapped the child for the ransom. After every avenue in the vicinity of the corner where the child was last seen was searched for persons who might have seen her walk away, the detectives began the house-to-house search. Late last night they had not turned up a single clue.

ASKS AID IN LOCATING BOY.

Banton Requests Chaplain to Question Woman Jailed as Kidnapper.

District Attorney Banton wrote a letter yesterday to Father Paul Gaffney, Roman Catholic Chaplain of the State Prison for Women at Auburn, N. Y., requesting him to seek information from Mrs. Mary Jones, an inmate, regarding the whereabouts of 4-year-old Raymond von Maluski Jr., for whose kidnapping the woman was sentenced a little more than a year ago to a term of from twenty-five to forty years.

Mrs. Jones was convicted of kidnapping the boy from in front of the former home of his parents, 600 West 178th Street. Reports reached Mr. Banton that the woman had sent letters to the parents of the child recently, intimating that persons she named as the actual kidnappers had the child somewhere in the vicinity of the Bowery.

It was the second time since last October that the prosecutor wrote to the priest, asking his aid in obtaining information from the woman. Assistant District Attorney John L. MacDonnell, who prosecuted the case against Mrs. Jones, said yesterday that no reply had been received by Mr. Banton to the first letter. This letter was sent by the District Attorney after he had received a letter, purporting to have been written by Mrs. Jones at the prison, to the effect that she was tiring of her silence and wanted to see others punished for their part in the kidnapping.

"If we hear anything as a result of our letters to Father Gaffney," District Attorney Banton said yesterday, "we will decide whether or not to take action. If we do not hear from Father Gaffney this time, Mr. MacDonnell may go to Auburn to see Mrs. Jones. This would be merely to make certain to overlook no possible chance of getting a clue to the whereabouts of the kidnapped child."

Detective Sergeant England, head of the detectives who gathered evidence against Mrs. Jones in the kidnapping case, was closeted with Mr. MacDonnell for some time before the second letter was sent. England had previously tried to find the boy as a result of intimations in letters the woman had sent to the police and the parents of the child.

POPE PIUS OUTLINES POLICY FOR MEXICO

He Urges "Peaceful Procedure" by Catholics With Exercise of Civic Rights.

LIMITS ACTION BY CLERGY

And Bars the Use of the Word "Catholic" by Any Political Party Formed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—An Apostolic letter from Pope Pius to the Archbishop of Mexico City and other Bishops in Mexico, protesting against the treatment of Catholic clergy and members of Catholic orders by the present Mexican Government, and outlining the course they should follow, was given to newspapers this evening with the statement that, although dated Feb. 2, it was not made public in Rome until today.

The letter lays down a policy of peaceful procedure to be observed by Mexican Catholics. He tells the clergy to hold aloof from political parties and not to write political articles, but to develop "Catholic action" by devoting themselves to the betterment of moral and economic conditions.

Catholics in Mexico are forbidden to establish any political party under the name of Catholic but are advised to exercise their civic duties.

The so-called National Church, fostered by the Government of President Calles, is condemned. In the deportation of the Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Cimino, the Calles Government is accused of having violated a pledge that it would receive him and would not hamper him.

Text of the Pontiff's Letter.

The text of the letter follows:

To His Venerable Brothers, Joseph, Archbishop of Mexico City, and the other Archbishops and Bishops of Mexico, Pope Pius XI sends greetings and the Apostolic blessing, Venerable Brothers:

The fatherly solicitude with which we, who, by reason of the high office bestowed upon us through the will of God, follow all the faithful of the whole world, demands in a very special manner that we love with a singular love those whom we see stricken with graver ills, and who, therefore, need all the more the zealous care of their common Father.

Hardly had we been raised to the chair of St. Peter before we very gladly directed toward you, Venerable Brothers, our most considerate and loving attention, as we realized that you were beset by such afflictions as certainly bring shame to a people almost totally Catholic, and who, at the same time, make up a civil society cultured and adorned with all the arts of civilization.

It is scarcely necessary for us to tell you how wicked are the regulations and laws invoked against the Catholic citizens of Mexico which have been sanctioned by officials hostile to the Church and which by their enforcement long have oppressed you.

You are fully aware that these laws are far from being reasonable laws, nor are they useful and necessary for the common good as assuredly all laws should be. On the contrary, they do not seem to merit even the name of laws.

Protests Rejection of Ministry.

Our predecessor, Benedict XV, of happy memory, accorded you deserved praise because you rightly, and moved by your religious beliefs, took exception to these laws by solemnly protesting against them, which action of Pope Benedict we by this our letter, do not only ratify, but make our very own.

Indeed, we are moved all the more insistently to utter this public protest and condemnation of such laws seeing that, day after day, the warfare against the Catholic religion is being waged more bitterly by the rulers of the Republic, so that assuredly whatsoever lies within our power to aid the people of Mexico toward the establishment of peace, even that now becomes both ineffective and useless, all of which will result to the great detriment of our beloved country.

Who is there that does not know that our Apostolic Delegate whom you two years ago received with such marks of appreciation and joy, was expelled from Mexico City as if he were a common enemy of the Republic? This act not only betrayed lack of a sense of justice and a breach of good faith, but was likewise a most grievous insult both to us, to the hierarchy and the whole people of Mexico.

Forbearance in Situation.

And if, under the circumstances, we refrained deliberately from a public protest—which no one can deny this act rightly and richly deserved—and bore patiently for a long time the insult, imploring that you too should endure it with calmness, our hesitation was due not only to the sentiments of peace which ever actuate us, but also that consuming hope which we cherished in our fatherly heart that eventually the rulers of the republic would acknowledge and voluntarily accept the certain and well-established rights of our apostolic delegate.

However, this temperateness and courtesy on our part failed of a happy result, although the civil rulers had openly promised that they would receive our apostolic delegate and that they would in no way offend against his dignity nor hamper him in the exercise of his official duties.

You already know how painful to us was the unexpected and altogether undreamed of tidings that these same rulers of the country, contrary to all etiquette and custom, had refused to honor the obligations which they had assumed, and had forbidden our venerable brother, Seraphim Cimino, whom they ought to have received as our apostolic delegate, to return to Mexico when his failing health required his temporary absence from the country, his departure being grasped as an occasion for their deed, but without any sound cause or justification.

Wherefore the rulers of that Republic by their refusal to accept our apostolic delegate have, at the same time, attempted utterly to repudiate our own ministry which practically all rulers the world over accept as a ministery of peace. Then they turn themselves to the false argument of the necessity of their protecting the Republic in order that they may justify the happenings which take place in your country to the detriment of its Catholic citizens.

Calls "National Church" a Usurper.

Day after day these hostile laws and regulations are more bitterly enforced, and if this continues, the common rights of citizenship will be automatically denied Catholics, and the functions and ministry of the Christian religion itself will die.

This liberty of action, moreover, which the rulers of the country deny the Catholic Church, they freely bestow upon a schismatic sect called the National Church; although this sect is in conflict with the sacred rights of the Roman Church, they have fostered its beginnings and its undertakings while, on the other hand, they consider you enemies of the republic for the sole reason that you have preserved intact and in its entirety the patrimony of your ancestral faith.

Yet, afflicted and saddened as we are by these events, there is one thing that has brought great solace to our heart, for we know that the Mexican people are strenuously combatting the machinations of these schismatics.

Wherefore, while we profoundly thank the Providence of God, we beg of you, venerable brothers, to speak loudly your praise of all the faithful of the Republic of Mexico and vehemently exhort them to stand fast in their defense of the Catholic religion.

Let us repeat here the words which we uttered last year at the sacred consistory, held on the the 14th of December in the presence of a large gathering of distinguished Cardinals and Bishops, at a moment when we were deeply stirred by the calamities that molested us. At that time we said:

"We are scarcely able to conceive a hope for better days except they come as the result of prompt assistance on the part of a merciful God, which help we daily implore, and from the development among the people themselves of a harmonious coordination of energy that will bring about a united Catholic action."

Bans Forming "Catholic" Party.

Our especial advice and commands to you are to this end only, that we may, by our fatherly love, spur you on to develop "Catholic action" by mutual cooperation and the highest education of the flock committed to the pastoral care of each of you.

We say Catholic action, for, in the present sad condition of affairs, it is supremely necessary, venerable brothers, that you, together with the whole clergy and every organization of Catholics, most studiously hold yourselves entirely aloof from every kind of political party so that you will not give the enemies of the Catholic faith the pretext to contend that your religion is bound up with any political party or faction.

Therefore, all Catholics of the Republic of Mexico are forbidden as such to establish any political party under the name of Catholic. Above all, bishops and priests, in keeping with their praiseworthy record of the past, must not become members of any political party nor write for the journals of any political faction, for their ministry necessarily extends to all the faithful and to all citizens as well.

Forbids Church in Politics.

These, therefore, venerable brothers, are our counsels and commands, at the same time, the faithful who must and will doubtless faithfully follow them and put them into practice cannot be forbidden to exercise those civic rights and duties which they have in common with all other citizens.

In fact, their very faith and the common welfare of religion and country require that they make the best use of such rights and duties. Even the clergy cannot refrain altogether from an interest in civic affairs or put aside completely all care and solicitude for the things of public life.

Indeed, although holding themselves studiously aloof from every attachment to any party, they ought, in keeping with their priestly office and safeguarding the sacredness of their ministry, to promote the welfare of their country by diligent and religious exercise of their civil rights and duties and by setting a good example which the faithful can follow, so that each one of them will studiously comply with their public obligations as the laws of God and of the Church demand.

Outlines Duties of the Clergy.

For the attainment of this most noble end, your clergy, while they must, as we have said and exhort again and again, be free and aloof from all partisan contentions, will nevertheless find open to them a wide field in which they can spend their energy in the interest of religion and morals and culture, as well as in the betterment of economic and social conditions, thus training their people, especially the youths pursuing higher studies and workingmen, to think and to act as becomes Catholics.

There is no doubt in our mind that if you correspond faithfully to these our exhortations and follow them earnestly and diligently the heavy afflictions which have long beset the noble Mexican people will at length, with the help of God, happily abate and cease.

Meanwhile, we most lovingly impart our Apostolic blessing both to you, venerable brothers, and to the clergy and faithful of each of you as well as to the whole Mexican people, as a token of heavenly blessings and a pledge of our singular love for you.

Given at Rome, at St. Peter's, the second day of February, 1926, in the fourth year of Our Pontificate. PIUS XI.

Although several nations have Clerical, or Catholic, parties, these parties are neither directed by the Vatican nor encouraged by it. Even in Italy, it has been the policy of the Holy See to abstain from domestic politics. The Partito Popolare was inaugurated in 1919 merely without opposition from Benedict XV and was the logical result of the removal of the Papal inhibitions against Catholics being identified with Italian politics.

A century ago in Mexico the Catholic Party was predominant. Then, under the long line of Presidents beginning with Fernandez Victoria, in 1824, its influence was gradually swept away with religion and religious education. The call of the Archduke Maximilian, in 1864, to become Emperor was almost the last stand of the Catholics as a party against the spreading materialism. With the return of Benito Juarez to the Presidency, in 1867, the de-Catholicization of the nation continued, until the present Constitution prohibits mention of the word "God" and the display of religious symbols in the schools. Laws frequently supplemented the Constitutional inhibitions.

In certain communities, however, these laws were allowed to lapse, due to a revival of the religious spirit and because the parochial schools and convent schools gave about the only education locally available.

PAN-AMERICAN VISITORS GUESTS OF MERCHANTS

More than 100 delegates to the Pan American Congress of Journalists, which adjourned in Washington last week, were welcomed to New York last night for a four-day visit as the guests of the Merchants' Association.

The visitors, all of them editors or owners of influential papers in South America, Mexico and Cuba, were met at Philadelphia by representatives of the Merchants' Association. Arriving at the Pennsylvania Station they were Commodore with an advance guard of motorcycle policemen clearing the way. At the hotel the newspapermen were taken by automobiles to the Hotel met by Lincoln Cromwell, Chairman of the Reception Committee, and S. C. Mead, Secretary. At an informal supper and vaudeville performance Mr. Cromwell officially welcomed the visitors in behalf of the Merchants' Association.

"We have looked forward with keen interest to your coming," he said. "We have followed with interest the reports of your proceedings in Washington. We sympathize with Mr. Kellogg's statement as Secretary of State that 'to you is entrusted the high mission to interpret the nations of the Americas to one another' and President Coolidge spoke for us and the rest of the country when he said, 'the interchange of information between North and South America is of the highest importance in helping to establish the kind of relations and cooperation which we all desire.'"

This morning Mayor Walker will receive the visitors at the City Hall. They will be the guests of The Associated Press at luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria and of the New York newspaper publishers at dinner.

The visitors, with more than fifty editors of the United States, were in session for a week at Washington, discussing newspaper problems and methods of improving international relations among the Americas. There they were welcomed by the President and Vice President of the United States and by several Cabinet members, as well as by the House and Senate.

The Latin American delegation is now touring the eastern part of the United States under the leadership of Franklin Adams, counsellor for the Pan American Union.

and without the slightest doubt completely under the influence of liquor," Mr. Kirby said:

"I ask the court to take into consideration General Butler's—I won't say imagination—but his wonderful ability to convince himself that he can determine instantly the right and wrong of any situation."

Mr. Kirby declared it was clear from the testimony of General Butler and other witnesses that at the time the General saw Colonel Williams at the Hotel del Coronado, "he thought he was another Williams, who once barely escaped court-martial."

Quoting Shakespeare to the effect that "trifles, light as air, are to the jealous confirmation strong as holy writ," Mr. Kirby contended this mistake in identity was the controlling factor in General Butler's determination to put Colonel Williams under arrest for intoxication.

Butler to "Dry Up Base."

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 19.—The conviction of the veteran marine officer, Colonel Williams, came as a surprise in service circles here. Other courts-martial of officers who testified in his behalf are declared to be likely. Charges against these officers will include perjury at the trial, it is stated.

Flushed with victory because of the court-martial verdict, General Butler today said:

"Colonel Williams was drunk and it was my duty to bring charges against him. There could have been no other verdict.

"Now I am going to dry up the marine base. There will be a house-cleaning and there will be no more cocktail parties in which officers in my command will be guests. An officer, above every one else, should respect the Constitution. We have a dry law and it must be enforced."

Whether he intended using the same methods as in Philadelphia the General did not state. During his testimony he spoke frankly of beating people over the head for getting drunk during his Philadelphia crusade, and the San Diego County Federation of Labor sent Samuel Gompers requesting Federal action against him because of these public utterances, which they claimed were anarchistic.

Washington Awaits Documents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—News of the outcome of the trial of Colonel Alexander Williams at San Diego had not been received officially at the Navy Department this evening. According to routine procedure in cases of courts-martial, the findings of the court will be forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy by mail, who will turn the documents over to the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, who will act as the reviewing authority.

After the Judge Advocate General has studied the court proceedings he will return the documents to Secretary Wilbur. It is not customary to make any statement on the case until these formalities have been concluded, but in view of the particular public interest aroused in the case of Colonel Williams it is possible that Secretary Wilbur may make a statement within the next few days.

Rochester Building Trades Get Rise.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 19 (AP).—Differences between contractors and members of building trade unions over wages appeared to have been settled today with the granting of increases. Electricians who asked an increase of $1, to $11 a day, accepted a compromise wage of $10.50. Painters had asked for a four-and-a-half-day week with wages at $55, but also accepted an increase of 50 cents a day. A similar increase was acceptable to bricklayers.

Tested for weather wear

WHEN you refinish your car, you can insure the job against the effects of weather extremes by using Devoe Motor Car Finish—tested in the factory for resistance to sun and rain, heat and cold.

Artificial sun rays beat upon it. Artificial rain storms pour upon it. Artificial frost attacks it. In a few days this machine concentrates on it all the weather wear it would receive in months of service on your car.

Devoe Motor Car Finish must and does stand up under this gruelling test before it leaves the factory. This insures—in advance—maximum satisfaction in actual use.

Devoe Motor Car Finish is easy to apply. It levels itself without brush marks or laps. This overcomes the one big difficulty of auto painting. Devoe Motor Car Finish is guaranteed to give satisfaction when applied according to directions.

172 Years of Experience

For the outside of your home, for the walls inside, for the woodwork, the floors, the furniture, there is a particular Devoe paint, varnish, or enamel, backed by 172 years of experience. Take your paint and varnish problems to a Devoe Authorized Agent, and get dependable advice.

ASSOCIATED PRESS OPENS SESSION HERE

Directors Report Addition of News of Cultural Activities to the Service.

KELLOGG TO SPEAK TODAY

Will Attend Luncheon Following Start of Annual Gathering—Publishers Meet Tomorrow.

Newspaper editors and publishers from all over the country began to gather yesterday for the annual meeting of the Associated Press, and the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, at the Waldorf. About one hundred editors of newspapers in Latin America, who have been meeting in Washington, arrived here last night to be the guests of both associations.

There were about 200 members of the Associated Press at an informal preliminary meeting yesterday afternoon, at which the annual report of the Board of Directors was read by Kent Cooper, General Manager. The report emphasized changes in the news policy, greater attention now being paid to information about cultural activities. The report follows:

"With the year just closed The Associated Press begins its second quarter of a century and the traditional loyalty and enterprise of the staff have been evidenced by the work that has been accomplished. The membership will have noticed that in the development of the news report some changes have been made. Broadly, these changes were conceived upon the idea that with intensification of effort based upon the ideals upon which the staff always has labored, the news report could encompass a more complete picture of what the world is doing. This without increasing the quantity, but rather by improving the quality of the news report.

Always Truthful Reports.

"Granted that the subjects to be reported are decent, there has been no intention to avoid any matters having news interest. As always, however, the staff has continued to strive for the first essential, which is, truthful reporting. Although there has been no diminution of effort to obtain news of matters of prime importance, economic, political and social, there has been greater effort to obtain news of the activities of women, of art, music, amusements, including the theatre and motion pictures, of science and of literary affairs. Domestic and foreign coverage of events having a supplementary connection with the outstanding news of the day has been stressed.

"In the latter work special attention is directed to the supplemental mail services, both the general mail service and the special State services. The general mail service has associated itself more as a feature vehicle of the regular report. The effort has been to make it human, entertaining and interesting; a service that for style, subject matter and treatment would provide a better balance to the spot news of the day. The board feels that this is being done at no sacrifice to the fundamental essentials of our news report.

"The widespread use of all of this material, and the favorable comment from members have led the board to believe that the reaction to this matter favors its continuance. Members who heretofore have looked to other sources for material of this kind report that they have found The Associated Press news service now sufficiently meets their general requirements.

"Through the foreign service member papers are now receiving the most intimate general outline of activities abroad that has ever been furnished. Aside from the news of greatest import and happenings of curious interest, there are at proper times résumés of things done and things left undone in any great foreign movement, such as international conferences, national political situations, progresses toward national self-expression, and always there is endeavor properly to represent the efforts of minorities.

"These dispatches are interpretative only through the statement of facts or the quotations of participants which the dispatches themselves disclose. As always, there has not been and will not be any editorial opinion expressed by The Associated Press in any dispatches.

"To the regular cable letters for Sunday morning papers there have been added cable letters for Saturday evening papers. The foreign staffs have been traveling about the countries in which they are assigned, obtaining news not available in the capitals of those countries.

"Steps have been taken to bring the members into more intimate interest in The Associated Press and its affairs. The general manager himself, in the last year, has attended meetings for some thirty-five States. These State meetings have developed larger attendances by members and their staffs than ever before. They have elected members of the Advisory Boards for their divisions, and these Advisory Boards have been functioning better than ever.

1,156 Operators Kept Busy.

"Plans for expediting the transmission of the news report by the Traffic Department which have been introduced within the last year include the installation of high-speed automatic telegraphs on every trunk circuit and on several State circuits. Thus, high-speed automatic telegraphs are operating from Maine to California and from Washington to Florida. Notwithstanding that more than 500 automatic telegraphic printers have been installed, The Associated Press has today, due to the growth of State leased wire circuits, more telegraph operators than ever before, the total now being 1,156.

"The Board of Directors appeals to the membership for even greater interest in and activity toward the development of the association. In support of the efforts of the staff to improve The Associated Press news report it asks whole-hearted cooperation from the membership. The staff cannot function at the highest point of efficiency without full loyalty on the part of the members it serves. Without the interest and loyalty of the members of the organization an excellent staff will find discouragement if the members do not appreciate what the staff is doing and by their own attitude encourage the staff to still greater effort. With an enthusiasm on the part of the membership equal to that of the staff, The Associated Press, the greatest cooperative endeavor, may look toward the future with confidence."

The report was signed by the following directors:

FRANK B. NOYES,
ADOLPH S. OCHS,
CLARK HOWELL,
CHARLES HOPKINS CLARK,
W. H. COWLES,
ELBERT H. BAKER,
FRANK P. MacLENNAN,
H. V. JONES,
E. LANSING RAY,
BENJAMIN H. ANTHONY,
STUART H. PERRY,
FREDERICK I. THOMPSON,
ROBERT McLEAN,
J. R. KNOWLAND.

Mr. Noyes, President, presided at the meeting. At the opening of the session the members stood for a moment in silent memory to Victor F. Lawson of The Chicago Daily News, one of the founders of The Associated Press and its first President, who died last year.

The members participated in a general discussion of policies, particularly with respect to the radio broadcasting of news. As the meeting was informal, no action was taken. The present policy permits the broadcasting of news of paramount national or international importance.

Some of the speakers urged a more liberal use of radio news, arguing that sales of newspapers had been stimulated by the broadcasting of news bulletins and that the prestige of the newspapers and The Associated Press had been increased. Among those who participated in the discussion were E. J. Lynette of The Scranton (Pa.) Times, Clarence J. Smith of The Allentown (Pa.) Call, Harry Chandler of The Los Angeles Times, Charles A. Webb of The Asheville (N. C.) Citizen and C. P. J. Mooney of The Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial-Appeal.

Mr. Noyes paid a personal tribute to Mr. Cooper, who has been general manager for one year, saying:

"As an executive officer, my work has been greatly aided, and I feel sure your interests have been very greatly assisted, by the work of Mr. Cooper. I am sure that since the days of many years ago, when Melville E. Stone [former general manager and now counselor] was in very close and intimate contact with the membership, there has been no such successful effort to bring the executive side of The Associated Press into close contact with the members, and to learn what the members wanted, so far as it was humanly possible, and to do what the members wanted, so far as it was practical to do. Mr. Cooper, as you know, has traveled throughout the country indefatigably since elevation to the post of general manager and, I think, to the immense benefit of each of us."

In reply Mr. Cooper said the tribute was unexpected, but that he accepted it in "behalf of the entire staff of The Associated Press, scattered from Tokio to Moscow and all over this country, than whom there is not a finer staff of men in all the world, who have ever been anxious at all times to do for you what you would have done. Because I know them so well and I am so proud to be associated with them, I am very glad, indeed, to pass on to them what Mr. Noyes has said, to which you have given your approval."

Advisory Boards Meet.

The divisional advisory boards at a meeting yesterday adopted resolutions complimenting Mr. Cooper and his associates on progress made during the year in adding interest to the service, expediting the transmission of news and "permeating the whole organization with increased energy and alertness."

The regular annual meeting of The Associated Press will be held at 11 o'clock this morning. Successors will be elected for five directors whose terms expire this year. These five are Mr. Noyes of The Washington Star, Adolph S. Ochs of THE NEW YORK TIMES, H. V. Jones of The Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal, B. H. Anthony of The New Bedford (Mass.) Standard and Robert McLean of The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The Nominating Committee has placed these five in nomination to succeed themselves and has designated five additional candidates: Paul Patterson of The Baltimore Sun, W. T. Dewart of The New York Sun, I. R. Kirkwood of The Kansas City Star, W. J. Pape of The Waterbury (Conn.) Republican and A. R. Oliver of The Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

A director will be elected, also, to fill the term of the late Mr. Lawson, which would have expired next year. The candidates for this place are Walter A. Strong of The Chicago Daily News and Hilton U. Brown of The Indianapolis News.

The members will vote on applications for membership by Frank E. Gannett for The Rochester Times-Union, Kenneth Priestley for The Berkeley (Cal.) Daily Californian and J. Leo Meehan for The Pasadena (Cal.) Morning Sun.

Kellogg at Luncheon Today.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the annual luncheon will be held. Mr. Noyes will be the toastmaster, and the speakers will be Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, Jorge A. Mitre of La Nacion, Buenos Aires, and Mr. Cooper. The speeches will be broadcast by radio stations WJZ, New York, and WGY, Schenectady, beginning at 2 o'clock. WJZ operates on a wave length of 455 meters and WGY on 380 meters. It is expected they will carry the speeches to radio listeners as far West as Chicago.

The New York newspaper publishers will give a dinner to the visiting Pan-American journalists at the Park Lane Hotel at 7 o'clock tonight.

At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning the A. N. P. A. will hold the first session of its three-day annual convention. There will be a theatre party for the Pan-American journalists at the Hippodrome at night. Besides additional affairs arranged for the visitors the next day, the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A., will be held on Thursday night. The convention will end with Friday afternoon's session.

The committee in charge of the Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A., at a meeting yesterday, announced its annual report, which will be presented to the convention tomorrow. The report said that national advertising in newspapers during 1925 reached a total of $220,000,000, an increase of almost 10 per cent. over 1924. This, it said, "set a new record for the value of space bought by national advertisers."

Concerning Free Publicity.

Under the caption, "To stop the press agent," the report said:

"Your committee submits that the willingness of many newspapers to give their space to free publicity seekers is still an obstacle to the further development of advertising.

"In support of this belief, your committee is in position to refer to specific instances which came to its notice during the year where projects to spend money for advertising in the newspapers were hampered or abandoned because of the belief that the advertiser could obtain at little or no cost 'news stories' and 'special articles' in the newspapers.

"Your committee observes that virtually every proposed campaign of advertising considered by trade associations includes at least consideration of the services of a paid press agent. Committees having in charge associational campaigns are constantly urged to spend the bulk of their appropriations in mediums that compete with newspapers and to use what is left to pay the salary and expenses of a publicity agent. Cases may be cited where press agents have been willing to 'guarantee' a certain amount of free newspaper space in exchange for a stipulated fee.

"In a recent associational drive to collect advertising funds to promote travel to a certain section, the assertion was made to prospective contributors that the association had obtained the free publication last year of '1,000,000 inches of its news stories.' The advertising fund was raised and it is now being spent in a list of magazines. It is obvious that this advertiser reached the conclusion that there is no need for paid advertising in a medium that is so generous in its use of press agent propaganda. In fact, this conclusion is emphasized in a further statement from the association that certain newspapers constantly 'wire for the preparation of special articles by us, paying for them at their usual rates.'

Committee to Investigate.

"Your committee submits that the evils of the free publicity situation are too obvious to require emphasis. The remedy is in the hands of the publishers of newspapers who can stop this flood of destructive material by instructing their editors better to inform themselves about the character of free publicity which they consider 'news' today, but which has a disastrous effect upon newspaper advertising and, in our judgment, tends to lessen the confidence of readers in newspapers. The answer to a constantly uttered inquiry of newspapers receiving free publicity, 'Why don't they pay for it?' is the very simple one, 'Because they can get it for nothing.' The editor rather than the press agent is responsible for this situation.

"Your committee suggests that the A. N. P. A. authorize the appointment of a committee to investigate the subject of free publicity and that this committee include in a report to be made at the Fall convention the results of a study of individual newspaper columns with a view of estimating the value of the space given to material which properly belongs in the advertising columns.

WILLIAM F. ROGERS, Chairman, The Boston Transcript.
HARRY CHANDLER, Vice Chairman, The Los Angeles Times.
CHARLES D. ATKINSON, The Atlanta Journal.
FRANK H. BURGESS, The La Crosse Tribune.

RIFF PEACE ENVOY GOES BACK BY PLANE

Is Expected to Return to the French Lines With Decision on Terms.

THREE DAYS ARE GRANTED

OUJDA, Morocco, April 19 (AP).—The three days' recess in the Franco-Spanish-Riffian peace negotiations while Haddou Ben Hannou, the third Riffian delegate, is consulting with the Riffian chieftain, Abd-el-Krim, will be utilized by the French and Spaniards to straighten out some details on which they still differ in their respective viewpoints.

Ben Hannou left early today for Taguist in a French airplane. He will lay before Abd-el-Krim the latest Franco-Spanish proposals and return to the conference either with his chief's acceptance or refusal.

General Mougin came to Oujda from Taourirt today and conferred with General Simon, the chief French delegate. He informed General Simon that Si Mohammed Azerkane, brother-in-law of Abd-el-Krim, who has his headquarters at Taourirt, was desirous of resuming the pourparlers for the ending of the Moroccan warfare at the earliest possible date.

Riffians Explain Delay.

The Riffian delegation summoned the newspaper correspondents to Camp Berteaux this evening and issued a communiqué setting forth their position in the negotiations. They placed the blame for the delay on the Franco-Spanish delegates for introducing new and important conditions for which they were not prepared.

Si Mohammed Azerkane, the Riff "Foreign Minister," received the correspondent and made the following statement:

"The conversations at Camp Berteaux yesterday dealt with six principal points of the preliminary peace terms, four of which we had been made acquainted with before leaving the Riff. But the two others were new. They were, first, the immediate release of prisoners previous to any official peace negotiations, and, second, the advance of Spanish and French troops to designated positions occupied at present by our troops, such occupation to be conducted peacefully.

"Those two conditions were the subject of laborious discussions, and the original conditions, which had been published by the French and Spanish press, were also discussed. We are willing to make certain concessions on these, but cannot accept without modification. Acceptance of the two new conditions, in our opinion, cannot be envisaged before the official peace negotiations. It is not logical.

"Should we release the prisoners and permit the entrance of Spanish and French troops in the determined zone without resistance, and later fail to reach an accord with France and Spain, we should have been duped. Thus we asked for delay in order to consult Emir Abd-el-Krim.

"We may add that personally we do not believe these two conditions will ever be accepted unless concessions are made by the French and Spanish Governments."

The French delegation here has transmitted the Riffian reply to Paris and awaits instructions from that capital.

French and Spanish Not in Accord.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OUDJDA, April 19.—A conference at Oudjda began today—after a fashion—but it was not the peace conference which had been planned between the French and Spanish on the one side and the Riffians on the other. Instead, the day was devoted to informal discussions between the French and Spanish in an effort to reach accord between themselves and rescue the peace conference itself from the failure which threatens it.

The real power of decision, it now appears, lies in the hand of Abd-el-Krim himself. The initiative in the present negotiations passed over to the Riffian chieftains this morning when Haddou, the French-Riffian go-between, sailed over the lines from Guersif near Aaounat in a French military plane lay the problems which have arrested the conference before Abd-el-Krim, who is now at Temassin. Haddou said he hoped to return Wednesday to Taounat, where his colleagues are remaining.

Meanwhile, for the sake of appearances, the French and Spanish profess to be in accord as to the necessity of banishing Abd-el-Krim. But actually they are far from agreement on this crushing demand, whose sudden interposition at Camp Berteaux yesterday as an essential condition to the formal peace discussions produced the latest crisis.

Aside from this unofficial statement of accord on the banishment question, neither the French nor Spanish have any pertinent comment to make. Indeed, the only ones to issue any communiqué today were the Riffians, and they preserved Oriental silence on the main point at issue.

Conference Held in Paris.

PARIS, April 19 (AP).—Premier Briand discussed the Moroccan situation this forenoon with Count Quinones de Leon, the Spanish Ambassador; War Minister Painlevé, Jules Steeg, Resident General of French Morocco, and Marshal Pétain. He also received M. de Fleurian, French Ambassador to Great Britain.

After the conference this statement was issued:

"The pourparlers (in Morocco) are being pursued with a mutual desire for success. Some difficulties have been encountered but the negotiators do not despair of surmounting them."

8 DEAD IN CHICAGO FIRE.

Four More Likely to Die From Burns on Sunday.

CHICAGO, April 19 (AP).—Eight persons met death and nineteen were injured here in a series of Sunday fires and fire accidents. Three died at a hospital as a result of injuries received when a combination gas and coal stove, into which kerosene had been poured, exploded during a birthday celebration. Four persons were hurt so seriously that their recovery is despaired of, while three others received minor injuries.

Another fire, originating at a "moonshine party," resulted in four deaths and the injury of five persons, four of them firemen. The eighth victim was George Mohr, a Fire Department Lieutenant, who was killed in a crash between a fire truck and an automobile. Two other firemen were hurt, and four occupants of the other car injured, one of them probably fatally.

The crash in which the first truck figured was fatal also to "Bum," for eight years the devoted dog mascot of the fire company.

KELLOGG DECLINES LEAGUE INVITATION

the reservations by all the nations signatory to the Statute of the Permanent Court constitutes such an agreement.

If any machinery is necessary to give the United States an opportunity to participate through representatives for the election of judges, this should naturally be considered after the reservations have been adopted and the United States has become a party to the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice. If the States signatory to the Statute of the Permanent Court desire to confer among themselves, the United States would have no objection whatever to such a procedure, but, under the circumstances, it does not seem appropriate that the United States should send a delegate to such a conference.

Accept, Sir, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

FRANK B. KELLOGG.

Greece and Cuba Have Accepted.

It was made known at the State Department today that the Greek Government has formally notified the department of its acceptance of the American reservations to the World Court.

Greece is the second nation to take such a step, following the approval of the reservations by Cuba.

No Trace of Lost $27,000 Gems.

Despite the posting of a $5,000 reward for the return of $27,000 worth of jewelry lost by Mrs. R. J. Keller of the Park Lane, 299 Park Avenue, on April 10, no progress has been made in the recovery of the gems, Mr. Keller announced yesterday. The jewelry is believed to have been lost on a Desbrosses Street ferryboat bound for Jersey City, when Mrs. Keller left her car to get the breezes in the front of the boat. After the ferryboat had docked Mrs. Keller noticed that her handbag, which had contained the gems, was open.

HYLAN AT 58 FEELS YOUNGER THAN EVER

Contented With Private Pursuits, He Airs Views on Psychology in Politics.

Fifty-eight years old today, former Mayor John F. Hylan feels younger than he did ten years ago. "I am healthier than ever," he said yesterday. "The rest and freedom from worry I've had since relinquishing office have restored my old-time buoyancy."

Tilted back in a swivel chair and surveying his newly acquired law office at 9 East Fortieth Street with satisfaction, Mr. Hylan told of the contentments of private life. "I'm glad to get acquainted again with my family and old friends," he said. "Serving the public is all right, and my eight years of the Mayoralty is a record, I believe; but you can't stand it forever."

The former Mayor expressed interest in a statement made on Sunday by James M. Cox, one-time Democratic nominee for President, that hypocrisy rules in politics. Mr. Hylan said he was not in accord with any such generality. "But," he added, "the privilege-seeking interests that control many of the big leaders in both parties realize the people are sentimental, and if they can get the masses squabbling over religion or prohibition, they do not scruple to do so. Thus, while the people are forgetting there is any partisan aspect save that encompassed by religion and liquor, the interests nominate their men to both party tickets. And on election day they sit back and say to the voters, 'Heads we win; tails you lose.' While the little fellows fight, the big ones march off with the bacon."

Mr. Hylan spoke of the "twixt-devil-and-deep-sea" aspect of the Mayor's office. "If you are faithful to the people," he said, "some of the leading newspapers criticise you; and if you play into the hands of the privilege-seeking interests, the same papers abuse you."

PERET SAYS CRISIS IS OVER IN FRANCE

Finance Minister Tells American Visitors That Debts Will Be Paid.

ASKS UNBIASED ATTITUDE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 19.—Eight hundred members of the International Hotel Alliance were moved to great enthusiasm tonight by M. Peret, the Minister of Finance, when in the course of an impassioned explanation of the present situation in France, he declared that the end of the nation's financial difficulties was fast approaching.

M. Peret reviewed at length the fight which France has waged since the armistice to rebuild her vast devastated regions and at the same time to carry on the ever-mounting costs of governmental operation in the face of the non-payment of expected reparations.

Addressing himself especially to the American delegation, M. Peret asserted that it was the firm intention of France to repay her debt, the settlement of which was now only a matter of a brief period.

This again brought cheers and prolonged applause from all the delegates, including many notable Frenchmen.

"France has already asked considerable sacrifices from her taxpayers, but our debts to America and Great Britain will be paid, nevertheless," continued M. Peret. "We must however, insist upon that much discussed safeguard clause, so that the payments by France may, in all justice, be reduced in the event that Germany fails to meet her payments to France under the Dawes plan. Nothing could be fairer, and all we ask is a sincere and unbiased attitude toward our problem.

"Although the French budget has now reached the tremendous proportions of 37,000,000,000 francs we have courageously provided for receipts or taxes and other income to care for this weighty burden.

Declares Crisis Recedes Daily.

"The crisis recedes daily. The situation of the Bank of France improves and subscriptions to our national defense bonds are again quite active. The next redemption date, May 20, our short-term obligations will be met without difficulty, despite dire predictions coming from foreign sources.

"It is now certain that the greater part of these bonds will be exchanged for national defense bonds of six months and one year duration, and that the few hundred million francs which the State will require to redeem them will be so distributed over a period of weeks as to cause no serious strain upon the Treasury.

"For this and other reasons I am not worried over the exchange situation. Several definite reasons explain the rise in foreign exchange of last week, notably the necessity of importers to cover their purchases abroad, but none of these reasons affect the fundamental value of the franc, which is based upon the real national prosperity wherein there is no unemployment, a balanced budget and a greatly improved Treasury situation.

Sees France Sound Economically.

"You gentlemen will see for yourselves that France is sound economically and socially, and that, far from being in a serious situation, she is over the worst and can safely regard the future with calm confidence."

The speech made a great impression upon the assembled delegates.

Ambassador Herrick sent a message of greeting, but was unable to attend because of just having arrived from his Moroccan tour.

Charles W. Sweeney, Vice President of the International Association, followed M. Peret, and, in a speech which caused much merriment, said that the hotel business had been termed one of four great industries, but that "bootlegging was probably the first business in the United States, since every one was in it, either buying or selling."

President Doumergue shook hands with each delegate and posed for numerous photographs after welcoming them in a brief speech wherein he said that hotel men had a political as well as a social mission in life, the impression of a nation often being based on their treatment of visitors.

Tomorrow the delegates will be received formally by the City of Paris and in the evening will have a chance to drink some of the most famous wines and champagnes of France at dinners in their honor in the famous Paris restaurants.

President Receives Mrs. Walker.

PARIS, April 19 (AP).—The First Lady of New York and the First Gentleman of France shook hands at the Elysée Palace today with smiles of mutual esteem, obvious though wordless. Mrs. James J. Walker, wife of New York's Mayor, was charmed with the personality of President Doumergue when she was presented to him at 11 o'clock this morning in the State Banquet Hall, at the head of 800 delegates of the International Hotel Men's Congress.

CAILLAUX IN LINE FOR PREMIERSHIP

HERRIOT HIS CHIEF RIVAL

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 19.—M. Caillaux's speech yesterday has had considerable effect in the political world on the eve of the resumption of the Chamber sittings, and though here and there in the press reservations are made, the general feeling expressed both on the Right and Left sides is that the sound sense he talked yesterday puts him in the position of being the mostly likely successor to M. Briand.

It is not probable that there will be any crisis during the next few weeks. The Chamber will begin tomorrow the humdrum business of dotting i's and crossing t's in the final version of the budget, as it has emerged from the Senate. That will occupy the Deputies until the end of the month, when they will adjourn to attend meetings of the local departmental councils and take account of the political feeling of their constituencies.

With the passing of the budget there is not expected to be any difficulty. The Senators have shown the wisdom of experience in amending the final draft only where it was obviously deficient or absurd. Thus today they removed the 25 per cent. tax on the room rent of foreigners living in hotels, which the Chamber imposed in an effort to make foreigners pay. The Senate stipulated only that those foreigners who have furnished apartments and have furnished offices and are not otherwise assessed for income tax shall pay 25 per cent. of their rent to the State.

Discussion of such minor changes will occupy the Chamber and give the Government a breathing spell. But this respite does not alter the main situation that M. Briand's Government does not have a real majority and is at the mercy of any incident. There will be interpellations on the resignation of M. Malvy, on the peace negotiations in Morocco and on various Communist Far East manifestations, but most of these M. Briand will be able to shelve until next month. It is then that the battle will begin with rival claims by M. Caillaux and M. Herriot for succession to the Premiership.

During this recess M. Herriot has been busy trying to resuscitate and rearticulate the Left bloc, but even his friends are now convinced that there is no great possibility of success in that direction. The country as a whole seems inclined to pronounce plainly on both the Nationalist and Left bloc attitudes. M. Caillaux's declaration yesterday that what was wanted was an administrative and not a political Government has found an echo almost everywhere.

His majority, if he succeeds, will be much more to the Right than even M. Briand's has been, but it will include the main body of Radical Socialists.

In the meanwhile the troubles and difficulties of keeping the country's finances straight still rest with M. Peret, who has announced that he will introduce in the next few days measures to prevent, or at least control, speculative operations on the exchange market. These measures will not, it is stated, interfere in any way with the purchase of foreign valuta for commercial needs, but will enforce closer observation of operations by brokers, who will be called on to keep a full record of all transactions.

BRITISH DISCOUNT ITALO-TURK SCARE

GREECE DENIES COMPACT

LONDON, April 19 (AP).—The alarm and uneasiness reported in Turkey over Premier Mussolini's tour of Tripoli and over rumors that an Italian-Greek compact had been drawn up, are not shared by officials of the British Government.

All responsible comment regarding Italian affairs is usually accompanied by reservations such as, "It must be remembered that Mussolini is an incalculable quantity."

Nevertheless, officials say, it is impossible for the British to believe that any Mediterranean power, in giving expression to a new spirit of nationalism, would run the risk of action likely to precipitate serious trouble.

The prompt denial by the Greek Foreign Minister of the existence of an Italian-Greek compact against Turkey is accepted in London and is believed to have had a quieting effect in the Near East. The general view here is that danger of war is not great at present, if only because of the financial and economic exhaustion of the countries likely to become involved.

There is a keen understanding among British officials of the peculiar character of public opinion in Southern and Eastern European countries, a public opinion which is vastly different from that of the United States or Great Britain; but it is hoped here that Turkey, as well as Italy and Greece, will reduce any sword-rattling to the absolute minimum necessary to maintain confidence of the respective peoples in their existing régimes.

ATHENS, April 19 (AP).—Foreign Minister Roupios today denied the report of the existence of an agreement between Italy and Greece against Turkey.

VETO BALKS OWNERS IN PARK LAND SUIT

They Sought Action in Court of Claims on Montauk Tract Taken by State.

APPROVES ELEVATED ROAD

Governor Smith Also Signs Measure for $10,000 Monument for 71st Regiment in Cuba.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Governor Smith today vetoed a bill sponsored by Senator Thompson, Republican, of Kings Park, L. I., which would have amended the Court of Claims act so as to permit the owners of land at East Islip and Montauk Point, which was taken by the State for park purposes, to seek damages in the Court of Claims after they have tested the right of the State to appropriate the land in another court.

The Governor said that if such a bill were to become law it should not be an amendment to the Court of Claims act but an amendment to the Conservation law, in which is set up the machinery for acquiring land for park purposes.

The owners of the land at East Islip and Montauk Point have raised the contention that, under the present Court of Claims act and the Conservation law, if they start a suit in another court to test the validity of the taking of the land, they must either file their claim within two years in the Court of Claims and drop the other suit, or by the operation of the two-year limitation period they must lose their opportunity to present their case in the Court of Claims.

Censures Montauk Action.

"There is nothing whatever to this contention," the Governor wrote in his veto memorandum. "So far as the so-called Taylor estate is concerned, the Long Island State Park Commission has stipulated that the filing of notice in the Court of Claims will not be considered an election of remedies, and thus the Taylor estate litigants can go on with their original suit. The State has been willing to do this because the owners of land in the Taylor case started their suit promptly after the taking of the land by the State."

The Governor declared, however, that the Montauk Point case was entirely different. He pointed out that the land at Montauk was taken by the State nearly two years ago and that the owners never questioned the right of the State to appropriate the land. Now, just as the time is about to expire for the filing of their claim, the Montauk owners have started an action for ejectment against the State and they desire to have the State extend the period for filing a claim to six months beyond the determination of this suit, which might be several years off, the Governor said.

"I am unable to understand by what process of reasoning they come to the conclusion that the State should assist them in their efforts to thwart the State and its park commissioners," the Governor wrote. "Why do they not comply with the law? They are not above it. The statute of limitations has not run against them and they are not helpless. They can file their claim if they wish to, and if they do not what good reason can be given why the laws of the State should be adjusted to meet their desires?

"I am of the opinion, in view of the history, that the owners of the land at Montauk waited until there had been a boom in the prices of land and are trying by litigation and special legislation to date forward the taking of the land by the State to a period after the boom began and after large construction operations have been started on adjoining properties with the hope that they might exact boom prices for the land taken after it had been vacant for years and present-day prices were not dreamed of."

Signs Elevated Highway Measure.

The Governor signed the bill introduced by Assemblyman Buckley, Democrat of Manhattan, authorizing New York City to construct an elevated public highway from West Seventy-second Street to Canal Street, along or near the Hudson River. This would make possible the carrying out of one of the pet projects of Julius Miller, Borough President of Manhattan. It would be used exclusively for fast automobile traffic.

Two more anti-crime bills, recommended by the Baumes Commission, were approved by the Governor. One provides for more prompt action in recovering bail bonds which the court has directed to be forfeited.

The Governor signed a bill offered by Senator Lipowicz, Republican, of Buffalo, appropriating $10,000 for the expenses of a commission created by the 1924 Legislature to select a site and erect a monument on Santiago battlefield to the memory of the Seventy-first New York Volunteer Infantry in the Spanish-American War. Members of the Legislature who are identified with the commission are planning to go to Cuba as soon as the present session adjourns.

The Governor approved a bill presented by the Senate Rules Committee authorizing the creation of a State debt of $225,000 for the construction of new buildings in Lincoln Park at the Saratoga Springs Reservation.

In the future persons who hunt deer will have to obtain a special license at a cost of $1.25 under another bill signed today by the Governor. The license will be in five parts. After the deer is killed four sections of the license must be attached to four parts of the deer and the fifth section returned to the Conservation Commission. This is designed to prevent the killing of more than one deer by a person.

ASKS VOTE AT YALE TO ANSWER FISHER

Daily News Doubts Professor's Prohibition Testimony and the Police Chief Contradicts It.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 19.—Professor Irving Fisher stirred up a hornet's nest when he testified before the Senate Committee in Washington on Saturday that the City of New Haven is wet, but that fewer Yale men are drinking under prohibition.

The Yale Daily News takes issue with Professor Fisher and says his evidence does not show that now fewer Yale men drink than before prohibition. The News called for a referendum vote by undergraduates to show:

1. The present undergraduate feeling regarding enforcement of the law.
2. Modification which will permit the sale of wine and beer.
3. Views regarding Government control of the sale of liquor.
4. Opinion regarding the repeal of all prohibition legislation and answers to the question, "Do you think prohibition has decreased the amount of drinking at Yale?"

Police Chief Philip Smith retorted to Professor Fisher that the present law is enforced in New Haven. He added that drinking by Yale students is only a small fraction of what it was before prohibition.

The Chief pointed to the city police records, which show that arrests for violation of the liquor law are constant and frequent, but that few Yale students are caught.

The Yale News says editorially today that the prohibition law is virtually dead in New Haven, which has contributed materially to tempt students to drink, and that the fact that more of them no not fall from the water wagon is because they are sane gentlemen.

CHICAGO REPUBLICANS IN RIVAL CONVENTIONS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Three rival Republican conventions met in Chicago today and in the interest of harmony failed to take any stand on prohibition or Governor Len Small. One, dominated by supporters of Governor Small, sent delegates to the Republican State Convention in Springfield next Friday. The other two did not.

The Democrats held only a single convention here today. Democratic leaders arranged to have their county convention push prohibition to the front as the foremost issue of the coming campaign. The Democrats planned boldly to champion beer and wine, home rule, constitutional representation for Chicago's 3,000,000 people in Congress and the Legislature, winding up with an unsparing condemnation of Governor Small.

Rumors were circulated that there is a scheme on foot for the influences controled by Frank L. Smith, Republican nominee for United States Senator, and by Governor Small and his lieutenants, to adjourn the Republican State Convention at Springfield without action until next Fall. The motive ascribed for such an adjournment is to allow time for harmony to be restored in Republican ranks, badly shattered by the bitter factional battle at the polls last Tuesday.

STUDY SWEDISH FORESTRY.

Yale Student Wins American-Scandinavian Foundation Scholarship.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 19 (AP).—James L. Averell of Berkeley, Cal., a research student in the School of Forestry, Yale University, will receive one of twenty fellowships offered annually by the American-Scandinavian Foundation. Each fellowship carried a stipend of $1,000, with reduced steamship rates in crossing the Atlantic.

The applicants are allowed their choice of subjects to be studied from a prepared list covering many fields. Mr. Averell has designated as his problem the study of Swedish forest reproduction methods.

The awards, made by a jury of eight American college professors, are based on the education, experience and recommendations of each applicant.

WANT PRIVATE CARS BARRED IN MIDTOWN

Rail Experts Call Plan the Only Solution to the City's Traffic Problem.

WIDER STREETS OF NO AVAIL

Each Such Improvement Means a Few More Autos Can Trickle In, Committee Says.

Private automobiles constitute the primary cause of traffic congestion and permanent relief cannot be expected until steps are taken to discourage their use in congested sections of the city, according to the report of the Manhattan Surface Line Operators' Traffic Committee, made public yesterday. The committee was formed last January with Hugh J. Sheeran, President of the New York Railways Corporation, as Chairman, and includes in its membership officers of all the surface railway companies in Manhattan and the Fifth Avenue Coach Company.

"The number of private cars now seen on downtown and midtown thoroughfares represents only a small proportion of the total number in the metropolitan district," the report said. "The rest are kept out of the congested sections by lack of roadway space. Whenever a street is widened a few more are able to trickle in, with the net result that they and not the general public are benefited. Congestion has not been relieved, nor will it be by any such public improvement until adequate restrictive measures are adopted.

"A check of vehicular traffic shows that the average private automobile in Manhattan carries 1.7 passengers. The proportionate part of roadway space required to transport a person by private automobile is seven or eight times greater than is required to transport him by street car.

"This comparison tells only part of the story. It ignores the fact that by reason of the parking privilege the average automobile occupies street space not only while its owner is in transit, but when he is in his office, a theatre, a store or a restaurant. The two lines of parked cars found on every street where traffic is heavy reduces the number of travel lanes on such street one-third to one-half, depending upon its width.

"Parking regulations, which need not interfere with proper loading or unloading, would automatically release for moving traffic two additional lanes of travel on every thoroughfare to which they were applied and also would discourage the movement into the restricted areas of thousands of motor cars that are now parked there unnecessarily. Offsetting any inconvenience which such restrictions might impose on a comparative few is the great gain which would unquestionably accrue to the general public through the speeding up of all forms of traffic."

The committee recently recommended to Police Commissioner McLaughlin that parking be prohibited on one side of one-way streets and on streets south of Sixty-fifth Street on which street cars operate.

TELLS OF A SERUM FOR BLOOD PRESSURE

Discussion of It by Medical Association Fails to Bring Any Definite Conclusion.

Remedies for high blood pressure were discussed by several specialists in that field at the regular meeting of the Medical Association of Greater New York at the New York Academy of Medicine, 17 West Forty-third Street, last night.

Dr. C. Legiardi Laura of Manhattan in his paper on "The Presence of a Hypotensive Substance in the Blood Serum of a Horse, Following Injection of Pituitary Extract," explained that the use of this horse serum had "a depressor action" against blood pressure existing in human beings.

Dr. V. G. Burtan of the Sea View Hospital, Staten Island, presented charts of thirty-three cases of patients over sixty years of age, suffering from various diseases involving blood pressure, showing that the use of the serum decreased the blood pressure and removed other symptoms. Injections were not given, he said, to patients suffering from such diseases as asthma and nephritis.

In the discussion following the reading of these papers, Dr. Harlow Brooks, said that a careful distinction should be made between the physiological and pathological conditions of high blood pressure. The chief factor, he contended, was the emotional factor.

Dr. Herman O. Mosenthal said that the existence of the malady was not so important as the fact that it caused other conditions which led to death. He concluded, therefore, that as it was necessary to find some way to stop the ravages of blood pressure, such experiments as those presented were to be encouraged, but should be worked over a long period, because of the intricacy of the subject.

Dr. William Lintz said that it was very difficult to get one remedy for all cases of blood pressure and that more complete oxygenation might be at the bottom of all conditions of it.

FIND ERYSIPELAS SERUM.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins Report Treatment They Believe Effective.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 19.—Dr. Harold Ames and his assistants in the biological division of Johns Hopkins Medical School have developed a serum which they believe will be effective in the treatment of erysipelas.

Dr. Konrad E. Birkhaugh, who was formerly associated with the work in the biological division of the Johns Hopkins Department of Medicine, last week received a $500 award established by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union for the discovery by him of a serum for treatment of erysipelas. The award was made in Rochester, N. Y., where Dr. Birkhaugh is now a member of the Medical Faculty of Rochester University.

Special importance is attached to the discovery, it is said at Johns Hopkins, because of the very dangerous character of the disease and the inadequate methods for treating it which have prevailed in the past.

Dr. Isaac Pells of the Department of Dermatology at Johns Hopkins is attending the meeting of the American Medical Association in Dallas, Texas, this week, and may read a paper explaining what has been accomplished here. Local physicians are familiar with the treatment, but Dr. Ames and his associates are not willing to discuss it until it has been reported to a scientific body.

CANNOT APPEAL RADIO CASE.

Government's Only Course Is to Revoke Zenith Firm's License.

CHICAGO, April 19 (AP).—The Government cannot appeal the radio case in which the Zenith Radio Corporation and its President, Eugene F. McDonald Jr., successfully resisted prosecution last Saturday on charges of violating the 1912 radio law and established its right to broadcast on any wave length in defiance of Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

Federal Judge Wilkerson, when he decided in favor of the Zenith Company, suggested that the case be made a test, but Assistant District Attorney John Elliott Byrne said today that the Government could not appeal. The only method he knew of to carry the case further would be for the Commerce Department to revoke the Zenith license.

INTERBOROUGH FIGHTS JEROME AV. EXPRESS

James L. Quackenbush, counsel of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, opposed the proposal to require the company to establish express service on the third tracks on Jerome Avenue and Pelham Bay branches of its east side subway in final argument before the Transit Commission yesterday. The commission announced last week it had decided not to order express service on the company's Broadway branch between Ninety-sixth and Fifth Street, and Mr. Quackenbush contended the commission had failed to show the necessity for the Jerome Avenue and Pelham Bay express service, as most of the additional money taken had concerned the Broadway line.

Mr. Quackenbush also declared that the proposed express service was "unsafe, impractical and not in the public interest," besides throwing an unwarranted financial burden on the Interborough which the company could not stand. He asserted that the proposed service would cost the company more than $100,000 a year and would be of no benefit to more than two-thirds of the passengers. In addition, he said, establishment of express service on the Jerome Avenue line would complicate the joint operation of elevated trains and require the company to run elevated trains to Fordham Road instead of turning them back at 167th Street.

George McAneny, Chairman, told Mr. Quackenbush that the Commission would reach a decision as quickly as possible.

SAYS ITALIAN DEBT WILL BE RATIFIED

WALSH ATTACKS MUSSOLINI

Asserts There Is No Assurance That Conditions in Italy Will Be Improved by Settlement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Ratification of the Italian debt settlement on Wednesday by an overwhelming vote was predicted in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Reed, Republican of Pennsylvania. In an argument with Senators Caraway of Kansas and Howell of Nebraska, Mr. Reed defended the Italian agreement and declared the Senate should stand behind the American Debt Commission which negotiated the settlement, saying that if it was defeated Italy would find it even more difficult to pay the sum due the United States.

Explaining the situation that would result if the plan should be lost, Senator Reed said that the news would be spread in Italy with adverse effect upon the people. He did not mean to say, he declared, that she would not pay her indebtedness but that to turn down what the American commission had told her representatives would be acceptable would give her statesmen a chance to say to their people: "We could not offer more than we were asked."

A resolution was offered by Senator Nye of North Dakota to the effect that the United States settle all debts created as a result of the war and all money owed by individuals and corporations at home as well as abroad, as in the case of the farmers of America, who borrowed extensively upon the encouragement of this Government through the channels of credit established by this Government, such as the War Finance Corporation, National Farm Loan Association, Federal Reserve system, and Federal land banks, &c.

Walsh Assails the Premier.

Premier Mussolini was assailed by Senator Walsh of Montana, who said there was no assurance that political, economic and industrial conditions in Italy would be improved by accepting the settlement.

"On the contrary," Senator Walsh said, "there is abundant ground for believing that what we are asked to do is simply to assist Mussolini, now master of Italy, to arrange his finances that he may precipitate another war or bluster about, strengthening his position at home through concessions wru g from feeble, war-worn neighbors that yield to the dread of a renewal of the carnage of which they have such ghastly memories.

Senator Walsh said the kaiser never rattled his sabre more ominously than Mussolini in his Tripoli speech.

Senator Walsh said if Congress wished to do something for the people of Europe as distinguished from the Government, "let it pull down the wall erected by the Tariff act of 1922 to the level of the rates of the Underwood-Simons act as to the commodities of greatest value and amount imported from that country."

Will Consider French Debt.

Administration officials are particularly anxious for favorable action on the Italian debt, as the indications now are that a meeting of the American Debt Commission will be called immediately after the Italian agreement is out of the way, to consider the funding of the French war-time debt of about $4,000,000,000. Secretary Mellon refused to comment on the situation today, however, pending the vote in the Senate on Wednesday.

The viewpoints held by various members of the commission are somewhat widely apart, as indicated by the negotiations with M. Caillaux, and as there has been no exchange of views among the commissioners for several months it is obvious that no final and general understanding has been reached. Reports here have been to the effect that, should France drop her demand for a security loan, initial annual payments would be scaled down to anywhere from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 the first few years, but those forecases are merely surmises. The principal development has been a persistent expression of optimism on the part of most officials that an agreement quickly would be reached with France if the American Debt Commission was given a vote of confidence by ratification of the Italian debt pact, but a belief that the situation would be made much more complicated if the Italian pact was beaten or action on the Italian debt delayed until after the Congressional elections.

at the present time. Our need for large liquid assets is great. We must be prepared for emergencies. Business fluctuates. Selling prices are uncertain. Competition and fairness to customers require the best and latest improvements in facilities and methods. Machinery wears out rapidly; and new and better designs compel replacements and substitutions. Our corporation must be and remain in the front ranks of progressive and prosperous manufacturers. We believe thoroughly in strictest economy, but not false economy.

Business Conditions.

"We are at present booking about 28,500 tons of steel per day, compared with 25,361 tons at the same date last month and 17,179 tons at the same date last year. We are shipping 48,141 tons per day, against 51,142 tons at same date last month and 46,956 tons same date last year. Our total finishing capacity at present is about 52,000 tons per day. These figures, in brief, tell the story of our business. Considering the backwardness of the season, we should be well satisfied. We look forward with courage and confidence."

In the course of the meeting Thorne Baker, a stockholder, opposed the adoption of resolutions approving certain acts of the Board of Directors, including appropriations for new construction. Mr. Baker led the contingent which was seeking higher dividends. He said:

"The company has no necessity to use current earnings to finance plant improvement. It has a surplus of over $522,000,000, to say nothing of the appropriated surplus of $226,000,000, or a total of $748,000,000.

"I cannot discuss the question of dividends, because I am compelled to address myself to this motion, but this motion is so intimately connected with the subject of dividends that we should not bar the door to later action in its regular order on the question of dividends by approving this action now."

When he regained the floor later Mr. Baker said:

"The present $7 dividend is worth in pre-war purchasing power $4.40, against $5 paid in 1913. In other words, stockholders of this company, with 13 per cent. annual earnings, are receiving one-half less per annum in real money than in 1913, when the surplu was only $206,000,000, against $760,000,000 today.

Suggests Small Holders Organise.

"The average holding of Steel common is probably around 50 shares. It is charged large holders are those supporting the ultra-conservative policy preferring money reinvested rather than distributed as dividends, thereby adding to surtax of their income tax returns. If this is proved and small stockholders are in a majority, as they are undoubtedly, it behooves them to organize and collect proxies to elect a Board of Directors friendly to larger dividends unless the present board sees fit to pass favorably on this direction for an increased dividend."

Judge Gary pointed out that the record shows that the management every year has received a majority of the proxies from stockholders, thus indicating that the larger body of stockholders sustained the management in its policies. Even at yesterday's meeting not a dissenting vote was cast against the adoption of the resolutions submitted.

In his remarks to stockholders, Judge Gary said the corporation could not pay increased cash dividends at this time, and "if one should suggest that a bond issue should be put out against plant improvements to be able to pay larger dividends, he would answer that the bond issues are already large and interest must be paid. If you could say that replacement should be made from the depreciation fund, my answer would be that the depreciation fund is not large enough, because it was deducted when costs of construction plants were lower."

Judge Frederick A. Hubbard of Connecticut, a stockholder, addressing the Chair, said that he had been a stockholder of the company for many years. He said he acquired "some of the stock around $25 a share, but was afraid of it when it was around $8."

He added that he has added to his holdings, was always in the market to acquire more when funds permitted, and that he was never in the market to sell. He further said that he hoped his "grandchildren would be well fixed when they acquired his stock holdings some day."

Woman Favors Larger Dividends.

Following Judge Hubbard, Miss Julia C. Kearny, one of two women stockholders attending the meeting, got the floor. Miss Kearny said that while she had attended many meetings she never had the courage to arise and address the Chair and express her sentiments regarding dividends. She intimated that she gained the courage after listening to the remarks of Mr. Baker, who expressed the sentiments which she has held for several years.

"I am gray now," said Miss Kearny, "but I wasn't twenty-two years ago when I acquired my first stock. However, I have no grandchildren and don't expect to have any, and hope to get larger dividends and reap the benefit from them while I am in this world."

In reply to Miss Kearny, Judge Gary said: "You never can tell what may happen."

In commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the corporation, Samuel H. Baker of Philadelphia presented a testimonial in the form of a resolution commending Judge Gary and the management for the able manner in which they have handled the affairs of the company since its inception.

As is customary at the annual meeting the stockholders' books were again opened for inspection. The list revealed that President Coolidge is still the holder of fifty shares of the company's common stock.

Timken 6,500 common, and Henry Ansbacher 6,400 common.

Record Attendance at Meeting.

The largest attendance in the history of the corporation was present at yesterday's meeting. Totals of 1,797,282 shares of preferred stock and 2,823,883 shares of common were represented by the proxies in the hands of the management. At the meeting 550 shares of preferred and 6,022 shares of common were voted in person. All retiring directors were re-elected, and not a dissenting vote was cast.

The meeting room was not big enough to accommodate the crowd and a resolution was adopted for the acquisition of larger quarters for the next annual meeting. At luncheon pumpkin pie was served, as had been promised. The pie committee, after functioning for a year, ordered fifteen pumpkin pies, but this was not sufficient to meet the demand. Some stockholders went without lunch.

E. Royce Armstrong of Chicago said that the corporation did not carry on a sufficient amount of research work, and that it did not spend enough money in advertising so that the American public could become familiar with the enormous variety of products of the corporation. Judge Gary replied that the corporation had numerous laboratories to carry on research work, and that many papers from corporation officials have been presented to the American Iron and Steel Institute. He added that Mr. Armstrong's suggestions were favorable, and requested that he leave a copy with the Secretary.

PRAISES MORGENTHAU FOR REVEALING JAPAN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, April 19.—"As President of the American-Japan Society I am glad to learn that Henry Morgenthau is going on his return to America what he recommended while here, as the best method of fostering international good-will, namely, disseminating accurate information learned at first hand through personal investigation," said Prince Tokugawa, President of the House of Peers, to THE NEW YORK TIMES today concerning Mr. Morgenthau's statement printed in THE TIMES on Saturday and cabled here.

"We are particularly glad to have a man of such intellectual calibre as Mr. Morgenthau visit Japan to investigate conditions himself," said the Prince. "It is the only possible way of actually promoting a good understanding between nations. Genuine sympathy is born of close contact.

"Mr. Morgenthau inspired the America-Japan Society when he said America and Japan might be greatly benefited by mutual visits by political and financial leaders, who would carry and disseminate accurate information concerning their people's aspirations, sufferings and ideal economic conditions.

"As Mr. Morgenthau stated, Japan's future lies in permanent peace. Her main endeavor is to cultivate amicable relations with all nations without discrimination. Realizing future prosperity presupposes the maintenance of close diplomatic and economic connections with America.

"There is no longer any idea of a Japanese-American war. What suspicion existed in a few minds has been expelled. We covet frequent visits by such men as Mr. Morgenthau as the most effective method of maintaining true friendship."

FIFTY FEET OF LAVA LIE OVER HOOPULOA

KILAUEA IS DISTURBED

HILO, T. H., April 19 (AP).—The native village of Hoopuloa lay under fifty feet of cooling lava today, despite the sacrifices of Hawaiians to Pele, goddess of the volcano. The villagers offered pigs, herbs and distilled liquor to Pele, but the molten rock stream from Mauna Loa rolled over the homes of the 100 inhabitants.

Some of the residents fled in canoes. Others, warned by the clouds of smoke and stream, had time to drive flocks of sheep to other villages.

As the red hot lava poured through the village it set afire fifteen buildings and covered the ruins. The beach where the natives had launched their fishing boats was covered by smoking rock. From the sea arose clouds of steam and a roar like the exhaust of a thousand locomotives as the lava formed a new promontory on the ocean bed.

The flow, which halted for a time Saturday night, when Hoopuloa was destroyed, increased in volume on Sunday, pouring down in five big flows.

Professor Thomas A. Jaggar of the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory has been encamped high up on the mountain since Thursday. When heard from several days ago, he said that Kilauea, the world's greatest active volcano, showed signs of increasing disturbance.

Those familiar with the topography of Mauna Loa say that little property loss will result from the eruption, unless the lava stream swerves north into the coffee and sugar fields of the Kona district, which is not likely.

Most of the ancient Hawaiian dancing in grass skirts to be seen in those islands of late was done in the village of Hoopulos, which was wiped out by the lava stream on Sunday, according to Governor Wallace R. Farrington, who is in the city for a few days.

The Governor, who is a newspaper publisher in Honolulu, added that Hawaii is thoroughly an American community; that the girls bob their hair and dance like their American cousins, but not in grass skirts; that there is now little of the South Sea romance that people usually associate with Hawaii.

The Governor said the islands had 15,000 visitors last year, and he reported progress generally.

"We sold to the States the last year," he said, "$63,000,000 worth of sugar, $33,000,000 worth of pineapples, and our returns on coffee were $980,000. On the other hand, we spent $3,500,000 for automobiles, and our bill for tires amounts to $1,000,000 a year. It is an ideal land for motoring, and we have wonderful roads."

WHEELER TRIAL COST GOVERNMENT $61,312

Justice Department Reports to Senate—Information in Perjury Case Is Denied.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The trial of Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, for alleged violation of Federal statutes, in which he was acquitted, cost $61,312.34, the Department of Justice reported today in response to a Senate resolution. The sum may be increased by $165.40 if pending claims, not enumerated, are allowed. The sum was distributed as follows:

Bureau of Investigation, $17,637.14; Special Assistants to the Attorney General, $24,771.27; items of expense of the United States Marshal in Montana, $5,547.03; Grand Jury expenses in the District of Columbia, $1,242; regular witnesses in the District of Columbia, $11,554.88; expert witnesses in the District of Columbia, $360.02.

That the Senate had no right to demand information from the Department of Justice as to how it was going to proceed in a criminal case was the ground upon which the Senate Judiciary Committee today refused to recommend a resolution by Senator Walsh of Montana asking whether Grand Jury proceedings for alleged perjury would be started against George B. Hayes, a witness in the prosecution of Senator Wheeler.

Senator Cummins of the Judiciary Committee declared that "nothing could be more destructive of the due administration of justice than to establish the practice of calling upon the Department of Justice to declare its purpose" in criminal prosecution. In hearings on the matter Senator Walsh was told by Colonel Donovan, Assistant to the Attorney General, that at the time the Wheeler trial ended two witnesses were ready to go to Montana to support testimony by Hayes. He said he had met Wheeler in the Waldorf-Astoria, which Wheeler denied.

It Is a Little Mind That Supposes Everybody Is Looking at Him because he is trying to do something that he believes to be great.

Often he is disappointed if not immediately noticed and praised.

We are better off to see things as they are and work them out upon a broader scale that we may earn the recognition desired.

If anybody could make us bigots, it would not be free thinkers or pedantic coxcombs.

Just our simple every day work must tell the life story.

SALON D'ETUDE—
ON VIEW IN THE FURNITURE GALLERIES
A Spanish Room
from L'EXPOSITION des ARTS DECORATIFS

Last summer among the many interesting exhibits at the Paris Exposition this small room by Badrinas, from the Spanish section, seemed to us especially appealing and successfu. in its departure from tradition. So we decided to purchase it and bring it to this country. It has just been set up intact in the Furniture Galleries, where every piquant and intriguing detail may be observed at leisure and compared with the modernist examples from the Exposition recently shown at the Metropolitan Museum.

NICHES FOR BOOKS

An interesting feature is the arrangement of niches for books set at an angle to the rear wall. They are enframed in narrow painted panels and adorned at the top with gay painted decorations in the form of lunettes, of young girls with birds and flowers, delightful in their fresh coloring. In so modern a room this typically Spanish detail is very charming, and shows, as does the furniture, that one may diverge from tradition without disastrously breaking with it. The walls are covered with a most effective hand-blocked fabric in a very modernist design of birds and flowers, in soft dead leaf browns, old blues and Venetian red on a parchment-colored ground, repeating the tones of the painted dado and cornice The tall cabinet, bench and settees are of bronzed walnut, with engaging incised decorations, stained in color, of Diana with a hound and attractive leaf and flower motifs. An octagonal rug in a deep green blue and ochre, a pedestal table of bronzed walnut, embroidered cushions, and amusing ceramics of a pigeon and squirrel complete this original and most inviting and livable interior, which no one interested in the new trend of the decorative arts should fail to see.

$29.50 and $45	$39.50 and $59.50
IN SIZES 33½ TO 43½	IN SIZES 35½ TO 45½

A difficult problem has long confronted the smaller woman—the need of frocks and coats that are more sophisticated than those appropriate for misses. Very often she cannot even be fitted in regulation Misses' sizes—her shoulders are broader, the line from under her arms to her hips is shorter, her hips are larger, and her sleeves must be fuller. Usually she has chosen a frock or coat in a regulation woman's size, and had it extensively altered at quite an expense, or gone away disappointed to have her clothes made to order.

This is no longer necessary. Her problem has been satisfactorily answered at Wanamaker's. Here the smaller woman may choose from a variety of smart and appropriate fashions, in which every line and detail has been carefully planned to emphasize height.

The frocks are in plain or printed Georgette crepes, or in lovely flat crepes, and in the accepted new colors for all daytime occasions.

The coats are in fine twills—those at $39.50 become doubly chic by forming an alliance with printed silks, and those at $59.50 are smartly trimmed with fur. Beige, gray, navy blue or black.

DR. GATES PLEADS FOR TURKISH TREATY

Robert College Head Declares Rejection Would Cause Ill Will and Menace Our Interests.

URGES PRACTICAL VIEW

Says on Arrival Here All Americans In Turkey Desire Ratification—Congregational Church In Favor.

Dr. Charles F. Gates, President of Robert College, Constantinople, who has lived in Turkey for forty-five years, arrived in New York yesterday on the United States liner Republic, urging ratification of the Lausanne Treaty, which has been opposed by Bishop William T. Manning and 109 other Bishops of the Episcopal Church in a memorial to the Senate.

Dr. Gates said ratification of the treaty by the Senate was desired by all the educational, religious and business interests of the United States in Turkey, who had met prior to his departure so to petition the Secretary of State and the Senate.

Dr. Gates's statement was made almost simultaneously with the sending by the National Council of Congregational Churches, which claims 114 of 127 foreign missionaries in Turkey, of a letter to every Senator urging ratification. The letter said the Congregationalists had worked in Turkey more than 100 years and had invested millions of dollars, and that both the work and the money would be endangered by failure to ratify "this treaty which will put all American interests in the country upon a par with the interests of the nationals of the European States, which have all ratified similar treaties."

Praises Work of Kemal.

Dr. Gates asserted that the Turkish Government was working hard to make Turkey a modern and progressive State. He said Mustapha Kemal was a strong man, imbued with Western ideas and possessed of courage and firmness, under whom Turkey had adopted the Swiss civil code, done away with polygamy and cut loose ties which bound it to the East. His statement follows:

I understand that there is considerable opposition to the ratification of the treaty with Turkey. It is said that this treaty gives up the capitulations without obtaining any substantial guarantees in their place; but the capitulations have already been abolished; they are dead. All the nations of Europe and Japan have already agreed to the abolition of the capitulations, and it would be impossible for the United States to restore them. For the United States to insist that the capitulations are still in force for us would put us in an impossible situation.

Many object to this treaty on the ground that it does not afford any guarantees for the protection of the Christian minorities. This objection does honor to the humanitarian sentiments of the objectors. At the same time we ought to consider what would be the practical value of a clause in this treaty for the protection of the Christian minorities. If the United States should secure the insertion of such a clause in a treaty with Turkey, would she be ready to go to war in case that provision of the treaty were violated? If not, would we not be placed in the unenviable situation of those European nations who have had such a clause in their treaties with Turkey but have never enforced it? Again and again they have abandoned the Christians in the last extremity and have made their fate worse rather than better. The Turks are firmly convinced that the European nations use the protection of the Christians only as a pretext for interfering in the internal affairs of Turkey for the furtherance of their own selfish aims. This exasperates the Turks to the last degree and makes them all the more determined to get rid of the Christians in order that Europe may have no pretext for interference. The treaty under consideration is a treaty to secure the rights of American citizens and not a treaty for regulating the affairs of other peoples. Every right-minded person must sympathize with the Armenians in their sufferings. The United States Government and people ought to use all their influence to help them in their most distressing situation, but it will not increase our influence to insist upon the insertion of a clause for the protection of the Christians or for the granting of a national home to the Armenians, and it might place us in a position of contracting obligations which we would not be willing to carry out.

Education Safeguards Itself.

Another objection urged against this treaty is that it does not provide adequate guarantees for the protection of educational and religious institutions in Turkey. The Americans engaged in such work ask no other protection than is accorded to all American citizens. We realize that the continuance of our educational work depends upon our convincing the Turks that this work is valuable to them. No clause in a treaty could protect us if the Turks were determined to get rid of us, for it would be easy for them to hamper our work with restrictions which would make it impossible for us to continue. The highest Turkish officials have repeatedly testified that they value highly the work which our institutions are doing, and they have given us most favorable treatment. Just before I left Constantinople I attended a gathering of men representing all the American interests in Turkey, business, educational and missionary. It was unanimously voted to send a petition to the Secretary of State and a statement to every Senator, asking for the ratification of the treaty. These men, living and working in Turkey, would seem to be qualified to judge whether the ratification of the treaty is desirable from the standpoint of American interests.

It is well to consider what would be the effect of the refusal of the Senate to ratify this treaty. Some people seem to think that it would only mean that we should continue on the same basis as we are now, but they are ignorant of the real conditions. The European powers have ratified this same treaty and have established friendly relations with Turkey by appointing diplomatic representatives. The American representative was appointed as American High Commissioner, but a High Commissioner implies an irregular and abnormal state of things in the country to which the Commissioner is appointed. The Turks resent the implication that Turkey is in such a condition. They assert that they have a strong Government regularly established, they no longer recognize the American representative as "High Commissioner." This position is a very delicate one and would be much more so were it not for the friendly relations which he has established and the influence which he has acquired. If we reject this treaty we must fall back upon the Treaty of 1834, which recognizes the capitulations. The effect of this would be to transform the good will of the Turks for Americans into ill-will and to provoke retaliations; they might refuse to receive at any representative to the United States rather than to sanction the implication that the capitulations are in force with regard to Americans. Not only missionary and educational interests would then be imperiled, but business interests as well. It is difficult to see how we should extricate ourselves from the ensuing dilemma. We must look ahead and think these problems through to their ultimate consequences. The opponents of ratification are acting under sentimental impulses which are creditable to them, but we must consider how we can attain the ends which they have in view. Is it by cutting off all relations with the Turkish Government and making it impossible for us to influence them? Or is it by establishing such normal relations as prevail among nations and endeavoring to point out the path of progress to the Turks so that they may do better in the future than in the past?

Two Groups Hostile.

There are, I think, two groups of those who would reject this treaty: the first group would refuse to make any treaty with Turkey even if the refusal should necessitate the withdrawal of all Americans from that country and the cessation of American business in it. They are not concerned with American interests in Turkey; they only desire to give full vent to their indignation against the Turks and their condemnation of them. Consequently, they do not look beyond the rejection of the treaty, which to their minds is an end in itself to be attained at all costs. It is impossible to reason with this group. The second group think that if this treaty were rejected it would be possible to make a better treaty which would contain the provisions which they desire to insert. They would reject this treaty in order to make a better one. This idea is based on ignorance of actual conditions. It would not be possible to make a better treaty if this one were rejected by the Senate for two reasons: First, the Turks would be exasperated by our rejection of the treaty and would not be disposed to grant us better conditions; we should have incurred their resentment and would be hampered at every step of our negotiations with them. Second, the Turks could not grant us better terms even if they were disposed to do so, for the reason that all the other nations who have concluded treaties with them on these terms would immediately claim the same treatment. This would result in new negotiations with all those powers.

The treaty under consideration is not an ideal one; no treaty ever is ideal, because it is the result of balancing conflicting interests, but it is a good treaty. It gives to Americans all that is conceded to other nations. We can hardly claim more than this; and it makes it possible for Americans to do business and to carry on educational and missionary work in Turkey, the purpose of which is to train men with a better intellectual outlook and a purer moral purpose, who will labor for the uplift of the new Turkey.

Letter by Congregationalists.

In a statement which accompanied a copy of the letter sent to the Senators, Herbert D. Rugg, Editorial Secretary of the National Council of Congregational Churches, said that nearly all the Armenian Protestant churches in the United States belonged to the Congregational denomination and favored ratification of the Lausanne Treaty.

MAYOR HAILS JEWISH DRIVE.

Disregards Doctor's Orders to Attend Pre-Campaign Meeting.

Anticipating the opening of the United Jewish Campaign next Sunday, a group of prominent real estate men who met last night at the Park Lane Hotel announced their contribution of $200,000 to the campaign. Mayor Walker, though under the care of a physician, was present at the dinner and explained his disregard of the doctor's orders by saying that his interest in the campaign was so great that he had volunteered to do all in his power, both as an individual and as Mayor of the city.

"The $8,000,000 which this city has been asked to contribute to this fund must be obtained," he said, "and if it means anything to the Jews of New York that the Irish Catholic Mayor is so vitally interested I hope that you will capitalize this interest to the fullest extent."

Louis Marshall was the only other speaker.

SMITH ASKS STATE TO AID JEWISH FUND

Proclamation Calls for Hearty Response to April 25-May 9 Drive for $15,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—In a proclamation today Governor Smith called upon the people of the State to help the United Jewish Campaign raise $15,000,000 for the relief of European Jews, April 25 to May 9 has been set aside for the collection of these funds.

"I am sure," the Governor wrote in his memorandum, "that the people of this State will respond generously at that time, as they have in the past, to make possible the complete achievement of this notable humanitarian task."

The Governor pointed out that during the World War, when the European Jews were in dire need of food, shelter and medicine, the generosity with which Americans came to their rescue was unparalleled in the history of philanthropy in this country. The Governor said that the aid then given saved the Jews of Poland, Rumania, Russia, Palestine, Bessarabia and other European countries from all but extinction.

"Once more," the Governor says, "the American Jew is called upon and the joint distribution committee which rendered such historic service to the Jews during the war is taking up the task of securing the necessary funds to bring about a thorough reconstruction of the victims of the war.

"The present plight of the Jew is particularly tragic because the gates of America and other countries are now practically closed to him. In the past his sufferings were mitigated by the outlet of migration. Now this escape is denied him. The American Jew, who has always been so generous in helping his less fortunate brother, will not be indifferent to this noble effort made by the American Jewish leaders who are at the head of the United Jewish Campaign.

"Called upon again and again to give generously to the unfortunates of the world, New York always finds sufficient resources with which to respond. This present need of women and little children for relief from starvation and misery and the encouragement of the noble effort of the heads of families to re-establish themselves as artisans and productive factors in the countries where they live, should be encouraged and aided and merits the sympathetic interest of our citizens."

City Officials Aid Salvation Army.

Dr. Louis I. Harris, Commissioner of Health, whom Mayor Walker has appointed Chairman of the municipal group in the annual maintenance appeal for Salvation Army work in the city, has called a luncheon meeting at Pontin's Restaurant, 47 Franklin Street, Thursday. Representatives of every city department will attend.

DR. HIBBEN, 05, GETS PRINCETON TRIBUTE

During His 14 Years as President University Has Prospered, Says Princetonian.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 19.—Tribute was paid to the service rendered the university by President John Grier Hibben during his fourteen years of administration in an editorial in The Daily Princetonian commemorating his sixty-fifth birthday today. The editorial in part says:

"The satisfaction which must be John Grier Hibben's today as he looks back over sixty-five years of service will be shared by every Princeton man, and it is in behalf of Princeton men that The Princetonian extends its hearty congratulations to President Hibben.

"During the fourteen years of Dr. Hibben's presidency Princeton has prospered as never before in her history. From a position of intellectual mediocrity she has steadily risen until in the upper-class plan of study she has taken the lead in educational thought and achievement.

"The four-course plan, with its recognition of the responsibility of the undergraduate, is but one evidence of the attitude which President Hibben has fostered in all the dealings of the administration with the undergraduate body. It has been one of sympathy and understanding. He has at all times invited and encouraged student opinion and action. He has shown himself willing to place even greater responsibility on the organs of the student government than they have been willing to assume.

"The undergraduates should become better acquainted with this man, who as leader of Princeton and the guardian of its most sacred tradition embodies the qualities which have made the Princeton gentleman respected and admired."

MILLIKAN REVIEWS STAGES OF RELIGION

COVERS FOUR PERIODS

Declares the Present Recognizes a Benevolent God in the Universe.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 19.—The discoveries of modern scientific research tend in general to corroborate the religious idea of a benevolent universe, a world in which everything acts according to intelligent law and one which is ready to be used for and by mankind as soon as it is understood, said Dr. Robert A. Millikan, physicist, in an address in the First Presbyterian Church of this city. Fundamentalists and atheists, he said, were both dogmatists, so much alike that there was little to choose between them.

He showed what he conceived to be the four stages in the evolution of religion from the time of primitive man to the present. For the savage, religion began in fear of the external universe and of his fellow-man. He was terrified by unusual occurrences, and he beat tomtoms to frighten away evil spirits and sacrificed his children to propitiate the gods. The first step forward came when Abraham in Israel and also the Greek in another land at about the same time decided that God or the gods were not pleased with human sacrifices, and substituted the idea of animal sacrifice.

Beginning of Philosophic Religion.

Then much later a new idea filtered in, in a small way through Mohammed, in a much larger way through Buddha, and in a flood of light through the teachings of Jesus. This idea substituted the Golden Rule for sacrifices to the gods and taught that God was benevolent with regard to his fellowmen. The speaker explained that the teachings of Jesus had been overlaid by a vast amount of belief in the supernatural and magic, which was in no way part of His original conception, but which arose from the primitive ideas prevailing among His early followers. That is, the religious ideas of Jesus had to shine for at least fifteen centuries through a mist.

About 1500 the third great step was taken and it may be represented by Galileo's dropping two weights from the leaning tower of Pisa, observing the result and thereby revolutionizing medieval ideas and introducing the scientific method, which led in the years that followed to a totally new conception of the universe and so to a new theory of religion.

We are now in the fourth period of the evolution of religion, Dr. Millikan believes, and this period is characterized by much scientific research in the field of the world's history leading to the knowledge that the earth is at least a billion years old, that it as well as man has been undergoing an evolutionary process which shows distinct progress upward.

Man and the World Improving.

In general, Dr. Millikan said, scientists are optimistic. They see that man and the world have been improving, that there are new discoveries and better living conditions, and they believe, therefore, that the process will continue and that the world of tomorrow will be better than the world of today. They find that Jesus' inspiration, which made Him conceive of a benevolent God, is apparently carried out in the universe, and that the seeming cruelty of nature is usually due to the lack of knowledge or misunderstanding of the laws by which the universe is governed.

For example, today the thunderbolt of Jove, which was one of the greatest terrors of the ancient world, has been harnessed by man and is now the chief means of support of over 6,000,000 people in America alone.

Finally Dr. Millikan stated there are two, and only two, classes of people in the world with regard to their religious opinions. In the one class are the dogmatists and in the other those with minds always open to receive new truth—that is, those with the scientific attitude.

Within the ranks of the dogmatists he classified the atheists because they choose to believe in a world due to nothing but blind force in spite of evidence to the contrary, including what they consider signs of intelligence in their own minds; and also the Fundamentalists, who close their eyes to new truth and choose to believe in a God that is merely an overgrown man with man's faults. These two kinds of dogmatists are so much alike that there is little to choose between them, in the speaker's opinion.

The men with the scientific attitude have at least the advantage of knowing that they do not know it all, he stated, and their religion, or attitude toward life, helps them to do some good in this world.

ENJOINS COMBINATION IN PLUMBING SUPPLIES

Federal Court in Richmond, Va., Issues Decree to Which 13 Companies Consent.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., April 19.—Judge D. Lawrence Groner in Federal District Court here today restrained thirteen plumbing supply companies from "adopting, mainting or using, or continuing to maintain or use by collective action, agreement or understanding, uniform prices, uniform minimum prices or uniform discounts with respect to plumbing supplies."

To avoid the expense of litigation, the companies consented to the injunction decree, declaring its terms were satisfactory to them and that they desired to conform with all reasonable requirements.

The companies were the Noland Company, Inc., the Haines, Jones & Cadbury Company, the Mott-Southern Company, the McGraw Yarborough Company, George G. Lee Company, Inc., the James Robertson Manufacturing Company, the Pierce, Butler & Pierce Manufacturing Corporation, the Standard Supply Company, Inc., the Seaboard Supply Company, Inc., the Southern States Supply Company, the Tidewater Plumbing Supply Company, the Whitman Douglas Company and the Tomlinson Company, Inc.

The Crane Company, incorporated under the laws of Illinois and having an office in Richmond, was not represented. Felix H. Levy of New York was counsel for the thirteen defendants.

These corporations were charged by the Government with being "engaged in combination and agreement in undue restraint of trade and commerce among several States with respect to plumbing supplies," including Virginia, North and South Carolina.

JOSEPH PULITZER IN CLINIC.

Publisher Under Observation at Johns Hopkins for Eye Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 19.—Joseph Pulitzer, President of the Pulitzer Publishing Company, has entered the Wilmer Eye Institute, Johns Hopkins Hospital, for treatment.

Mr. Pulitzer, who is 41 years old, is under the observation of Dr. William Holland Wilmer, head of the clinic. It has not been determined whether an operation will be necessary, but Mr. Pulitzer will remain in the hospital several days, it was said. He has been there since Saturday.

Mr. Pulitzer married Miss Elizabeth Edgar of St. Louis two weeks ago in the Bofinger Memorial Chapel of Christ Church Episcopal Cathedral, that city. When they started on their wedding trip they intended to be gone three weeks. Mr. Pulitzer is editor of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and a son of the late Joseph Pulitzer of this city.

THOMAS ADVOCATES BURNING OF HISTORIES

Declares in Town Hall Speech, He Says WEAF Barred, That Mankind Would Benefit.

The United Parents Association at its second open meeting held last evening in Town Hall discussed "Fathers, Mothers and World Peace." The speakers were John Nevin Sayre, of Princeton University, Chairman of the Fellowship of Reconciliation; Norman Thomas, director of the League for Industrial Democracy, and Dr. Anne Garlin Spencer, lecturer on sociology at Teachers College. The presiding officer was Robert E. Simon, head of the association.

The great need was to bring the world into a peaceful state of mind, Mr. Sayre said, and he believed the best way to do this was to educate the world away from war, to train children to be valiant for truth and to help children to see war as a superstition. He would have them brought to the attitude which he said was represented by Edith Cavell, without hatred or bitterness. Children, he said, should be reared to believe in peace, patriotism and high service.

Mr. Thomas, who was arrested on April 14 at Passaic in an attempt to test the Riot act, told his audience that since his arrest Station WEAF had, without explanation, canceled an arrangement for broadcasting his address.

"I want to say that what I have said here, and you have heard it, was not considered good enough to be broadcast by WEAF," he said. "Of course my character has suffered by recent events." He smiled as he said it, and the audience laughed. "There should be no censorship by radio. If that happens it is easy to regiment men's minds for war."

Only once in his speech did Mr. Thomas mention, and then indirectly, the Passaic strike. When speaking of loyalty as a symbol he said, "They don't know what the pledge of loyalty is in certain parts of New Jersey." The audience applauded.

"Mankind might be benefited if all history books were burned," Mr. Thomas said. "Then there would be less chance of prejudice and of war. Far more ideal it would be if history were well taught.

"We are making a beginning in a new regard for the heroes of science, discovery and peace. We ought to be giving our children not merely the knowledge of the swashbucklers and politicians whose achievements so often have been to the hurt of mankind, but rather we should give them a knowledge of thinkers, the scientists, the creators of art and beauty, the discoverers of truth and the lowly unnamed heroes of labor and all other progressive movements."

Officials of WEAF said last night they knew nothing of any arrangements ever having been made to broadcast Thomas's speech.

TWO LONG BEACH MEN JAILED IN GRAFT CASE

Gracy and Andersen Surrender as Preliminary to Fight on Indictments.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 19.—John Gracy, formerly Treasurer of Long Beach, and Harry F. Andersen, a Lynbrook contractor, surrendered tonight at the Nassau County Jail here on indictments returned against them in 1924 by the Grand Jury of the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, created by Governor Smith to investigate allegations of graft in the awarding of contracts by Long Beach officials. Gracy and Andersen, with former Mayor William H. Reynolds and four others, were named in the indictments.

Gracy was convicted at Mineola in June, 1924, of grand larceny in the first degree, but the verdict was set aside and a new trial ordered by the Court of Appeals. Andersen had been released on $2,500 bail and was never called for trial.

The men were accompanied to the jail by their lawyer, Alfred Schaeffer, who said he later obtained from Supreme Court Justice Faber in Jamaica a writ of habeas corpus, and Gracy and Andersen were released in their council's custody until their appearance tomorrow before Supreme Court Justice Riegelmann to determine if the Grand Jury acted within its powers in returning the indictments against them.

It was understood that the move was initiated because Special Deputy Attorney General Kenneth M. Spence, who acted as prosecutor at the trials of some of the indicted men, announced recently that he would apply to Supreme Court Justice Lewis at the opening of the May term here for new trials for Gracy and former Mayor Reynolds, whose conviction also was set aside.

Report Record Mackerel Catch.

CAPE MAY, N. J., April 19.—A record-breaking catch of mackerel was made today by the Gloucester fishing fleet off Cape May. More than twenty-one carloads were shipped in a special train from Shellenger's landing fishing docks. The Cape May fishermen predict that all records for quantity will be broken this year. The biggest catch of 1925 was 500,000 pounds.

NEW WORRY FOR DIVORCEES.

1798 Rhode Island Law May Hit Beneficiaries of the "Mill."

PROVIDENCE, April 19 (AP).—Rhode Island divorcees, some of whose marital affairs came into the limelight with the "divorce mill" exposé of last year, have new cause for worry.

A law which had been on the State's statute books since 1798 was discovered in a debate in the State Senate, declaring the marriage of any person who has a former husband or wife living to be "absolutely void."

The Senate has made haste to amend it by striking out the word "former," but how it affects divorcees who have remarried is a moot question among local lawyers.

ANTARCTIC WHALER BRINGS BIG CARGO

HUNTED IN POLAR ICE FLOES

The Norwegian whaler Sir James Clark Ross arrived yesterday at Pier 9, Stapleton, S. I., after a nine months' cruise to King Edward VII Land in the Antarctic. Since she left the little port of Sandefjord, not far from Oslo, last August she has cruised more than 25,000 miles. She brought with her a record of 831 whales killed and tales of heroic battles with the ice floes only eleven and a half degrees north of the South Pole. In her hold were 39,000 barrels of whale oil, consigned to Procter & Gamble. Their estimated value is $1,200,000.

As she steamed up the Narrows yesterday the sturdy Norwegian vessel looked very different from the whaler of tradition. A weather-scarred buff and black funnel took the place of the tapering sail-crammed masts of Moby Dick's time. Her crew consisted of blue-eyed and blond-haired Norwegians instead of the lean, harsh-twanged New Bedford men of the old whaling tradition.

Sides Scraped by Ice.

According to Lloyds Register, she is 470 feet long and has a tonnage of 8,224, but she looked less than that. The paint had been scraped off her sides by the tireless chafing of the ice. Great irregular splotches of rust rose upward from her water line. But her deck and her fittings were cleanly painted. Not a fleck of dust clung to the great tanks forward and aft in which the whale blubber is boiled down. Her commander, Captain Torstenzen, obviously was a seaman.

This was her second call in the United States on her nine months' cruise. On her way out she stopped at Norfolk to take on coal.

From Norfolk she steamed straight through the Panama Canal to Lyttleton, New Zealand, where she took on further supplies. Her next stop was at Stewart Island. There the seven small steamers which accompany her and from which the actual whaling is done are permanently kept.

The actual whaling is done at the edge of the ice barrier, well within the Antarctic Circle. To reach this the Ross, accompanied by the smaller steamers, had to push her way through miles of floe ice. Sometimes this was wedged so close that the crew had to disembark and cut their way free with pick and ice axes. At other times the safety of the vessel was menaced when a high wind turned it into a grinding mass.

Get Feed on Lonely Island.

The last land reached was Campbells Island, a small one about 200 miles south of New Zealand. Three men live on it in charge of a large herd of sheep. The whaler stopped there for a supply of mutton. From there south to the edge of the ice barrier there was nothing but ice-strewn sea.

It was among the floes of Ross Sea that she found the whales. These were from 75 to 100 feet in length and each one produced from 70 to 80 barrels of whale oil. As soon as her hold was filled the steamer turned northward toward New Zealand again. She left Stewart Island on March 11, and will stay in New York a week. Then she will return to Sandefjord for repairs. This is her third trip into the Antarctic and she will go back again next August.

While she was in the far seas she did not have a casualty, but she brought with her tidings of a last-minute mishap. Just one day out of New York three of her seamen were asphyxiated while going into an unventilated hold to inspect a water tank. One of them was Asbjorn Svendsen, the son of Albert Svendsen, the chief engineer. His father, who was with him, fell unconscious. The two others, Elm ar Larsen and George Olsen, went down to rescue them. Three other seamen were overcome, but their condition is not serious.

SOLICITATION BEGINS FOR CATHOLIC CHARITY

Solicitation began yesterday in the campaign for Catholic charities which was opened on Sunday by Cardinal Hayes. Figures on the collections for Sunday and yesterday will be available this afternoon. The campaign aims to increase by 20 per cent. the amount raised and the number of contributors of last year.

The Right Rev. Bishop John J. Dunn is directing the campaign from headquarters at 477 Madison Avenue. Between 15,000 and 16,000 volunteer workers, chiefly women, are engaged in the canvass. Only Catholics are being approached. The city and environs has been divided into sixteen zones, the territory embracing all of the 329 parishes in the archdiocese.

Last year about $1,000,000 was raised. The number of contributors was 249,000. This year it is hoped that 300,000 will be listed.

COLUMBIA TO WIDEN ITS RESEARCH WORK

Five New Professors Added to Faculty for Development of Many Branches.

ORIENT SEEN AS STIMULUS

Research in the various departments of Columbia University is to be increased, it was announced yesterday, when Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of the university, made known the appointment of five new professors. The Board of Trustees, in voting to invite the new Faculty members to Columbia, were guided principally by a desire to stimulate research work.

Dr. Maurice Clark of the University of Chicago is to be Professor of Economics. He is a graduate of Amherst and has taught at Mount Holyoke and Stanford, as well as at Colorado College, Colorado Springs. He is the author of many works on economics.

Dr. Emerson H. Swift, also of Chicago University, is to be Associate Professor of Fine Arts. He is a Williams man, class of 1912, and pursued graduate study at Princeton. He was connected with the Archaeological Institute of America at the American schools for classical studies at Athens and at Rome. He was at one time at the University of Michigan.

Dr. Selig Hecht, who was graduated in 1913 from the College of the City of New York, formerly an assistant in pharmacology in the United States Department of Agriculture, is to be an Associate Professor of Biophysics.

Frederick E. Croxton will leave Ohio State University to become associate in statistics at Columbia. Louis H. Gray, formerly Professor of Comparative Philology and Oriental Languages at the University of Nebraska, will be Professor of Oriental Languages and associated with Dr. Richard J. H. Gottheil at Columbia. Professor Gottheil, who is Professor of Semitic Languages, in discussing plans for expansion at the university, said:

"We must prepare to meet demand which the East is bound to make upon the West. It is quite evident that the East is waking up. It is sending a great many students to American universities, and we must be ready for them. For that purpose we need strong departments to give to our students knowledge about the varied conditions that obtain in the Near East. America should do her share in this work. We have American colleges and universities in the Near East, and we ought to provide thorough preparation for the students who resort to them."

PORTO RICO ASKS RIGHT TO ELECT ITS GOVERNOR

Delegation Is on Its Way to Washington for Third Time on Same Mission.

A Porto Rican delegation headed by Antonio R. Barceló, President of the Senate, arrived in New York yesterday morning on the steamer San Lorenzo, and will leave for Washington late today to ask of President Coolidge and Congress the right to elect their own Governor in their island dominion.

Under the Organic act for Porto Rico, the United States Government appoints the Governor of the Territory. While the Porto Rican delegation, consisting of Señor Barceló, José Tous Soto, Speaker of the House of Representatives; Senator Enrique Gonzales Mena, Miguel Guerra Mondragon, Vice President of the House; J. B. Garcia Mendez, Member of the House, and Frank A. Martinez, Secretary, expressed entire satisfaction with the work of Horace M. Towner, the present Governor of the island, Señor Mondragon said a principle of democratic government was at stake.

The same delegation visited Washington both three years and a year and a half ago, and each time, according to Señor Mondragon, the request for a more complete autonomy was put on the table by the House of Representatives. "This time," said Señor Mondragon, "we hope to achieve a more satisfactory result.

House Approves Brooklyn Rail Lease

$100,000 SHORTAGE IN CASHIER'S BOOKS

Employe of Arnold Constable Said to Have Admitted Theft When Auditors Checked Up.

TRUSTED FOR MANY YEARS

Aroused Suspicion Recently by Expensive Scale of Life—Loss Covered—No Arrest.

The Arnold, Constable Corporation in anticipation of the annual meeting scheduled on May 5 has issued a financial statement informing its stockholders of the serious defalcation by one of the store's trusted old employes.

The amount involved is said to be well over $100,000. The peculations, according to company officials, covered a period of more than five years. Although reluctant to go into details, an official admitted that the money had been taken by one of the cashiers who had been with the company for about twenty years. He was generally regarded as above suspicion, hence the apparent ease with which he succeeded in diverting funds for his own use that came to the store in settlement of accounts.

Suspicion was directed to the cashier only because of his extravagance in living. Reports came to Isaac Liberman, President of the corporation, that the cashier was riding in an automobile of expensive make and evidently was living beyond his means. The suggestion was made that perhaps it would be well if his accounts were checked up.

The audit was made and the shortage discovered. When confronted with the report of the auditors, it was said, the cashier signed a confession. The amount mentioned in this document is said to be considerably less than was admitted yesterday as having been taken.

In order to ascertain the amount involved it was necessary to check the accounts of many of the customers. The examination was completed only recently.

As yet there has been no arrest, nor has the corporation done anything beyond reporting the matter to the surety company bonding the cashier. It was said that the Arnold, Constable Corporation would not suffer any loss, as the money taken is covered through the bonding companies.

The stockholders have been told of the defalcation in a paragraph which appeared in the Arnold, Constable Corporation and subsidiary companies consolidated balance sheet as of Jan. 31, 1926, and which read as follows:

"We discovered a serious defalcation by one of the trusted old employes. Apparently the peculations had been continuing for some years. The loss has been absorbed in the statements appearing herewith."

Asked what particular item in the statement takes care of the loss sustained through the defalcation, the answer was "in the cost of goods sold, selling, operating and general administrative expenses." Against this item appears the total $4,483,787.73.

The power of the printed page in St. Louis' Largest Daily is helping to write familiar trade names into building specifications in The 49th State.

It is helping advertisers to get business in St. Louis and 150 miles surrounding.... A market in which 1925 construction work totaled close to $100,000,000.

A 38% increase over 1924.... A greater gain than was made by 18 of the country's 25 largest cities.

Permits issued in St. Louis during January, February, March amounted to more than $12,315,103.

March was more than $2,000,000 ahead of March, 1925.

Included in this vast, expanding program are apartments, homes, hotels, theatres, hospitals, stores, office buildings, and factories. And in addition—St. Louis' $87,000,000 Bond Issue for municipal improvement.

Here is a great, concentrated market for manufacturers of products entering into building construction—and The Newspaper of The 49th State covers this market as no other paper even claims to do.

The Globe-Democrat Home-Builders' Page, a regular Sunday feature, has long been a feature of eager interest to home owners and home builders.

Photographs and detailed descriptions of model homes appear regularly each week. A surprising number of homes in The 49th State have been inspired and built from the finished working plans supplied by The Globe-Democrat.

"Help for the Man Who Wants to Build" is a small homes plan book of which more than 16,000 copies have been purchased from The Globe-Democrat in less than eighteen months.

The Globe-Democrat is actively promoting home building. Its program is sponsored by architects, contractors, realtors and men in every line of building endeavor.

200 ARMY OFFICERS ASSAIL DR. CADMAN

Deplore 'Intolerance' Toward Military Training Advocates, Ousted at Meeting.

A CHALLENGE TO DEBATE

Col. Allyn Says Public Forum Is Logical Place to Settle Question Finally.

Two hundred members of the Coast Artillery Reserve Officers of the Second Corps Area, meeting at the Engineering Societies' Building, 33 West Thirty-ninth Street, last night, unanimously adopted a resolution deploring Dr. S. Parkes Cadman's "intolerant attitude toward the officers" who were ejected from the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday after they had attempted to question him on his stand against military training courses in schools and colleges.

The resolution directed that the matter be referred for investigation to the National Headquarters of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States and that it be brought to the attention of the National Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for final action and report. A copy of the resolution was also ordered to be sent to Dr. Cadman.

Dr. Cadman, the resolution held, refused to grant to the officers at the meeting a courtesy usually given to those wishing to ask questions. The officers were ejected, it declared, and subjected to other humilities "which were an affront to the United States Army." If it were the fault of the Chairman, Dr. Cadman should have requested that the question be allowed, it said.

Accused of Denying Free Speech.

"We respectfully point out," it continued, "that the right to free speech is a popular doctrine with those agencies opposed to the ministrations of our Government, yet this very thing, he, by his actions, denied from his platform."

Colonel Charles E. Warren and seven other Colonels signed the resolution for the association.

Colonel Robert Starr Allyn pressed yesterday the issue which was raised between him and Dr. Cadman, who is President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, by challenging the minister to debate the subject of military training in the schools.

"I believe (and courts of justice and public tribunals have been following this belief for ages) that it is only fair when deciding a question to hear both sides," said the Colonel. "Yesterday, however, at Dr. Cadman's meeting in Brooklyn no opportunity was given for the affirmative side to be heard on the question of military training in schools, and none of the questions which we proposed to Dr. Cadman were answered, thanks to the chairman and the trumpeters he had with him."

Debate Logical, He Contends.

"There seems to be but one way in which to get at the truth of this matter and that is by a public debate. I therefore issue a challenge to Dr. Cadman to debate this issue with him in public and at a time and place (not too far distant) mutually convenient."

Dr. Cadman was reported at his office to be out of town.

Major Gen. Charles E. Berry, formerly Commander of the National Guard in New York, said that he did not want to be involved in the controversy, that he favored military training but that it could be carried too far. He did not believe the disturbance was serious.

At the annual dinner of the St. John's College Alumni Association at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, last night, Emil N. Baar, Commander of the Kings County American Legion, said that while the Legion was not a militaristic organization he felt that Dr. Cadman was wrong in his denouncement of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. He said the best way to warn warring factions of the world that they may fight among themselves but keep away from these shores was by some organized armed force.

"Thus only can we avoid internationalism," he said. "We can as well do away with an army as we can do away with a police force. This is due to the frailties of human nature. We do not want to be jellyfish."

GRADE CROSSINGS HEARING.

Opposition to Provision for Elimination in City Is Withdrawn.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Governor Smith today gave a hearing on a bill sponsored by the Legislative Grade Crossing Committee giving to the Transit Commission authority to order the elimination of crossings in Greater New York. Opposition which had been expected to develop did not materialize.

Judge Frank Johnson of the Municipal Court, Brooklyn, former State Senator and President of the Atlantic Avenue Improvement Committee of Brooklyn and Queens, told the Governor that the organization he represented had fought the grade-crossing bill in the Legislature. It now felt that the removal of crossings in the city was of such great importance that the bill should be approved. The reason his organization had opposed the measure was becauuse it was afraid that the Transit Commission might permit the Long Island Railroad to eliminate crossings in Atlantic Avenue by means of elevated structures.

"We never had much confidence in the present Transit Commission, but we have reason to believe that the new Transit Commission you are about to appoint will have more respect for the wishes of the people," said Judge Johnson.

He had been assured, he said, that a bill now pending to prohibit the Long Island road from running its tracks on elevated structures in Atlantic Avenuue would be passed.

Kieferle was found guilty of second degree murder by a jury on the charge of killing Mrs. Watson and today he pleaded guilty in the same degree to killing Koethe. Judge Smith sentenced him to twenty years on each charge.

FIGHTS OFF MANIAC IN AN AMBULANCE

ESCAPES AFTER CAR STOPS

Madman Finally Captured by a Policeman—Was Under Delusion He Was Chapman's Aid.

Dr. John Madarias, an interne at Fordham Hospital, for fifteen minutes last night struggled with an insane man in a speeding ambulance for possession of a dirk which the patient suddenly pulled from his coat pocket. Dr. Madarias had been called to Bronxdale Avenue and Morris Park Avenue, the Bronx, to attend the man for several cuts on the left knee. The physician was taking him to the hospital when the latter, declaring he was being pursued as the confederate of Gerald Chapman in the slaying of a New Britain (Conn.) policeman, started to fight.

The whir of the motor of the ambulance prevented the driver, Frank Kelly, from hearing the muffled cries of the doctor as the patient steadily bore Dr. Madarias to the floor of the ambulance. Kelly had driven several miles to Holland and Morris Park Avenues, when Dr. Madarias managed to release himself from the grip of the patient long enough to shout. Then Kelly stopped the ambulance and went to the interne's aid.

The patient, Artino Castro, who is 36 years old and lives at 340 West Forty-second Street, proved more than a match for them, however, retaining his grip on his dirk and forcing both the interne and the driver to leap out of the ambulance and run. Castro started in pursuit of them, but just then Patrolman Liptay, on his way to report for duty at the Bronx Park Station, appeared.

Liptay whipped out his pistol but Dr. Madarias warned him that he thought the man pursuing him and the driver was a maniac. The patrolman started toward Castro, who wheeled around and headed for the yards of several dwelling houses, where many children were at play. Liptay fired five shots in the air, but the fugitive continued across fences and in and out alleyways until he became winded, and then took a stand against the patrolman, his back to a tree and wielding the dirk, with the declaration that he would kill the patrolman "as I have killed other policemen."

Liptay came to within five feet of Castro and tried unsuccessfully to induce him to drop the knife. Dr. Madarias and the ambulance driver, who had kept up with the chase in the ambulance, then came up and the policeman decided on a ruse. He told the ambulance surgeon and the driver to keep Castro in conversation. Then he slipped around the tree and felled Castro with his nightstick.

Castro then was placed in a straitjacekt and hurried to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue. Explaining his injuries, Castro said he had fallen from a moving freight train when he was leaving the city, because he feared arrest as Chapman's confederate.

MAYOR OF BAYONNE RAISES BRIBE ISSUE

Says Finance Director Hosford Told of $60,000 Offer to Turn Against Him.

SWITCH SOON FOLLOWED

Accusation Names a Prominent Physician, Who Comments That "The Mayor Is Crazy."

Special to The New York Times.

BAYONNE, N. J., April 19.—Charges that Director of Finance Harry Hosford received an offer of $60,000 to switch his allegiance from Mayor Robert J. Talbot to the opposing section of the Bayonne City Government were made by the Mayor today. He was testifying at the hearing of the writ of certiorari brought against the City Commissioners by Director of Parks and Public Property Patrick J. O'Connell.

Director O'Connell was formerly Director of Safety, and in October, 1924, was transferred from that position to his present office. Dr. Bert J. Daly, who had been Director of Parks and Public Property, was made Director of Safety.

The Mayor, in his testimony today, said that Hosford told him of the offer. Shortly afterward, he said, Hosford, who had previously voted with him and O'Connell against Director Daly and Director of Public Works Dr. W. Homer Axford, thus giving the Mayor's party a majority of three to two in the City Administration, transferred his vote to Drs. Daly and Axford, with the result that the three, Hosford, Daly and Axford, held a voting majority. With this majority the transfer of O'Connel was carried.

Mayor Talbot said that Hosford told of making several trips to Jersey City, where he saw Governor A. Harry Moore, who was then a City Commissioner, and other public officials. The Mayor at first declined to say who Hosford told him made the offer. Under the cross-examination of Allan Benny, counsel for O'Donnell, the Mayor said that Hosford told him the offer came from Dr. A. J. Molloy, a prominent physician here.

When informed of the Mayor's testimony, which was made under oath before Supreme Court Clerk John Dengle, Dr. Molloy said "the Mayor is crazy."

Rumors that Hosford had received the offer of a substantial sum for switching his vote in the City Commission have been current in Bayonne for some time. When the present hearing commenced ten days ago it was freely predicted in political circles that some definite statement on the matter would be forthcoming.

Rabbi Wins Immigration Suit.

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP).—The Supreme Court today rejected an appeal by the Government in the case of Jacob S. Duner, a Jewish rabbi, whose family the immigration authorities had sought unsuccessfully to exclude from the country. Duner came from Poland prior to passage of the quota law of 1924. His wife and children arrived after its passage. The authorities attempted to exclude them, but the Federal courts at New York City refused to sustain the Government's contention.

Two Widows Claim Estate

The following quotation is from The Herald-Tribune:

"Two women, one with five children, the other with three, appeared in the Jersey City Chancery Court yesterday and laid claim to the estate of a building contractor of Dundee Lake, Bergen County, N. J., who died a year ago."

How many people who buy and sell real estate appreciate the serious consequences arising when a man's wife does not sign his deed or when the deed is signed by some woman who is not really his wife?

This is one of the risks that title policies insure against. It is very important protection and is one of the arguments why you should never buy real estate or lend on it without having us insure your title.

The Largest Quantity of Quality Home Circulation In New York

The nine million men, women and children within fifty miles of New York have a greater earning, purchasing and spending power than all the inhabitants of Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and Boston.

Quality in any newspaper's circulation is represented by the purchasing power of its readers, and quantity is an all-important factor.

An advertiser should ask a newspaper: "How many people read your newspaper?" ..... "Have they the money to buy my goods?" ... "Are they responsive to advertising?"

Every day during the past six months an average of 696,447 people bought the New York Evening Journal, 3c daily—5c Saturdays, and CARRIED IT HOME where it is read by over 2,000,000 men, women and children .... and the proven experience of advertisers is that these people constitute the most responsive audience of evening newspaper readers in America.

For 27 consecutive years the New York Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America .... and for 12 consecutive years has led all New York evening newspapers in volume of advertising printed.

Merchants in every major line of retail business invest more money in the Evening Journal than in any other New York newspaper, because it produces the greatest results.

The Evening Journal is purchased by 46 out of every 100 people who buy any New York evening newspaper ..... and has the largest quantity of quality circulation going into the homes of Metropolitan New York.

CATCH E. F. KELLY, SOUGHT IN RUM PLOT

RELEASED ON $20,000 BAIL

Bribery of Coast Guard Charged—Named in Two Indictments—May Be Tried Next Month.

Edward F. Kelly, formerly a Vice President of the United States Trucking Corporation, indicted with William V. Dwyer and fifty-nine others charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, was arrested yesterday in his home, at 51 Lamont Avenue, Elmhurst, L. I., after four months' search. United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner said he considered Kelly one of the "principals" in the alleged conspiracy.

Arraigned before Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow, Kelly was released in $20,000 bail, furnished by James S. Reardon of the Reardon Realty Corporation, 80 Wall Street. Kelly was named in two of the three indictments returned against Dwyer and some of the others on Jan. 15. He was charged with conspiracy and also with bribing members of the United States Coast Guard.

Following Kelly's arrest it was announced that he, Dwyer and the other defendants under arrest probably would be tried next month. Not all of the sixty-one defendants have been apprehended. According to Mr. Buckner, Dwyer and Kelly, known as the "pivot" men in the alleged rum ring, were the leaders of the enterprise.

Following the arrest of Dwyer and others on Dec. 3, 1925, Kelly, it was said, left his home and was reported in Canada, Cuba, Florida and elsewhere. No explanation was offered as to why he was not found until he returned to his home or how the information of his return was obtained by Federal agents who made the arrest.

Charges in the indictments and allegations made by Federal officials were that Kelly, personally or through agents, supervised the purchase of liquors at Halifax, St. Pierre and Lunenberg, arranged with contact boats to land liquor on Long Island and bribed Coast Guardsmen to make possible the carrying out of the alleged conspiracy. It also was charged that he personally directed sales of the liquor to distributing agents and bootleggers and that his part in the conspiracy necessitated frequent trips to Canada and New London, Conn., to make proper liquor connections.

At the offices of the United States Trucking Corporation it was said that in 1919 that corporation absorbed thirty-one smaller trucking companies and that some of the heads of these smaller companies were made Vice Presidents of the corporation. Kelly was one of these Vice Presidents. In July, 1920, however, he severed his connection with the corporation. Governor Smith did not become the Chairman of its Board of Directors until 1921.

The indictments against Kelly do not indicate that any of the alleged offenses were committed by him as far back as July, 1920, so that his connection with the United States Trucking Corporation figures merely as an incident in his trucking career and not in his later alleged profitable enterprise with Dwyer and others.

MEXICAN NAVY PURSUES SUPPOSED FILIBUSTER

Government Orders Capture of Banana Boat Thought to Be Carrying Arms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 19.—Pursuit by the entire Mexican Navy of a banana ship supposed to be loaded with arms and ammunition destined for a rebel movement in Mexico, throws light upon the reports from Washington for some weeks past, that a new revolutionary movement in Mexico is feared. It also interprets General Obregon's statement that he would be ready as a soldier whenever wanted.

General Obregon's speech amazed the politicians here, as they looked for no trouble. The horizon seemed free from clouds, but the orders to the entire navy, including the newest cruiser, armed with 8-inch guns, which was purchased from Brazil, to put to sea and capture the arms carrier, which is said to be near the Mexican coast, appears to show that both Obregon and the State Department at Washington have inside information unknown to the general public.

The ship is said to be owned by a fruit company and used in the banana trade with the United States.

Mystery attaches to the sailing orders under which the naval vessels are steaming along the coast. The Government declines to comment on the orders, but has issued a statement that the entire State of Vera Cruz is peaceful.

The departure of General Guadalupe Sanchez, former rebel leader, from Cuba is rumored to have connection with the movement to land arms and ammunition on the coast, but it is not definitely known here under what banner the movement is operating.

GENEVA, April 19.—Madame Victorine LePlattenier of Neuchâtel died today at the age of 103. She recently attended the marriage of one of the fourth generation of her offspring, a girl of 20. On her hundredth birthday she was asked by her grandchildren and great-grandchildren to choose a present. She selected an airplane trip from Zurich to Geneva. And was greatly pleased with it last year, however, she refused to make a similar excursion, stating that her nerves had become a bit shaky.

PICK N. Y. U. FINALISTS FOR ORATORY PRIZES

Preliminary Judges Select Ten for Sandham Contest and Six for Macdonald Awards.

Competitors for the Sandham oratorical prizes were tried out in preliminary tests held at University Heights, New York University, yesterday, and ten winners were announced by Richard C. Borden, director of the contest. Two of the winners selected yesterday from the preliminary tests will act as alternates in the finals to be held on May 12.

The prizes consist of two awards, $100 and $75, respectively, which are given on the basis of excellence in the composition and delivery of original orations. These orations, containing about 2,500 words for a fifteen-minute address, are written upon subjects chosen by the contestants.

The winners of the preliminaries and the titles of their orations are: Leonard Bercovici, "A Plea for Less Efficiency"; Frank Burr, "John Marshall—a Eulogy"; Oliver Eckel, "Literature and the Law"; Milton Fluegelman, "A Forgotten Leader"; Nathaniel Janes, "Tampering With the Constitution"; Ralph Kelz, "A Lawless Law"; Joseph Mersand, "The Filibuster Defended"; Clifford Rowe, "A Plea for More Tolerance"; Elsa Shubow, "France and the Syrian Mandate," and Frank Walsh, "A Plea for Professional Juries."

Preliminary tests for the Macdonald oratorical contest also were held and resulted in eight winners. Six of the contestants will speak at the finals on April 30. The remaining two will act as alternates. The Macdonald prizes, established in 1913 by the class of 1909, in memory of William Stuart Macdonald, the President of their class, who was killed by a train in Broadville, N. J., on March, 1901, consists of two awards of $25 and $15, respectively, to those freshmen excelling in public speaking.

The winners of the preliminary tests are: Edward Arkin, "America's Neglect of Pure Science"; Herbert Frankel, "Centralization of Government"; Michael Groopman, "Educational Reform"; Irving Kessler, "Ethical Instruction in Schools"; Howard Lichtenstein, "The Insanity Loophole"; Carl Smith, "What the Future Holds for Democracy"; Leonard Zissu, "Intolerance," and Robert Hirsh, "A Defense of Orthodox Religion."

Columbia River docks, 3,000 feet long, accommodate the largest ocean freighters. (On a recent day, four freighters were loading—two for Japan, one for Australia, one for New York.) Two famous paved highways bring automobile tourists to Longview—Pacific Highway and Columbia River Highway. Ocean Beach Highway, now building, will give another connection with the ocean.

Opportunities In Longview 6

MANUFACTURING plants of The Long-Bell Lumber Company, largest in the world, are at Longview. The Weyerhaeuser Timber Company is building large lumber plants here, which, when complete, will make Longview's lumber output the largest at any single point in the world. (75 per cent of the manufacturing cost of lumber goes for labor. This means huge payrolls and large population from this industry alone.) The proximity of vast and varied timber is attracting other wood-working industries, and pulp wood the paper industries. Standard Oil Company operates here the only marine fueling station between Portland and the ocean. Soil of marvelous richness, never-failing blue grass and water are bringing the farmer and dairyman and fisheries, fruit and vegetable growing, the canner.

7 Investments In Longview

THREE years ago, the site of Longview was a valley of farms. Today, without a "boom," or the use of boom methods, Longview is a growing, thriving city of 10,318 (Polk Directory Company listing). Longview's unexcelled assets are: Strategic location in relation to territory it can serve; its climate; its expertly planned arrangement; its fine living conditions which are attracting good people. These limitless, untouched resources; transportation advantages; the vast advantages offer genuine opportunity to persons who seek a place for industry, who seek property investment, who seek an ideal place in which to live.

An old room and antique furniture; yet what a pleasing transformation took place when a blue and gray Blabon floor of moderate-priced Inlaid Linoleum (pattern 528) was laid.

In the olden days, everybody loved color and used it freely. The ancient Egyptians, Romans, and Greeks enlivened their buildings with painted friezes, and filled them with painted furniture, frequently decorated in the most brilliant hues.

Color is the most effective and the least expensive of all modes of decoration. And its wise use today is transforming many a drab, barren room—with Blabon floors of Linoleum playing an important part.

The new Blabon Marble Tile Inlaids, the Dutch Tiles, and the soft two-toned Jaspé effects make a wonderful foundation for a variety of harmonious color schemes.

Besides adding greatly to the attractiveness of the home, Blabon floors are springy and comfortable to walk upon. Their smooth, crackless surface is so easy to keep clean!

With an occasional waxing and polishing the original beauty of Blabon floors of Plain and Inlaid Linoleum is preserved indefinitely. There are many places in the home where Blabon's Printed Linoleum, even more moderate in price, may be used to advantage.

The modern method of cementing linoleum down over builders' deadening felt insures watertight seams which are practically invisible, and adds much to the beauty and permanency of a Blabon floor.

Ask for Blabon's Linoleum by name. It is sold by home-furnishing and department stores. Our illustrated booklet, "The Floor for the Modern Home," sent free, upon request.

Tell It to Sweeney

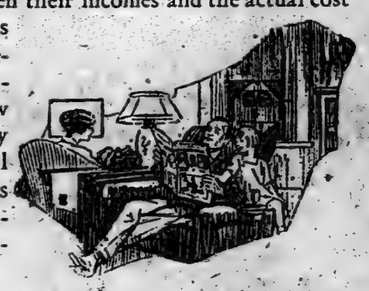
ONLY twenty-five Locomobiles are made each day; only forty Pierce Arrows, and about one and one-third Rolls Royces. These cars sell in small numbers to people of unusual money and means, the Stuyvesants. But every twenty-four hours Henry Ford rolls out 8,000 of his cars and sells them to average folks—the Sweeneys. Wherein appears the difference between quality and mass markets!

IT is a natural and laudable ambition to sell to the quality market, the Stuyvesants; to want our products used in the better homes and appreciated by the first families; to place our advertising in media that we think reach such people. But unfortunately, the quality market is lamentably limited, even in New York—the richest city in the world. There are not enough Stuyvesants to go around—to keep up production, to make sales increase, to satisfy pay rolls, to provide dividends. (Have you bought your Rolls Royce yet?)

Consider, for instance, the class market in New York. In 1923, only 65,566 individuals of New York City paid Federal Income Taxes on incomes $6,000 or more—less than 5.66% of the 1,335,000 families in New York City. This affluent minority cannot buy all the goods that are advertised!

But the other 94.34%, the million and a quarter families and individuals whose incomes range from $6,000 down (whom we call the Sweeneys) are a practically inexhaustible mass market. They are earning more money than any large group of people ever earned at any time before in the history of this world—700,179 of these families paid Federal Income Taxes in 1923 on incomes of less than $6,000. There is a larger margin than ever before between their incomes and the actual cost of living. This margin represents a tremendous new field not only for essential commodities but for luxuries and semi-luxuries.



CONSEQUENTLY, the Sweeneys today are the best market for everything. They own most of the 339,000 automobiles registered in New York last year—almost twice the number of cars registered in 1922, incidentally. They buy fifty-cent dentifrice, package foods, fur coats, musical instruments and radios, silk stockings and jewelry. They have made the automobile and movies our leading industries. They travel and enjoy themselves, buy bonds, and still save more money than ever before. They keep your business and ours alive and growing. Your salesmen sell to the retailers that sell to them.

SUNDAY NEWS . . . 1,291,343

This is the largest circulation in America

THERE have been million circulations before—but never a Million like this! Some magazines have circulations in excess of a million and two million, but these circulations are scattered over the whole country. Some Sunday newspapers have circulations in excess of a million, but draw these circulations from territories comprising several states. But never before, in this country at least, has a daily newspaper attained a million circulation in one locality, in and around its own city. Consequently, The News Million represents the greatest concentration of circulation ever available to any advertiser! Of The News million, 95% is concentrated in New York City and suburbs. Less than 5% is outside the New York market.

Today, more than two of every five people who buy an English language newspaper in New York City are Daily News buyers. The News alone reaches at least every other family in New York. It covers the major part of the richest market in the world.

The News must be reckoned as a new and entirely unique business utility. In addition to the thorough coverage of its tremendous circulation, it affords the advertiser opportunity for more effective presentation of his message. The small thousand-agate-line page insures the highest visibility and greatest reader attention. The small paper, with definitely fixed advertising limits in every issue, assures less advertising competition. The small size, the convenience of handling and reading, the brevity of contents, the variety of makeup—all make this paper thoroughly read. There are no buried advertisements or poor positions or waste pages in The News. And the milline rate is by far the lowest in New York!

Adequate coverage, dense concentration, superior presentation, low cost—all in this one medium. Every advertiser in New York needs The News! Get the facts.

Drys Claim Decrease in Drunkenness and Charity Cases Since Dry Law Passed

Ten Comman ments because they are violated.

Although he was one of those who signed the statement last Saturday night in which the Anti-Saloon League refrained from criticizing General Andrews, Bishop Cannon testified today that replies so far received to 6,000 questionnaires he had sent out to church workers had recommended rigid enforcement and urged that the work be committed to those who believe that the prohibition law is a good law and can and should be enforced, and that enforcement officials get better pay.

These questionnaires also urged that whatever men necessary to enforce the law in any section should be provided for that section, that the Government appropriate whatever amount was necessary for enforcement and that the penalties be stricter for offenders.

It was the "New York sector," comprising New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, the Bishop declared, with support from Boston and Chicago, which caused the most trouble to enforcement officers. He said Mr. Buckner's figures of 60,000,000 gallons of alcohol being illegally diverted annually were "fantastic."

Mr. Smith, the representative of the Committee of One Thousand, was asked by Senator Reed if prominent figures of his organization, which included Julius Rosenwald, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and others, had liquor in their cellars. "If you can prove one has a drop in his cellar off the committee he goes in twenty-four hours," responded the witness.Senator Reed had an amusing time twitting Mr. Smith that Sears, Roebuck & Co., of which Mr. Rosenwald is President, advertised hip flasks in their catalogue.

Near the close of the afternoon session Senator Harreld, Acting Chairman of the committee and a bone dry, let it be known that the drys are complaining because of the rapid-fire cross-examination to which they are being subjected by Senator Reed.

Senator Harreld, who indicated his sympathy for the drys, said he was considering taking out time and charging it against the time used up by Senator Reed in his heckling of the dry witnesses.

"Each side will get twenty-four hours clear time if it takes all Summer," exclaimed Senator Harreld.

"I am agreeable to that," replied Senator Reed, "and I am about ready to take all Summer and thresh these things out and go to the bottom of them and not be cut off with half a hearing."

"I shall endeavor," Senator Harreld announced, "to keep the time hereafter."

"You can keep it any way you want to," Senator Reed retorted.

CANNON LAUDS DRY LAW.

Bishop Cannon, who was the first witness of the day, read a statement without interruption and was asked no questions when he completed his testimony. He announced that he had been elected by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as Chairman of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service.

The Methodist Church, he said, was the third largest Protestant denomination in the country, with a membership of more than 2,600,000, with more than 2,300,000 Sunday school scholars and with about 300,000 members of young people's societies.

"The Eighteenth, commonly called the prohibition amendment," Bishop Cannon read from his statement, "cannot be considered or understood apart from the legislation which preceded it. It is the high-water mark attained after seventy-five years of effort by the American people to reduce to a minimum the admitted evils from the traffic in intoxicating liquors. The one and the only purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment is, to quote the words of the Preamble to the Constitution, 'to promote the general welfare' by the restriction of the activities of the individual citizen in the manufacture, the sale, the transportation, the exportation and the importation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes.

"Intoxication is that condition in which a citizen has lost control of his physical, his intellectual and his moral powers—in short, of himself. The one and only purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment, therefore, is to promote the general welfare by prohibiting the traffic in that, which experience has demonstrated, does cause hundreds of thousands of citizens to lose control of themselves and to become, therefore, not only unfitted to perform properly the duties which they owe to the State, society at large and their families, but frequently also to become a menace and a public nuisance.

"The fundamental question, therefore, before this committee is whether the Eighteenth Amendment and the enforcement act, commonly called the Volstead law, do promote the general welfare. If not, will the legislation under consideration by this committee, if adopted, assist in that purpose?

Recalls Days of the Saloon.

"No proper answer can be given to this question without some consideration of previous conditions and of past liquor legislation. It is difficult for the younger generation to visualize, or indeed even to credit the actual conditions which existed in the good old days when men put their feet on the brass rail and blew the foam off the glass.

"1. In those days, great distilleries and breweries were running openly and legally, full blast, manufacturing hundreds of millions of gallons of intoxicants. Saloons running up to the tens of thousands (over 175,000 in all) were found on the prominent corners of every village, town and city, and intoxicants were sold and drunk publicly by men and women in hotels, high and low. Intoxicants were sold in city and country clubs and were served at practically all public dinners and banquets. To drink until one was a silly fool, or under the table, to be carried home or put to bed by others, was not only no disgrace, but a proper ending of a midnight spree.

"2. The liquor traffic practically dominated the political life of town, city, State and nation. Its heavy hand was felt in elections of mayors, members of City Councils, members of the police force, prosecuting attorneys, Judges on the bench, members of Legislatures, members of Congress, and it insisted upon being consulted even on the matter of Presidential nominations. No town or city ordnance, no State or Congressional legislation, which could possible affect in any way the moral betterment of the community, the diminution of the sale of intoxicants, or of opportunities for gambling in any of its forms, or restrictions upon red light districts could be considered without the active, and usually successful, opposition of the liquor traffic, acting through some agent or attorney of the State or National Liquor Dealers' Association.

Cites His Thirty Years' Battle.

"For thirty years I personally waged battle after battle with them in town, city, State and nation. The traffic had at its command all the forces of the underworld, with every ward-heeler and political pimp linked with men higher up in an ascending scale until the slimy trail led to the office of the boss of the city or State. The graft and corruption in connection with prohibition enforcement of today concerning which so much clamor is raised by the opponents of the prohibition law is but a drop in the bucket, compared with the graft and corruption which prevailed everywhere in the old saloon days. Concerning this condition, THE NEW YORK TIMES in an editorial utterance last year declared:

"'The politicians ought to know that the country adopted the prohibitory amendment because among other things there has been a corrupting partnership between the saloon and the political organizations. It was difficult, if not impossible, to enforce such regulatory laws concerning the liquor traffic as there were, because the saloon-keeper had a pull with the politicians, and was permitted to disregard the law as a reward for his assistance in election. The back room of the saloon was political headquarters and there was a time when the saloon was the voting place and the brewers and distillers subsidized political parties as the price to winking at the irregularities.'

"A later editorial in THE TIMES in August, 1925, declared:

"'A correspondent of The London Observer emphasizes as one of the most important results of prohibition here the present freedom of our politics from saloon or liquor influence and control. That the bootleggers are quite without power in some of our lower political circles could not be denied safely, but it is a petty power compared with that which the saloon-keeper of old exercised in practically every State, and nobody questions that the saloon is gone forever from the United States and nobody ventures to defend it or to demand its return.'

"To those opponents of prohibition who are denouncing it because of the corruption and graft in connection with the bootlegging traffic, we would commend a study of the horrible conditions in pre-prohibition days.

Emphasizes "Beer Drunkenness."

"3. In those days the saloon was the rendezvous, the harboring place, the recruiting station of vice and crime. Its allies were the gambling house and the brothel. Its back parlors and its wine rooms were the avenues to debauchery and ruin of multiplied thousands of women and girls. The number of boys and girls ruined by hip-pocket flasks are few indeed compared to the slaughter of the innocents in those days. The immorality of the present day arises more from other causes. The transit from the saloon to the house of ill-fame was easy and intoxicants could be found there when the saloon was closed.

"Nine-tenths of the saloons were beer saloons, the most of them controlled by the great breweries. They were absolutely lawless. They obeyed no restriction. The breweries paid for police protection, and if some violations were too flagrant the fines were paid, but the lawlessness continued. The greater part of the drunkenness was beer drunkenness.

"My college days were spent at a Methodist college in Virginia and a Presbyterian college at Princeton. The authorities of both institutions were opposed to drinking by the students, but there were saloons in both places, and, although the law of Virginia forbade the sale of liquor to minors or to students, I helped carry my drunken classmates to their rooms and put them to bed. They were drunk, disgustingly drunk, on beer bought through a runner of the saloons and there was far more drunkenness among the young people and among the college students in those days than there is today.

"I visited the homes of people in those days and saw husbands lying on the bed in a drunken stupor or so noisy and quarrelsome as to require the police. I saw wives and mothers, gaunt and hollow-eyed, weeping and despairing, working themselves to death to feed and care for their hungry, half-clothed, barefooted children.

Child's Funeral Attire Pawned.

"On one occasion the ladies of my church bought clothing and shoes and a coffin in which to bury a child who had died for lack of proper food and the next morning when I came for the funeral service the father had taken the clothing and shoes to the saloon-keeper and traded them for drink and was back in the house in a drunken rage."

"Those were some of the features of those days. Well may the opponents of prohibition assert and declare and asseverate that nobody wants the return of the saloons.

"But the question before your committee is, at bottom, the question of the return of the saloon. We are told that a rose by any other name will smell as sweet and a saloon by any other name will smell the same. The foul odor that hangs around the word 'saloon' was caused by just one thing, namely, the sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes.

"There is no evil odor attached to an ice cream saloon or a soft-drink saloon, because there is no evil result from the sale of those commodities, but the sale of intoxicants anywhere, under any conditions, produces the same evil results to a greater or less extent. The American people became convinced that the conditions to which I have referred above were the natural, inherent, necessary consequences of the traffic in intoxicants, and the legislation which has been adopted had for its purpose the elimination of those evils.

STEPS IN LIQUOR LAWS.

"4. The lawlessness of the liquor traffic compelled the adoption of national prohibition. Drawing upon my own experience in the State of Virginia for the last forty years, the steps in liquor legislation have been as follows. Forty years ago licenses were granted by the Judges of the court to applicants upon petition by a certain number of citizens who stated that the applicant was a man of good moral character and that the proposed place was a suitable and convenient place for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

"But the ever-present destructive, horrible results of the sale of intoxicants became increasingly unbearable. The people demanded and secured a local option law but not without exactly the same kind of opposition and denunciation from the liquor traffic and its friends which has been staged at this very hearing.

"The next step was a law enacted by the Legislature which prohibited the granting of a license in any community of less than 500 population unless the Judge was satisfied that the granting of such a license would not be contrary to the material or moral interests of the community.

"This law struck at the very root of the question involved, and be it said to the credit of the Virginia bench that it was not willing to declare that the sale of intoxicants was not contrary to the material and moral interests of the community. This law swept every saloon out of the villages and country districts and it worked so well that in four years it was extended to apply to communities of 1,000 and less.

"Then the country, the village and the small town people drove the liquor traffic out of the country districts, the villages, towns and small cities of the State, but the liquor traffic, refusing to recognize the rights of the citizens in the dry territory, entrenched itself in the larger cities of the commonwealth and endeavored in every possible way to flood the country districts with their prohibited goods.

Says Dispensary Plan Failed.

"The much vaunted Quebec system is not new in principle. It is practically the old dispensary system of South Carolina, and it was tried by a number of towns in Virginia. It resulted in the establishment of restaurants, so-called, located near the dispensary, the proprietors of which rented tables to purchasers of liquor at the dispensary and it was simply the transference of the place of drinking.

"Furthermore, the sale of intoxicants in packages, instead of by the drink, caused the purchase of such large quantities that the purchasers would frequently drink the liquor on their way home or carry it to their homes and have a drinking party. The system was a failure both in South Carolina and in Virginia as an aid to true temperance, and was abolished as every other form of the liquor traffic for its high crimes and misdemeanors.

"Finally realizing that they could not in any other way protect their communities, their children and their homes, the people adopted State-wide prohibition by popular vote, thus wiping out the traffic root and branch, but the liquor traffic utterly refused to recognize the rest of the people of Virginia to brand it as an outlaw and established liquor shipping houses, especially in Baltimore, which circularized the State, even boys and college students, with advertisements of liquor and by automobile, railroad and water craft carried prohibited intoxicants into Virginia.

"It was this utter refusal on the part of the liquor traffic to recognize the rights of the States to protect themselves from the liquor traffic which forced the adoption of national prohibition. Senator Bruce, Governor Ritchie, Governor Smith, Senator Edge and the other present-day advocates of the States to determine their liquors for themselves were not in evidence in those days, demanding that the rights of the dry States to protection from the liquor traffic of the wet States be respected.

"Indeed, none of the gentlemen who have appeared at this hearing, expressing such great concern as to the morality and sobriety of our people and their hatred of the abominable saloon, not even Mr. Brennan of Chicago, were prominent in those days in their efforts to protect the morals of the people by banishing the saloon, which they now all agree can never be permitted to return. It is hardly to be wondered at that the dry people of the nation hesitate to follow these present-day apostles of morality and sobriety, but prefer to remain in the ranks of those who recognized and secured the abolition of the admittedly horrible saloon.

Futile Congressional Measures.

"The effort was earnestly made to meet the situation by the adoption of the Webb-Kenyon bill and by what is known as the bone-dry Reed amendment, but as long as breweries, distilleries shipping houses and saloons were operating legally under the law of the States where located there was no possible way to curtail open, legal production, and the intoxicants once having been produced, and the wet States not only making no effort to pass any form of legislation which would curtail the outflow of intoxicants from their borders into dry territory but rejoicing in the increased revenues which came to the wet States from heavy license fees, their liquor, by hook or by crook, by automobile express, mail, freight, on railroad trains, on launches and steamers, leaked, indeed, they poured, into the dry territory.

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized that it was this lawlessness of the legalized liquor traffic in the wet States and the utter disregard by the wet States, not only of the opinions but of the rights of the people of the dry States, which not simply precipitated but compelled nation-wide prohibition. The clamorous outcry coming today from thirsty throats in these wet States that they be permitted to determine for themselves what shall be the legalized alcoholic content of beer and light wines, the solemn assertions made by these present-day States' rights advocates that they are perfectly willing that the dry States shall determine what shall be the alcoholic content of beverages sold within their borders, must face fairly and fully the outstanding facts of liquor legislation history.

"Where were those advocates of States' rights when the dry States were demanding the observance of their rights in the past?

"How can it be expected that the dry States will pay any attention to such appeals or have any confidence in such pledges? Past experience proves conclusively that the liquor traffic respects no pledges. It violates all laws, and it would be folly, even were it constitutional, which it clearly is not, for the dry States of the nation to agree to any such State control of alcoholic content.

Points to Other Law Violations.

"The fact that some men continually refuse to do their duty and continually infringe upon the rights of others is no reason for the repeal of regulations or laws which are helpful to the social order. There were over 100,000 violations of the Traffic laws in New York City alone last year, and a proportionate number throughout the country, resulting in about 25,000 deaths and 700,000 injuries. A very large proportion of these traffic violations arose from careless, headstrong or selfish chauffeurs who want to drive as they please, without restraint or without regard to the rights of others.

"New York City is stirred today by an investigation of outrageous graft in the handling of the milk supply of the city, in which it is charged that not only milk producers and dealers but city officials are involved. Such violations arise from the covetousness of those involved, who utterly disregard the health of others.

"Has any clamor arisen for the repeal of the laws indicated above, because they are persistently, wilfully and flagrantly violated?

"The question at issue, therefore, is not whether the prohibition law is observed and enforced universally. It is not whether there is an element of the population which defiantly declares, through Senator Bruce, that it will have its liquor legislation or not. It is not whether there are multiplied thousands or even so many millions of 115,000,000 of people of the United States who openly declare that they will gratify their appetites for intoxicants regardless of its effect upon the general welfare.

"Selfish individualism has always placed the gratification of its own appetites and desires above the general welfare, and society has registered its advances by its triumphs over the tyranny of selfish individualism.

TWO QUESTIONS AT ISSUE.

"Of course, no man is so foolish as to expect that the prohibition law will not be violated just as other laws are violated, but the first great question before this committee for settlement is not whether the prohibition law is observed and enforced, but whether the results obtained have demonstrated that the present prohibition law is a better method of promoting the general welfare than any method which has been tried heretofore. Are physical, economic and moral conditions better in the United States since the adoption of the prohibition law or are they worse?

"The second question is, Would any of the measures now before the committee, if enacted into law, be beneficial or detrimental to the best interests of the people as a whole?

"It is noteworthy that the testimony which has been presented before the committee by opponents of the present prohibition law has come almost entirely from persons living in what for convenience may be called the New York sector of the country, including the States of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, with some support from the City of Boston on the east and Chicago on the west.

"Two of these States, Maryland and New York, have utterly refused to pass any State enforcement law, or New York passed a law and then repealed it, and yet the very men in these States who are largely responsible for the failure to pass the enforcement law are the ones who are loudly and illogically denouncing the failure to enforce the law.

"Judged by any ordinary standards, these men do not want the law to be enforced, and how can they expect any one to be influenced by their clamor about liquor lawlessness in their communities.

"Some of the witnesses who testified concerning the lawlessness, drunkenness and immorality in the sections where they lived and among the people with whom they are acquainted made such sweeping statements that one is led to wonder what the people themselves who were thus characterized would say. One witness told of touring the country for two years, covering over 30,000 miles, and declared that nowhere did he find any sentiment in support of the Volstead act. One stated that the making of whisky in the home is becoming general, that 90 per cent. of the workingmen are either making wine, beer or whisky.

Denies Drunkenness Increases.

"Now, I am not here to attack the honesty and sincerity of any witness who has testified, but for myself I flatly deny that there are any such conditions in the sections of the country in which I travel, certainly among the people with whom I am brought in contact, either in business, social or religious matters, or among those people who come under my observation. Since the year 1894 I have been engaged in work which has compelled me to travel the greater part of my time.

"I have been specially interested in the study of social conditions all my life. From the time of my student days in Princeton, when I frequently spent my week ends in New York studying the condition in the Bowery and Water Street, I have rarely been in an city over night that I have not walked in various sections of those cities for from one to three hours at night, and as I rarely wear clerical clothes, I have not attracted any special attention.

"I have never seen in any of these cities such horrible conditions as have been described on the witness stand at these hearings, nor can I be made to believe without actual count that 90 per cent. of the laboring people of this country are violating the Constitution of the United States, as well as the obligations they owe to their own children by the manufacture of intoxicants in their homes.

"As an American citizen I repudiate these wholesale assertions as not applying to the great mass of our American people. Certainly they do not apply to the more than 21,000,000 Sunday school scholars, 5,000,000 members of young peoples' societies and over 30,000,000 church members of the Protestant churches.

Reduction in Smuggling.

"The advocates of changes in the prohibition law have declared that it was impossible to enfogce the prohibitioin law, because neither smuggling nor the diversion of alcohol for bootlegging purposes, nor illicit distilling can be prevented. Certainly these things cannot be absolutely, entirely prevented. But, General Andrews has stated that the smuggling has been so reduced that in his judgment not more than 5 or 10 per cent. of the amounts which originally were smuggled in is now being smuggled in.

"If all of it was smuggled into the United States it would have amounted to less than one-half pint per capita per annum for the whole country.

"Mr. Buckner estimated that the amount of alcohol diverted from legitimate purposes to bootlegging purposes would be approximately 60,000,000 gallons. But this was purely fantastic guesswork, and was more than five times as much as the estimate of the prohibition department. The basis of his calculation that there had been an increase of only 1,000,000 gallons per annum for the past five years in legitimate consumption is unwarranted.

"The number of automobiles in the country has increased from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 in the past six years, and the number of closed cars, which can be used in Winter with comfort, has increased from about 28 per cent. to 85 per cent., or 85 per cent of the entire number. People are using anti-freeze mixture who never used it before, and the amount allotted for that purpose is declared to be over 30,000,000 gallons, which is less than a gallon and a half per car per season.

"There is undoubtedly much illict distillation. There always has been. There were moonshiners all through the Southern mountains before prohibition, and the appetite for alcohol was not destroyed when the prohibitory law was passed, and as the Senator from Missouri has demonstrated from time to time before the committee, it is not very difficult to manufacture or expensive to buy some sort of a still; but here again, outside of the number actually captured by the prohibition officers all calculations are purely guesswork.

Quotes Census on Intoxication.

Bishop Cannon at this point filed the preliminary report of the census of prisoners for 1923 from the Department of Commerce of the United States, that in both 1910 and 1923 the commitments for drunkenness outnumbered those for every other offense, decreasing, however, from 170,914 in 1910 to 91,367 in 1923, which the census bulletin indicates, he said, making an allowance for an increase in population a ratio of 185.9 per cent. per hundred thousand of population in 1910, against 831.1 per cent. per hundred thousand in 1923, showing a decrease of 55.3 per cent. in convictions for drunkenness in 1923.

"I know," he continued, "there are many other tables presented on this question of intoxication, but I present this official bulletin of the United States Government as most reliable and most probably indicative of the tremendous effect which prohibition has had upon the convictions for drunkenness."

Bishop Cannon also submitted a table on juvenile delinquency compiled by the World Leagues Against Alcoholism under direction of Robert E. Corradini, from official records of New York City, Boston and Cook County, Illinois, which includes Chicago. The table for New York City showed these arraignments for juvenile delinquency in New York, from 1913 to 1924 as follows: 1913, 8,015; 1914, 7,898; 1915, 7,927; 1916, 5,970; 1917, 7,332; 1918, 7,036; 1919, 6,727; 1920, 5,831; 1921, 5,123; 1922, 4,872; 1923, 4,592, and 1924, 4,365. The table

POVERTY HERE DECREASES.

"I also present records showing the work done by the Children's Aid Society of New York, which indicate a shifting of program of the work of the society, indicating a decrease in purely charity work to an increase in constructive welfare work. For illustration, the number of families under the care of the society decreased from 2,026 in 1914 to 1,261 in 1925. The number of persons sheltered in lodging houses decreased from 6,319 in 1914 to 1,646 in 1925."

Bishop Cannon presented a table from the Children's Aid Society of New York, and stated that if pre-prohibition conditions prevailed the table would not show a decrease in deserted children and orphans placed in family homes, in children of parents assisted to go West and children in lodging houses, nor would it show an increase in children treated in dental clinics and in those benefited in free air funds.

He presented also a table which, he said, showed increased sobriety and decrease in commitments for intoxication (the figures coming from the Department of Correction of New York City). The table, he added, showed a decrease in these "using liquor moderately," and a great increase in those using "no liquor."

Tells of Church Questionnaire.

"In order," he said, "that I might be able to state to this committee the attitude of the people whom I represent, I decided to secure from them an expression of opinion upon certain important factors in the present situation. As Chairman of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service, I prepared and sent out a questionnaire to every minister and to every lay leader in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

"This questionnaire called for the following information:

"'Question 1—Did you favor the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment?

"'Question 2—With about how many people are you ordinarily in contact?

"'Question 3—Are home conditions better or worse since the adoption of prohibition (a) as to food, (b) clothing, (c) home comforts and conveniences, (d) increase in personal ownership of homes, (e) recreation and amusements, (f) school opportunities?

"'Question 4—Do you personally observe more or less drunkenness now than in the saloon days (a) in the home, (b) in public places, such as hotels, restaurants, places of amusement, streets, trains; (c) among young people of all classes, laborers, factory, clerks, stenographers, students, society?

"'Question 5—Would the sale of wine and beer make conditions better or worse in your community?

"'Question 6—Do you think wine and beer could be manufactured and distributed without the lawlessness and the corruption of the saloon days?

"'Question 7—Is there as much political graft and corruption today as when the saloon dominated town, city, State and national elections?

"'Question 8—If the law is not as well enforced in your community as it should be, what suggestions do you make to secure more effective enforcement?

"'Question 9—In the light of all the facts as you personally see them, not as newspapers or other persons report them, do you still favor prohibition?

"'Question 10—Is the Church in your community as active in its efforts to uphold the law and to conserve its benefits as it was to secure its enactment?'

6,000 Replies So Far Received.

"This questionnaire was not sent out until after these hearings began, but already more than 6,000 replies have been received, of which the following have been tabulated:

"Maryland, 54; Virginia, 510; North Carolina, 432; South Carolina, 262; Georgia, 435; Florida, 160; West Virginia, 236; Ohio, 2; Indiana, 2; Illinois, 54; Kentucky, 320; Tennessee, 565; Alabama, 336; Mississippi, 270; Louisiana, 164; Arkansas, 226; Missouri, 418; Nebraska, 1; Kansas, 6; Colorado, 11; Oklahoma, 164; Texas, 760; New Mexico, 26; Arizona, 16; California, 26; Oregon, 5; Washington, 1; Idaho, 2; Montana, 3; District of Columbia, 11.

"Of course, I should explain," continued Bishop Cannon, "but no doubt you understand that the Church with which I am connected does not operate very largely north of the Potomac or the Ohio.

"The answers to this questionnaire are coming on by every mail, and I shall ask permission of the committee to change these figures and insert the correct number after all answers have been received and properly tabulated. I think it proper to emphasize that the answers to the questions given above were made by pastors, presiding elders, educators, editors, correctional officers and Bishops plus lay leaders of the Church, which lay leaders are men chosen by the various congregations throughout Southern Methodism and best qualified to lead the congregations in carrying on the varied activities of the Church.

"I believe the men who have answered this questionnaire are the equal of any other similar number of men in this country in good, practical common sense, knowledge of human nature, knowledge of conditions in communities in which they live, genuine interest in the welfare of the people, fanatical integrity and personal superior character. If they are not patriotic citizens, if they do not love their country, if their sincerity cannot be trusted, I know of no men who are patriotic, sincere lovers of their country."

Reports Conditions Improved.

"Their testimony comes up to this committee not absolutely unanimous on every point, but practically so, for the replies received and tabulated up to this time, out of approximately 6,000 individual answers, all but three declared that home conditions are better since the adoption of prohibition, that food, clothing, comforts and conveniences are better, that there is an increase in personal ownership of homes, recreations and amusements and school opportunities.

"All but five declare they observe less drinking in the home, at public places and among young people than in the saloon days. All but ten declare the sale of wine and beer would make conditions worse in their community. All but ten declare they do not think wine and beer could be manufactured and distributed without the lawlessness and corruption of the saloon days, for, as many of them state, the sale and distribution of beer would either require beer parlors or saloons or would turn the home into a drinking place with the evil consequences attendant thereupon.

"All but six declare that there is not as much political graft and corruption today as when the saloon dominated city, State and national elections.

"All but nine declare that, in light of all the facts, as they personally see them, they do still favor national prohibition, and all but one of these declare that they prefer prohibition if it were effectively enforced.

"The very large majority state that in their judgment the churches have not been as active in their efforts to uphold the law and to conserve its benefits as they were to secure its enactment; because the tendency has been to think that now that the law had been passed it is the duty of the Government to make adequate appropriations, elect suitable officers and to prosecute offenders.

"The opinion is very generally expressed, that the present aggressive executives of the opponents of prohibition will stir the Church to a recognition of the necessity for greater activity in support of the law and of its effective enforcement.

More Enforcement Funds Urged.

"The suggestions made to secure more effective enforcement of the law are naturally somewhat varied, but there are few out of the entire number who do not insist upon certain things:

"First, that to secure effective enforcement the work must be committed to those who believe that the prohibition law is a good law, that it can and should be enforced as effectively as other laws of a similar character, such as the Narcotic Drug act, Income Tax law, the Mann act, &c.

"Second, it is also insisted that adequate salaries should be paid to secure such men as are qualified to enforce so important and difficult a law.

"Third, that whatever number of men is necessary to properly enforce the law in any section of the country should be provided for that section.

"Fourth, that the Government should appropriate whatever amount of money may be necessary to enforce the law.

Fifth, that more stringent penalties should be inflicted upon the violators of the law. If the Treasury Department considers it of vital importance to have sufficient men and money to enforce effectively the Income Tax law, which is purely a revenue measure, it is certainly of equal importance to enforce the prohibition law.

Less Drinking Among Students.

Lexington, Va., April 16, 1926.

Bishop James Cannon Jr., Washington, D. C.

My Dear Bishop Cannon: Answering your inquiry of April 15, I would most positively, as an individual and as the President of Washington and Lee, make the following definite statement:

My first acquaintance with Washington and Lee began in 1912, when I became its President, several years before Virginia adopted prohibition, although the town of Lexington had been freed of open saloons by a local prohibition law of the Town Council some years before.

Any statement that there is more drinking or more intoxication or a greater number of students guilty of intemperance at present than before the adoption of the prohibition amendment is so evidently untrue as to afford clear evidence of personal feeling or propaganda.

There is no question whatever in my mind, and I have unusual facilities for information and observation, that the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor is rapidly diminishing at Washington and Lee, in the amount consumed, in the frequency of cases of intemperance and in the number of students indulging in the habit, and that the present session is more free from cases of drinking or intoxication than any session in recent years.

I was told the other day by a member of the Faculty that the Mayor of Lexington told him that the police had not located or arrested a single case of intoxication since the opening of the session in September, the first time since he had been Mayor that such a remarkable record had been made, with 900 college students, rooming all over town.

Sincerely hoping that this definite statement of facts may be of some value in counteracting the manifold lies propagated by the wet element, I am,

Most cordially yours,
HENRY LOUIS SMITH,
President.

Christian Science Backs Dry Law.

When Bishop Cannon concluded his statement Philip King of Washington, the former Princeton football star of a quarter century ago, appeared for the Christian Science Board of Directors of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and presented this resolution adopted by them on April 15:

Whereas a determined effort is being made by the opponents of the prohibition law of the United States to invalidate the operation of that law and to legalize again the sale of intoxicating liquors in this country; be it

Resolved by the Board of Directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., That as citizens and as Christian Scientists we do hereby pledge our hearty support to the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and to the Federal enforcement law enacted under that amendment; and be it further

Resolved, That we denounce the endeavor to repeal that amendment or to modify in the direction of greater latitude the Volstead act as an effort to re-establish the traffic in alcoholic liquor and as a menace to the industrial, economic, social and moral welfare of the people of the United States.

Mr. King announced that he had many letters and telegrams from Christian Scientists and their churches throughout the country upholding the Eighteenth Amendment and protesting against a change in the Volstead law.

Senator Reed questioned if they could be introduced, under the rule, "unless we are to open the door to all telegrams," and finally Mr. King was permitted to file the names of the senders.

MRS. BOOLE NEXT HEARD.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, took the stand and submitted to the committee the preamble of her organization to show the nature of the association. This preamble read:

"We Christian women of this nation believe it our duty and high privilege under the providence of God to educate public opinion to the standard of total abstinence, purity, good citizenship, and respect for law, and to unite our efforts for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution prohibiting the beverage liquor traffic.

"That we may successfully prosecute this work and other forms of social service we adopt the following constitution and pledge.

"The pledge signed by all our members," said Mrs. Boole, follows:

"'I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to secure the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.'

"We are organized in local unions which, combined, form the county or district organizations, and then into State organizations, the State organizations forming the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union," she continued. "Our membership is, in round numbers, about 500,000 and we have local branches in about 10,000 communities throughout the country. I desire to speak in regard to all these bills.

"Witnesses have testified to conditions in large cities, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, and these three bills are proposed as a remedy," she said.

"The organizations sponsoring these bills were not among those who worked to put prohibition in the Constitution, nor have they put forth any efforts to make it a success. In fact, their continuous agitation for a change in the law has been a contributing factor to non-observance and to the public sentiment against enforcement. They propose 2.75 beer and 'liquors intoxicating in fact.' We believe (base propositions are an entering wedge for legislation for a larger alcoholic content and a part of strategy for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Dissents From Wet Testimony.

"You have listened to testimony of shocking conditions due to corruption of officials, and lack of enforcement, some of which suggested no remedy except a surrender to those who violate the law, while the propaganda of all these organizations is encouraging continued violation.

"Permit me to show another side of the picture, and propose that instead of lowering our standards we urge that the law be strengthened, and in that way notice be served on law violators that America expects her laws to be enforced and to be obeyed.

"The first immediate result of prohibition was a change in the status of the open saloon. Have we forgotten what it was? It was the centre of degeneracy in every community, the centre for the assembling of the worst element of society.

"The sale of intoxicating liquors was legal and the seller had the sanction of the Government. There were 507 distilleries, producing 268,000,000 gallons of distilled liquors, 130,000,000 gallons made into whisky, and 1,300 breweries, producing 2,000,000,000 gallons of beer. Now 400 cereal beverage manufacturers are making 160,000,000 gallons of near beer. Suppose all this near beer is in reality real beer. Who is supplying the other 1,840,000,000 gallons of beer that Americans used to drink?

"The closing of the open saloon with its doors swinging both ways, an everpresent invitation for all to drink—men, women and boys—is an outstanding fact, and no one wants it to return. It has resulted in better national health, children are born under better conditions, homes are better, and the mother is delivered from the fear of a drunken husband. There is better food. Savings banks deposits have increased, and many a man has a bank account today who had none in the days of the saloon.

"The increase in home-owning is another evidence that money wasted in drink is now used for the benefit of the family. Improved living conditions are noticeable in our former slum districts. The Bowery and Hell's Kitchen are transformed. Safety first campaigns on railroads and in the presence of the increasing number of automobiles are greatly strengthened by prohibition.

Demands Tighter Enforcement.

"The machinery of enforcement should be strengthened. Provision should be made for an adequate number of Judges to secure speedy trials. Adequate punishment should be meted out to violators of the law. There should be a sufficient number of inspectors to secure careful supervision of permits and a checking-up process to prevent leakage.

"The States should cooperate by enacting State codes fixing responsibility upon police authorities and using State courts in minor infractions of the law.

"Much testimony has been offered concerning the intolerable conditions in New York City and State. My home is there. We call attention to the fact that New York State has no State code and that the Governor of the State and the Mayor of New York City are both active opponents of prohibition and supporters of the movement to legalize the sale of wine and beer, but that, notwithstanding all the evidence here presented, there are officials who are doing their duty and thousands of good citizens who are obeying the law, and even New York is reaping some benefits from prohibition.

"We believe the Volstead act should be strengthened, not weakened. We are ready to render full support to the Goff bill, Senate 3,228, which is proposed for strengthening the national prohibition law."

Wrangle Over Letters.

Mrs. Boole offered a letter she had received from a former Governor of Maine, but after considerable discussion it was overruled. Immediately afterward there was a wrangle over a letter Mrs. Boole wished to present from Claude E. Connally, Commissioner of Labor from Oklahoma, on the ground that the "wet" side had given so much testimony to show laboring men opposed to prohibition. Senator Reed and Julien Codman, attorney for the "wets," objected, but it was finally admitted. It follows:

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 2, 1926.

My Dear Mrs. Boole:

As one who has been a laboring man up until fifteen years ago, at which time I came into this department, and having had the experience of spending a considerable part of my earnings as a laborer for liquor and in gambling, which the drinking of liquor leads to, I feel I am qualified to say whether or not prohibition is beneficial to the laboring man. Furthermore in my present work, part of which is the conducting of public employment offices, these offices deal mostly with the unfortunate classes of our citizens, the unemployed common laborers.

Prohibition has benefited these people in many ways, this conclusion being reached after personal observation and investigation. A poll of a representative crowd of unemployed in the public employment offices a short time ago revealed that they were about equally divided between those favoring strict enforcement of prohibition and those favoring the sale of light wines and beer. When it is considered that many of them were itinerants, I think this is remarkable as indicating how the laboring man feels about it.

Among the members of trade unions will be found perhaps a large majority that favor strict enforcement of the prohibition, and this in spite of the action of the American Federation of Labor, because they realize that prohibition has helped them economically, as they are now buying homes, automobiles, radios, musical instruments and giving their children the benefits of education.

There is no comparison between these conditions with those of poverty, misery and squalor that prevailed in the days of the saloon.

It has benefited the laboring man morally because, since he is now able to give consideration to his family, he has become a better citizen through being able to own his home and which has produced a willingness for him to accept responsibility in the community in which he is rearing his family. Prohibition has resulted in improved health conditions for the working man because the slum districts and other unsightly housing conditions have been largely done away with, and in their place have been established modern sanitary living conditions.

Yours most sincerely,
CLAUDE E. CONNALLY,
Commissioner of Labor.

Cross-Examined by Reed.

Senator Reed had been waiting for Mrs. Boole to conclude the letter. From this moment on, she was under his sharp cross-examination.

"Just one question before we pass this," he said, immediately. "This appears to be an unexpert opinion from a gentleman who has had considerable experience as a gambler and as a drinker, and spent his money that way. Do you know whether there are any slum districts in Oklahoma?"

"I do not," replied Mrs. Boole.

Q.—Senator Reed—There are no very large cities, you know that, in the State? A.—Yes, but I know nothing about the details of Oklahoma.

Senator Harreld—Well, this man has been connected with that department for about fifteen years.

Senator Reed—It seems that he went there then immediately after his gambling and drinking experience, because he says until fifteen years ago that he had spent a considerable part of his earnings in gambling, to which the liquor habit, drinking, leads. I beg pardon, it does not say that he was a drinker; he was just a gambler.

Mrs. Boole—Was that not about the time Oklahoma came into the country as dry, came into the galaxy of dry States?

Senator Reed—You do not know Mr. Connelly personally? A.—I do not.

Q.—You do not know whether he has quit gambling yet? A.—No, I do not know. That letter came to me entirely unsolicited. Probably was asked for by the President of the State of Oklahoma W. C. T. U.

Senator Harreld—Well, if you want to swear me I will be a witness that he is a good, law-abiding citizen.

Senator Reed—You sent letters to your members? A.—Not to our members. I simply asked the Presidents to send me any information as to the benefits of prohibition in their States, that I might get a bird's-eye view of the situation. I have many letters and testimony. I will not introduce. I have evidence from many people in many States that are dry, but will hold that in abeyance.

Q.—You said you think there ought to be a campaign of education. A.—Yes. Q.—Educating the people as to the evils of drink. Education along moral lines, the same you mean? A.—The emphasis of the W. C. T. U. is not education so much that presents the dark side of the picture, but education as to benefits of total abstinence and obedience to the law.

Q.—And of observing good morals? A.—Yes.

Q.—You think there is a large field for education along that line? A.—One would judge so.

Q.—You say the success of the law depends upon the spirit of the people. A.—Yes sir.

Q.—And you think if the American people should be educated and convinced they ought to obey this law, and they would all get back of it, we could have a real enforcement? A.—I think it would help mightily in enforcement.

Q.—And you think there is a good deal of a spirit—at present that needs to be educated along that line? A.—May I state with respect to the testimony presented here about conditions in certain States being so bad, I have in my file here testimony from a State where the law is well enforced that shows conditions are entirely different there, so I do think education plays a great part and our organization is engaged in a great educational campaign.

Admits Enforcement Is Lax.

"Well, aside from that State, which I am not asking about, what did you say about the general condition in the country today as to whether the law is being enforced?" Asked Senator Reed.

"It is not being enforced absolutely," Mrs. Boole replied. "There is lax enforcement in a great many places."

"Well, is it not worse than a lax enforcement?" Senator Reed persisted. "Is there not a perfectly horrible condition existing?"

"In some parts of the country," the witness answered.

"Well, is it not general?"

"I would not say it was general."

"Was the Woman's Christian Temperance Union," Senator Reed asked, "represented at a meeting that was held on Dec. 2, 1925, for the purpose of presenting some complaints with reference to the enforcement of prohibition to the President of the United States?"

"I was not President of the National W. C. T. U. at that time," Mrs. Boole answered.

Senator Reed—Who was the President? A.—Miss Anna A. Gordon.

Q.—Were you present at that meeting? A.—I was not.

Q.—Did you ever see the resolutions or the report that was forwarded to the President by the organization? A.—May I look at it? I do not think I ever did.

Q.—Did you ever hear of it? A.—No.

Q.—Did you not hear of this meeting here in Washington for the purpose of going before the President and presenting to him a petition for greater enforcement, better enforcement? A.—Do you mean last year, the 1st of December?

Q.—About the 2d of December, 1925. A.—I was here in Washington. I beg your pardon, I misunderstood.

Q.—Were you at that meeting? A.—I was at that meeting. I was here early in December and I did call upon the President and talked with him in regard to the situation, and assured him that the Women's Christian Temperance Union was ready to stand back of him in every effort for law enforcement.

Q.—Well, you submitted to the President a report at that time, did you not? A.—No, I did not submit a report to the President.

Q.—I mean the ladies that were with you there, the party that was with you, the group? A.—When I called on the President, Mrs. Yost and myself were the only two.

Q.—Well, now, here is a newspaper account. I want to see if this is right. By the way, did Mr. Clinton N. Howard draft this report to the President? A.—That is another group of which the national Woman's Christian Temperance Union is not a part.

Q.—Did your organization, of which you were a member, take any part? A.—Not in Mr. Howard's presentation of that subject.

Q.—Well, was your organization in any way associated with the organization that Mr. Howard represented? A.—The national W. C. T. U. was not represented.

Q.—You are in the national W. C. T. U.? A.—Yes.

Q.—What is Mr. Howard's group? A.—Mr. Howard is Chairman of a committee that is called—I believe they call themselves the United Committee for Prohibition Enforcement.

Q.—Well, now, is not your organization in that organization? A.—No, sir. The national Woman's Christian Temperance Union is a part of the Temperance Council, but not a part—one or two State Presidents, I think, were there, but the national Woman's Christian Temperance Union was not there.

Reed Reads from Report.

"Now I just want to get whatever the facts are," said Senator Reed. "This statement here, in the press under date of Dec. 2, states that—

"'Declaring that prohibition has become a national scandal, unequaled in its financial and political ramifications in the history of the United States, the United Committee for Prohibition Enforcement, made up of twenty-six prohibition organizations, today adopted a report calling upon President Coolidge to take action.' • • • Mr. Howard, who wrote the report adopted by the committee today, founded the Prohibition Union of Christian Men in 1890 and was its President.

"He is a trustee of the International Reform Bureau, the American Civic Reform Union, the New York Civic League, the National Temperance Society, of which he was Vice President, and other organizations interested in temperance. He had written a number of books and for years spoke from the lecture platform in behalf of a dry nation. He is a Baptist.'

"I am reading that for the text," Mr. Reed interposed.

"Among the twenty-six organizations making up the United Committee for prohibition enforcement, according to its literature, are the Association of Catholics favoring prohibition, headed by P. H. Callahan of Louisville; Disciples of Christ Board of Temperance and Social Welfare; the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, on which Clarence True Wilson is the representative; the National Temperance Society, the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Florida, Deleware and Pennsylvania."

"Are those organizations members of the General Women's Temperance Union?" Senator Reed asked.

"They are affiliated" said Mrs. Boole, "with tthe National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but I am speaking this morning for the policy of the national organization. I happen to know that since that occasion two of these State Presidents have withdrawn from connection with that committee, and I think it is possible the third has also withdrawn."

"So does that mean that these branches of your organization are now repudiating the action of the organization that was headed by Mr. Howard," Senator Reed asked.

"Yes," the witness replied.

Mrs. Boole Holds Steadfast.

This was the point where Senator Reed and Mrs. Boole clashed sharply. The Senator was very determined in his examination, but Mrs. Boole held her ground equally as determinedly.

"And your organization, repudiates the action taken by Mr. Howard and his committee?" Senator Reed asked.

"It has never come before us. We are not a part of it," was the answer.

Q.—You have taken no action about it? A.—We have not.

Q.—But the branches of your organization that belonged to the Howard organization have been withdrawing from his organization. A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know why? A.—Yes, they do not approve the publicity in regard to it, and were not in sympathy with some of the statements made.

"What publicity?" Senator Reed demanded. "Do they not approve of that Mr. Howard sent out?"

"Well," replied Mrs. Boole, "I could not go into details about that, but the whole tenor of that report. I know about that. I know of the statement issued by Mr. Howard, after that statement was given publicity on a letterhead that contained the names of these organizations, some of these organizations were not present when the statement was prepared, and they did not want to be put in in that way."

Senator Reed—Do you repudiate the statement as untrue that was made by Mr. Howard to the President? A.—It has never come before our National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Senator Reed—No, but I am asking what you say about it, if you repudiate it as untrue? A.—I do not like the word "repudiate," and I do not know whether, without having the article in hand, my right to attempt to answer that question.

Senator Walsh—I think it is unfair to ask a lady to point out what is untrue.

Senator Reed—The lady states that two or three subordinate branches of her organization withdrew in accordance with statements made by Mr. Howard's organization. Now, I am asking if she challenges the truthfulness of that statement. She has previously stated that she has seen the article.

Senator Walsh—Why should the lady be asked to say whether a certain statement, for which she was in no way responsible whatever, is either true or untrue?

Senator Reed—Because she has given her opinions here in regard to these very questions, and if those particular opinions conflict with what she has stated, or if they are in accord with it, I have the right to ask this question in order to get her viewpoint.

Senator Walsh—A witness upon the stand in court would not be permitted by the Judge to state whether a statement made by some one else was true or untrue.

Senator Reed—But they would certainly be asked whether they agreed with it or did not agree with it in any court that I have practised law before, and I have tried many law suits myself.

Senator Harreld—The ruling of the chair is you can ask the question, but that the witness doesn't have to answer.

Senator Reed—Or, well if any one wants to stand on his constitutional rights here before this sub-committee, all right. But, she has not declined to answer. She can answer now or not as she desires. She is able to take care of herself and has shown that she is a woman of high intelligence.

Mrs. Boole—In making partial answer I will say the National at its national convention in Detroit, adopted a policy showing our attitude toward the whole law enforcement proposition. General Andrews had been appointed, and we said we would stand back of the President in every effort for enforcement. Therefore that article does not represent the attitude of the National.

Q.—Does this article in any way undertake to withdraw the support of the President, General Andrews or anybody else in the enforcement of the law? A.—Well, I think it would be better to ask somebody who belongs to that group than to ask me. I am not a member of that group.

Q.—You just spoke your position. A.—But I am not in that group.

Mrs. Boole Declines to Answer.

Senator Reed then continued reading the article to the effect that in a report to President Coolidge Dec. 2, 1925, twenty-six organizations submitted a report to the President to the effect that there was little improvement between the old license system and "present nullification," that the country was being flooded with poisonous liquor, and that the 'American people will not long tolerate the present spurious kind of prohibition.'"

"Do you agree with those statements?" asked Senator Reed.

"I decline to answer that question," said Mrs. Boole firmly. "I want to say, however: Why should you refuse to admit testimony I have here from reputable sources as to the value of prohibition, and still have introduced a document there that has not been sworn to either?"

Senator Reed—I am not introducing the document, but merely asking, do you agree with these statements?

Senator Harreld—I do not think witness has to answer that question.

Senator Reed—Would it shed light on the opinions witness has expressed?

Senator Harreld—She has given her own opinions unbiased and this man to whom you refer has given his opinions. The public may draw their own conclusions.

Senator Reed—Very well. I am asking if witness agrees with these opinions or statements of fact. I can ask that question without the document before me, or I can ask it with the document before me. Do I now understand that the lady declines to answer?

Senator Harreld—The Chair rules that she has already.

Senator Reed—The Chair rules she does not have to answer?

Senator Harreld—The Chair rules that the witness has already said she is in accord with the policy adopted by the national organization and stands squarely behind that policy. I think that is about the substance of her answer, and I will say that that is a legitimate and proper answer to the question.

Senator Reed—You say the W. C. T. U. stands back of the law, is that your answer?

Senator Harreld—I did not say that. I said her position as stated was she stood behind the policy adopted by her national organization.

Senator Reed—If she is head of the organization, and comes here to testify, she comes as any other witness.

Senator Harreld—She has not testified about the statement to which you are referring. She is your witness on that point.

Senator Reed—All right, I will make her my witness. But she has expressed certain opinions which she had a right to express in regard to enforcement of prohibition and its benefits. I now ask her a leading question: Will you state, if you please, whether you agree to the statement of facts in that paper?

Senator Harreld—I say it is not fair to ask her that question and she may answer or not, as she sees fit.

Senator Reed—All right.

Senator Harreld—Does the witness decline to answer?

Mrs. Boole—I decline to answer, because it is a statement made by another group.

Senator Reed—You do not want to commit yourself whether those statements made as facts are in very truth facts?

Mrs. Boole—I say that the national had a policy, and our policy is a constructive policy, and this statement as read is the statement of another group, and that members of that group should be called upon to state whether it represents their views.

QUERIED ON HEALTH DATA.

"Well, suppose," said Senator Reed, "we had an association of brewers here and that they said the country under a wet policy did not have crime and the Senator from Oklahoma, who is a dry, were to ask them if it was not a fact there had been a great deal more drinking under the wet policy than now, do you think it would be a perfectly proper answer for them to make that the policy of their association is that that is not a fact and therefore they will not testify about it?"

"Oh, well," Senator Harreld commented. But Senator Reed said, "That is just where you are standing."

Senator Harreld—I do not care to argue it. That is wholly unnecessary.

Senator Reed—I see that the question is embarrassing both to the Chairman and to the witness.

Mrs. Boole—Oh, no.

Senator Harreld—I do not care to be drawn into a controversy of that sort, for I say it is manifestly unfair, after the witness has stated the policy on which she stands is so and so, then to try to put into her mouth words of some other person who represents a different organization.

Senator Reed—I am not putting it into her mouth, but asking whether these facts are in very truth facts, but we will pass on.

Q.—Mrs. Boole, do you know it to be a fact that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company keep statistics showing health conditions and that organization's policy holders are largely what are called industrial workers, and it has some 17,000,000 policy holders? A.—I have seen a statement to that effect.

Q.—Have you seen the figures of that organization showing that in the last year and particularly the last three months there has been an increased death from alcoholism? A.—I have not seen those figures.

Q.—Have you seen the figures of other insurance companies kept for the purpose of keeping track of health conditions? A.—I have not examined them.

Q.—So the statements you made here in regard to health conditions are not based upon statements of organizations that have made it a business to actually know the state of health conditions of large numbers of people. A.—We all know, Senator, the death rate has been decreasing in later years. We all know that.

Q.—Do you know that the death rate from alcoholism has been increasing in the last three months to an alarming extent in this country? A.—That is possibly true and there has been a great lack of enforcement within a few months.

Q.—Do you know the prohibition department seized last year 172,600 stills? A.—I have heard it.

Q.—Do you know of any condition prior to prohibition where there was any such number of stills as? I have no data running in private houses, most of them? You will agree with me that that was not true, will you not? A.—Yes, that was not true.

Q.—I am putting these questions to you, not in antagonistic spirit—for the only antagonism at all existing is between the Senator from Oklahoma and myself, when I can get him out of the atmosphere of prohibition we can go right along together.

Senator Harreld—Especially regarding the World Court.

Senator Reed—That is a bright spot on your escutheon. Now Mrs. Boole, I am not talking about whether the law can or cannot be enforced, but about conditions. Do you think it makes for the moral advancement of the family to have liquor manufactured in the home? A.—Why, of course, it does not, Senator Reed.

Q.—Do not you think it very detrimental to little children to see liquor manufactured at home? A.—Yes, but Senator—

Q.—Now, that is a fact, is it not? A.—Yes. But I want to say—

Q.—Very well. Now, I will ask you— A.—Let me make an explanation.

Q.—I will in just a moment. I just want to get a few facts here. A.—Well I want to say—

Reed Disavows Backing "Booze."

"I am going to let you have every opportunity to make your explanation," Senator Reed said. "You are entitled to it and you will have every courtesy. We may not agree on the method to be employed to accomplish the result, but we may be entirely in accord with the desired results. If anybody thinks I am an advocate of booze or intemperance, they are very badly mistaken. I say now that once I had something to do with enforcement of these laws and the wet element complained all the time, twenty-four hours in the day."

"I see that you were trained right," Mrs. Moole said. "Your mother was a member of the W. C. T. U.?"

"No, she was not," Senator Reed replied.

"I though she was," said Mrs. Boole.

"But she was a Presbyterian, which was the next thing," Senator Reed added, to which Mrs. Boole said: "I thought she was a member of the W. C. T. U."

"Not to my knowledge," replied the Senator.

"But I think she was."

Resuming, Senator Reed asked: "If it is true that in 172,600 homes the prohibition enforcement officers have found stills, and nearly all of them in the homes, or a great majority of them, and that they have probably not gotten more than one out of ten that exists, which would mean 1,720,600 stills, nearly all of them in the homes, do you not think that is absolutely a terrible condition?"

Mrs. Boole assented and started to add something, but Senator Reed continued:

"Well, if that is true it is a terrible condition, is it not?"

"It is a terrible condition, but may I say just a word?" was the answer.

"Just a minute," said the Senator, "and I will let you say what you want. But I want to get some facts in consecutive order."

"All right," Mrs. Boole said, "but I object to that."

Senator Reed—I will give the fullest opportunity. I do not want to involve a categorical line of questions with explanations.

Senator Harreld—I think she should be allowed to explain an answer when she makes it.

Senator Reed—Just let me alone for a minute, if you please, and you can have the witness all to yourself, Mrs. Boole. Is it not worse to have this liquor manufactured in the homes, in the presence of little children, than outside the home, where, at least, even if the children see it drunk afterward, they would not see it made and participate in the making?

Mrs. Boole—I must confess that I deny your premise, that all these stills are making liquor in the presence of little children.

Witness Parries the Question.

"Well, all right," Senator Reed remarked, "you can make whatever statement you like. But let me assume my premise. I am not asking you to say that these are facts, but let me assume them to be facts for the purpose of my question, and we will have to trust to other evidence as to that.

"But is it not worse," continued Senator Reed, "and let us go back to my original question, to have more than a million stills running, nearly all of them in American homes, and the liquor being there manufactured, necessarily in the presence of children to some extent at least, than it would be to have the liquor made outside, even though it was carried to the home, and even though it was drunk in the presence of children?

"Now, I put that question to you as a woman who has devoted a large part of her life in an effort to stop, to minimize if possible, to stop the use of liquor if possible, and build up the morals of the community, as your resolution which you read to us or your declaration of principles stated."

"I do not think I have to decide as between two conditions stated by you," Mrs. Boole stated.

Q.—Oh, yes, because we have two. You do not have to decide it, of coure, but—

A.—You ask me which I think the better, if it is better to do as bad as—

Q.—Which of the two is the more valuable condition in your judgment. Do you object to giving me the benefit of your judgment, wisdom and experience on that matter? A.—You see, Senator, you make a condition about the liquor being manufactured in homes all over the country. My own experience, going back over a number of years in this work, is that the most of the homes where people are violating the law, there are no children, and furthermore, that the liquor is generally made at night, that the manufacture is carried on at night instead of in day time, so that if there are children, they are not present when it is being manufactured. And, then again, many of these stills you speak of are captured after very short use. They are not all in operation at the same time.

Q.—Exactly, and I agree with that. But, I am asking you to assume my premise because we have some evidence here tending to sustain that, and I have the right and I want to get your view of it. A.—I see.

Witness Draws Applause.

"Is it better," Senator Reed insisted, "to have something over one million stills in the United States in the home, or it is better to have the liquor manufactured outside and carried into the home; which of the two is the more tolerable condition?"

"I decline to answer as a choice between the two," rejoined Mrs. Boole, "because our organization is against the legal manufacture of liquor whether it be in the homes or in distilleries. We stand for enforcement of law. The whole purpose of our organization is to keep the home from having anything to do with the liquor traffic in any way."

The drys in the room burst into applause over Mrs. Boole's statement.

"That applause is the most convincing argument that we could possibly have," remarked Senator Reed.

"It changes our minds up here almost instantly we hear it. But the public official," he continued, "does have to try and enact these laws as he thinks will best make for public morality, and so we do have to make a choice as between different alternatives. And if we were convinced that the present law could not be enforced, that it resulted in putting stills and breweries into the homes in vast numbers, we would have to take cognizance of that fact."

"On the other hand," continued Senator Reed, "if we were convinced that the present condition has improved the morals and health of the community, we might take that view of it, and so I am asking you out of the abundance of your experience, to tell me which you think is the more destructive to morals, the manufacture of liquor in a vast number of homes or the manufacture of liquor by regular dealers, and that being the source of supply, which do you think is the least destructive to the morals?"

"I do not think she ought to answer that," Senator Harreld put in.

"As between the two evils, and both are evils, I do not think I have to accept either of them," Mrs. Boole responded. "Please do not applaud," she said to the audience as handclaps sounded.

Points to Increasing Dry Law Convictions

"Representing a movement that in its attitude toward the drink question has never known a hesitating moment, which makes total abstinence one of its conditions of membership; which by reason of clean hands has undisputed right to speak its convictions and voice its testimony, and on behalf of mothers who toiled from dawn to midnight to earn bread for the children of fathers who passed over the bar the money that should have spread their table; on behalf of boys whom drunken parents have robbed of every privilege of youth; on behalf of the new born who have come into the world with their systems saturated with alcohol; on behalf of little girls who have been forced to lives of shame before they reached their teens to earn money for parents reduced lower than the beasts by thirst for liquor; on behalf of former drunkards and inebriates, who since prohibition, have found their manhood and are contributing to American citizenship; on behalf of every right thinking man who recognizes his obligation to contend for all legislation that safeguards the young, that delivers from temptation the matured and inspires the human heart to all that is highest and noblest, I earnestly entreat that no stain of modification or nullification be permitted to tarnish this most righteous and beneficent law.

"Before all the world the United States has lifted the standard. Never before the world must that standard be lowered or withdrawn.

"The type that once abounded is no more. An old time 'Boozers Day' when the derelict was gathered in and fed strong coffee primarily to a direct attack puon his soul, is an impossibility because the class whose drinking proclivities entitled it to the appellation boozer, is rapidly becoming extinct.

Big Drop in Alcohol Cases.

"Before prohibition our records show that 50 per cent. of the cases that came to us were drink addicts, and in many instances alcoholism was the cause of the downfall. Since prohibition only 1 per cent. of the cases that come to us are traceable to that cause.

"There has always been a marked affinity between the drink and the degradation of womanhood. In the old days the house of shame and the saloon were often under one roof. The wine room seduction once so frequent is now a thing of the past. Let us bless the law that has thrown this protection around the path of American womanhood, for higher than the probity and nobility of its womanhood our great nation can never rise.

"My Executive officer for settlement work tells me that children in our day nurseries and kindergartens come to us noticeably better fed, better clothed, healthier, happier and more teachable. She tells me that applications for relief have been reduced 50 per cent. and that where in former times help was frequently appealed from families whose babies had fallen from fire escapes or infants smothered on account of drunken parents, not one such case has come under our notice for years. Salvation Army settlement workers in our great cities bear out the truth of Federal returns as to the low pauperism ratio.

"How ridiculous to say the saloon shall not come back, but let us have light wines and beer. Every one knows that wherever light wine and beer are sold, even if it should be on the doorstep of a rabbit hutch, there will be the saloon. Under the old license law about 90 per cent. of the intoxicating drink that was consumed was wine and beer, and a beer drunkard makes a most terrible spectacle.

"To debit the prohibition law with the onus and the shame of all the violations that abound is tantamount to charging that the holy commandments of God are responsible for the wickedness of mankind. The suggestion is preposterous.

"The thing this law is designed to deal with is essentially evil, as witnesseth the fruitage of a thousand years, and now that ungainsayable testimony is deplorably confirmed by the horror of the present anarchy, while the perpetuators and the profiteers have the temerity to attempt a defense and a justification, and many good citizens are deceived by the flattery."

F. B. SMITH TESTIFIES.

The next witness was Fred B. Smith, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, Chairman of the Citizens Committee of 1,000 for Law Enforcement. The purpose of this committee, Mr. Smith explained, is to arouse public sentiment throughout the nation in favor of better observance and enforcement of all laws, no matter what their nature.

The committee, Mr. Smith said, has a membership of 1,177 persons, representing every section of the United States, of all religious faiths, as well as all shades of political faith.

"We believe," he added, "the supreme issue before the American people is the preservation of society and legal methods of procedure as it relates to the observance and enforcement of all laws, municipal, State and Federal."

The committee, continued Mr. Smith, looks on the liquor traffic as an "outlaw system" which has always been essentially "disrespecters of law and encouragers of law violation."

Mr. Smith said the Honorary Chairmen of the committee of 1,000 are Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard; Colonel Alvin Owsley, former Commander of the American Legion, and Julius Rosenwald of Chicago.

"Who are on this committee?" Senator Reed asked.

"Eleven hundred and seventy-seven men and women," Mr. Smith replied.

"Have most of these people been for a long time prohibitionists?"

"There are some I can answer 'yes' for. There are a considerable number who are not prohibitioists now."

"Their position is that they are not prohibitionists, they are not in favor of the law, but they want it enforced. That is, these particular people who are not prohibitionists?"

"Yes, they do."

"How many of these people whose names are on this document, this letterhead, have plenty of liquor in their own cellars?" Senator Reed asked.

"I have never been in one of their cellars, I think. I will state—may I state a thing perfectly friendly?"

"Yes, we are all friendly. I am just trying to get at the facts," said Senator Reed.

"If any one can prove to me," Mr. Smith declared, "that any one of them has a drop in his cellar his name will go off of that in twenty-four hours. I do not believe any one of them has a drop. I cannot say they have not, though, but if any one will prove to me that any one of them has, his name will disappear from there in twenty-four hours."

Questioned on Flask Sales.

"Now let us take Mr. Julius Rosenwald," said Senator Reed. "He is connected with Sears, Roebuck. You know that concern regularly advertises pocket flasks, do you not, and sells them in large quantities?"

"Are pocket flasks illegal?" witness asked.

"No, not necessarily," said Senator Reed, "but did you ever know a large sale of pocket flasks to carry perfume in? Or water? You know perfectly well that pocket flasks are sold in large quantities in this country for the purpose of enabling people to carry liquor in their pockets, do you not?"

"That is right," Mr. Smith replied.

Senator Reed: Now is not the concern of which Mr. Rosenwald is a large owner engaged in the sale of those flasks?

A.—I did not know that.

Q.—Well, will you fire him out if you find it to be true?

A.—I don't know that we could simply for selling flasks. We could if we found liquor in his cellar.

Q.—Has this concern a set of by-laws that enables it to?

A.—This committee?

Q.—Yes.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it an organized or unorganized body?

A.—It is corporate.

Q.—Where is it incorporated?

A.—Let me see, no sir, I withdraw that. It has an association and by-laws under which it operates.

Q.—But it is not an incorporated body?

A.—Can I ask my secretary that question?

Q.—I should think you would know.

A.—Are we or are we not incorporated? (Addressing his secretary). No, we are not. I thought not, but I did not want to be too sure.

Mr. Smith said the committee was organized in October, 1923, and had always been supported by voluntary contributions. He added that Orrin R. Judd of the Irving National Bank is Treasurer. The amount collected since the committee was organized Mr. Smith estimated at $150,000. the amount collected in 1925. He said the committee is still collecting.

Gives Names of Contributors.

"Who are your principal contributors?" Senator Reed inquired.

Mr. Smith replied the contributors were James N. Jarvey, James H. Post, Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Colonel Hayward, Julius Rosenwald, John D. Rockefeller Jr., Edward W. Hazen and Ralph Harlson of Pittsburgh. He said he was giving the names from memory and a few might be missing. In answer to a question he again replied that Judge Gary had never given a penny to the committee.

"A few moments ago," said Senator Reed, "I asked particularly about Mr. Rosenwald. I do not want any intimation to go from that that I think Mr. Rosenwald is a bad man, or that he is any more connected with liquor than anybody else. I do not want any reflection on Mr. Rosenwald. I do not mean that I state that for the record. Are you prepared to say none of these other people whose names are on this letterhead do not have liquors of their own, either in their cellars or places of safekeeping.

"No, I do not say that. Maybe some of them have," replied Mr. Smith, "for I do not know. But I say if it is proved to me they have their names won't stay there twenty-four hours."

"By the way, how much money has Mr. Rockefeller contributed to this temperance organization?" Mr. Reed asked. "Less than $10,000," Mr. Smith replied.

Senator Reed asked whether Mr. Smith's organization wants the law changed to punish the man who receives a drink.

"Our committee has frequently expressed the wish that the law should make the man who possesses illegal liquor as guilty as the man who sells it," replied the witness.

He added that his committee desired only changes that would make the dry law more severe.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT HEARD.

Mrs. Mabel C. Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition prosecutions, followed Mr. Smith. She announced she had no statement to make and came prepared to answer questions only.

Senator Goff of West Virginia, a "bone-dry," thereupon said he would ask the questions.

"Can you state generally," Senator Goff asked, "whether prohibition is being enforced?"

"The statistics," replied Mrs. Willebrandt, "speak for themselves and they show an increasing effectiveness in the matter of enforcement. For example, in 1922 we had 24,000 convictions and collected in fines $4,000,000. In 1923 the convictions totaled 34,000 and the fines collected amounted to $5,800,000. In 1924 the convictions totaled $7,000 and the fines collected amounted to $7,487,000. For 1925 the convictions were 38,000 in number and the fines totaled $7,681,000.

"Again the jail sentences are interesting. In 1923 these sentences averaged twenty-one days. In 1924 the average was thirty-four days, while in 1925 the average had increased to forty-three days. In 1922 the sentences imposed aggregated 1,052 years, in 1923 they totaled 2,003 years, in 1924 the aggregate was 3,496 years and in 1925 the total was 4,569 years. I, therefore, say the law is becoming increasingly effective."

Mrs. Willebrandt cited the fact that the greatest centres of violations are the big cities. The proportion of violations, however, she explained, varies for cities in different parts of the country.

"Where the States do not cooperate in enforcement the problem," continued Mrs. Willebrandt, "is of major proportions, and where the States cooperate the difficulties the Government has to contend with are correspondingly smaller. New York, the State, is doing nothing and in some border States they do less."

"Has the question of the abolishment of trial by jury in prohibition cases been brought to your attention?" Senator Reed asked.

"Only in so far as it comes up in injunction cases," Mrs. Wilebrandt replied.

"As for the Department of Justice," she continued, "it has taken no stand in the matter. I mean no stand in the matter of abolishing jury trials. It recognizes that when a defendant demands a trial by jury he is entitled to it and he gets it.

Says Law Can Be Enforced.

"Do you know of the Government ever having prosecuted any one for taking a drink?" Senator Reed inquired.

"I have never know of a single case of which the Government sat on a single drink," Mrs. Willebrandt replied, and the crowd laughed.

"Well, Mrs. Willebrandt, can this law be enforced or not?"

"It can," she answered.

"I would say," she continued, "that this committee can get the best picture as to whether the law can be enforced or not by looking into places where it has been enforced, instead of places where admittedly it has been very poorly enforced."

"One remedy for the situation is more Federal Judges, and I believe a bill providing ten additional Judges now pending before the committee would, if passed, greatly assist in relieving the congestion now existing in some of the districts. Also, I suggest it would be helpful if the Judges were empowered to impose penalties commensurate with the gravity of the offense. I think the law might be modified to the extent of giving it some teeth. It might also relieve the congestion if inferior Federal courts were created, but I do not think that desirable for it would mean a loss of Federal judicial dignity."

"Is there any way to compel State authorities to cooperate with you?" asked Senator Harreld.

"No," replied Mrs. Willebrandt, "and yet you will have a bad spot as long as a State fails to do its duty."

Mrs. Willebrandt cited cases in which the States have aided in prosecuting prohibition involving bribery and other major offenses. Such cases she said had been brought to trial and conviction had in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Savannah and other cities.

"Do you know how many search warrants have been issued in these prohibition cases?" Senator Reed asked.

"There is no way in the world I can answer that question," said Mrs. Willebrandt.

"These warrants are issued by United States Commissioners and they do not come to us."

Question of Buyers' Guilt.

"I want to ask you a question of substantive law," said Senator Goff, "which is whether under the Volstead act the offering a drink of illegal liquor is a violation of law. Have you ever considered the question whether the person who received the offer of illegal liquor was guilty of illegal possession prior to consumption of liquor?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Willebrandt, "that question has been up in a few cases. Some, I remember, rose in the Southern District of Virginia. I believe the Commissioner held the person who had made arrangements to receive the liquor had received the offer and negotiated, in other words, the sale; he had been a party to the bargain, and when it was carried before the Judge he sustained the Commissioner's ruling. It has not reached the higher court yet."

Replying to Senator Harreld, Mrs. Willebrandt said:

"The question has very frequently come up whether purchaser and seller may be jointly held. This instance is the only time I know of that it has been held that when you charge him under the Volstead act he can be held. It has frequently come up, and we have frequently prosecuted purchaser and seller when the evidence is clear, indicating a common design between the two to carry on the business, one to supply the market or absorb the product, the other to furnish it.

"I have never had it come to my attention where, just in an isolated drink instance, the Federal Government has sat upon that kind of a question. But it has come up where the bootlegger X makes arrangement with a number of persons to buy from time to time liquor of him, X, and he furnishes it from time to time. And all the evidence we have is the fact that A, B, C, D and E are patrons of X, but we do have the evidence showing that they are habitual patrons of X. Then they have been prosecuted as co-conspirators with X and the prosecutions sustained.

Overcoming State Laxity.

"Have you any suggestions of how to make the States and municipalities, whose duty it is co-ordinately with the Federal enforcement officers to enforce this law, no doubt about that—have you any suggestions about how you can make those people do their duty under the law?" asked Senator Harreld.

"In a State where there is an active law—and now that you want to know that I am dropping New York out of consideration, where there is no law, and there is inactivity on the part of State officers or city officers," replied Mrs. Willebrandt, "I would just point to what the Federal Government has done as my answer. Take Gary, Indiana. There was a case there where the Federal Government collected evidence against and apprehended some fifty major law violators. That included the Mayor, police officers, a couple of City Judges, a number of enforcement agents; they were prosecuted, tried and are serving terms in Federal penitentiaries."

"Under the Conspiracy act?" asked Senator Reed.

"Yes; that was under the Conspiracy act," she replied. "Not all of it, No. That is why I was slow in making reply. It is hard for me, after some year, to visualize what these indictments were for. Conspiracy was one of the charges in that case, but if I remember accurately bribery was the major one.

"That was bribery connected with the Federal administration of law, of course?" asked Mr. Reed.

"No; it was bribing State officers and Federal officers," replied the witness.

Senator Reed—And that came under the general charge? A.—If I remember accurately, there was a general conspiracy charge, but there also was a specific bribery indictment against some of them.

Senator Harreld—Is the law now adequate for that sort of prosecution? A.—Yes.

Q.—Or would you suggest any further legislation? A.—Yes, I would say it is adequate. We ought not to use the conspiracy statute, or it would be better to plead a cause without at resort to the conspiracy statute in many cases. It is hard to get evidence in a conspiracy case and usually easier to get evidence of the violation of a substantive law. Consequently, if the Volstead act had a scale of sentencing, or of punishment, I would say that would fit crimes of that kind.

Q.—What do you mean by crimes of that kind? Failure to enforce the act? A.—No; bribery and the active and passive condoning of the keeping of saloons and blind pigs and the collection of money for allowing them to stay open. You asked me if the Federal Government could do certain things and I told you about some of it. Now, at Gary, Ind., and you want the place, there was a notable improvement in what the city and State did after the Federal Government finished that case. Then take Cincinnati, Ohio which is another one, where seventy police officers, Federal enforcement agents and State enforcement agents were prosecuted for grafting and violating the liquor law.

Senator Reed—They were prosecuted under the Conspiracy act also! A.—The most of them were.

Senator Harreld—Now, as to all these instances where persons were prosecuted for accepting bribes and things of that sort, where it is the specific duty of State officers to enforce the law, is there any way by which they can be prosecuted in event they refuse to do so, like in New York? A.—No, there is no way I know of.

Q.—Could we pass a law to meet a situation of that kind? Would a law of that kind be constitutional? A.—Well, it is not for me to give you a curbstone opinion with respect to anything so serious as that.

Senator Goff—Would not misprison of felony statute apply in these cases where State officials know the Federal law is being violated and due solely to their inactivity, neglecting to make known to the proper Federal officers there is failure to enforce the law? A.—It probably would, but you will appreciate it is difficult to acquire evidence under circumstances of that kind.

Urges Search Warrant Training.

Senator Reed asked if Mrs. Willebrandt remembered having said in a conversation with him that the Government was having a lot of cases dismissed because of use of improper search warrants by prohibition agents. But she could not remember the incident and insisted that Senator Reed must have misunderstood her.

"Possibly we referred to two cases," said Mrs. Willebrandt.

"No, we were discussing," Senator Reed replied, "whether enforcement ought not to be under the Department of Justice, and you said, as I recall it, that it at least should have supervision; and, in this connection, you referred to search warrants and named a certain district."

"It may have been," said Mrs. Willebrandt, "that we recalled groups of certain cases in which improper search warrants were used. That situation is usually due to untrained agents who, like a bird dog, can bark but does not set.

"I think the agents," added Mrs. Willebrandt, "should be trained in the fundamentals of search-warrant law."

Senator Reed asked for the number of prohibition acquittals in the Federal courts since prohibition became law. Since 1921, replied Mrs. Willebrandt, it has been 7,414. She did not know the number of cases dismissed, but said she would supply the information from her files.

"Is it not true that most of the stills seized are in the so-called dry States?" Senator Reed asked.

"I do not think so," Mrs. Willebrandt replied.

"Well, Senator Bruce submitted statistics that 70 per cent. of all the stills seized in 1925 were in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, the two Carolinas, Virginia, Tennessee and Texas."

"That indicates good enforcement in those States," replied Mrs. Willebrandt.

"Is it not a fact that 172,000 stills were seized in 1925?"

"I do not know."

"By the way," said Senator Reed, "has the Anti-Saloon League ever interfered in the enforcement of this law?"

"I think I know to what you refer," Mrs. Willebrandt replied.

She said the case was that of Heber Nations of St. Louis. Senator Reed smiled and said: "He is the man."

Nations was a State official and what was known as a "beverage inspector" of the State of Missouri. Superintendent Post of the Anti-Saloon League, it was charged, had directed a propaganda in defense of Nations prior to the trial, and Senator Reed quoted a press statement in which Mrs. Willebrandt denounced the league for doing the very thing it denounced others for doing.

"Did not the league also send this literature to the Federal Judge in that case?" asked Senator Reed.

"I do not know," witness replied.

"Do you know that Post was subsequently promoted to the staff of Howard Russell, the founder of the Anti-Saloon League?" asked Senator Reed.

"No, I did not know that."

"What was the result of the trial?" asked Senator Harreld.

"A conviction," replied Mrs. Willebrandt.

Veering to enforcement in the States, Mrs. Willebrandt named Kansas and Idaho as States in which enforcement is a success.

Senator Reed thought her entirely too optimistic as to Kansas, in which she gave it as her opinion that the stolen automobile cases outnumber the liquor cases. He suggested smilingly that she make a further study of those two Commonwealths in so far as the liquor situation was concerned.

Mrs. Willebrandt said that, in her opinion, a vast army is not necessary to make the Volstead law effective.

The committee at this point adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

OUR SHIP SEARCH RIGHT TO EXTEND TO BAHAMAS

British Plan to Aid Us in War on Liquor Out of 'Friendship' Lauded and Hit in England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—The British Government plans to permit United States revenue cutters to visit the Bahamas and, in conjunction with British ships, to search for supplies of contraband liquors that are destined for the United States. This privilege is designed to assist the American authorities in their fight against liquor smuggling.

Under an existing treaty Britain recognizes an American right to search British vessels for liquor cargoes with in an hour's steaming of the United States shore. The recognition under this treaty of the right of United States revenue cutters to enter Bahaman ports to institute inquiries regarding suspected ships is explained here as due to the "traditional friendship" between the two countries.

It is denied that any new agreement is contemplated and stated that the new concession is only an experimental measure which can be terminated at will.

This explanation, however, it is said is designed more to offset criticism at home than to indicate probable course of action. Such criticism is not lacking.

"Considerable astonishment," says The Morning Post, "is expressed outside official circles at the lengths to which 'traditional friendship' can go."

"It is only fair," says a writer in The Star, "that the Bahaman Government should take measures against liquor smugglers who obtain clearance papers by fraud, but I am not sure that the measures against the rum-runners which have been outlined do not exceed what the comity of English-speaking nations requires.

"We do not find that the comity of English-speaking nations is ever referred to when our debt to the United States is talked of. Mr. Baldwin's visit to America will long be remembered in Wall Street circles as an instance of 'fool Englishmen,' and this seems another case of a like kind.

The Daily News, which is under the same ownership as The Star, observes, on the other hand:

"The present action of the British Government is far less than the requirements of justice and propriety, but it at least shows a praiseworthy anxiety to avoid the responsibility for a thoroughly disgraceful traffic.

"If the boot were on the other leg and American citizens were using some islands off our own coasts which happened to be American territory as a base for smuggling on a most gigantic scale, one can imagine the outcry there would be in this country."

REFUSES TO INTERFERE IN LIQUOR TAX CASE

But Supreme Court Will Review California 12-Mile Limit Convictions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The Supreme Court today in the case of Israel Seligman of New York dismissed for want of jurisdiction his suit in which he sought to test the right of the Government to tax those employed in the illegal manufacture and sale of liquor prohibited by the Volstead act. The Government is trying to sell the property of Seligman to cover what he is alleged to owe.

Seligman's contention was that such taxes could not be legally assessed and that the effect of the prohibition act was to repeal them.

The Supreme Court's refusal to interfere will result in the sale of the property by the Government as planned.

In another case arising under the dry laws the Supreme Court agreed to review proceedings instituted in California involving the construction of the so-called "twelve-mile limit" established under the liquor treaty negotiated with Great Britain.

George Ford and others were convicted in the Federal courts of California of violations of the Prohibition law, it being alleged that the liquor captured in this case was placed aboard a vessel in Canada. The men were taken into custody near the Farallon Islands. They challenged the authority of the Federal courts to try a person for offenses committed outside of the jurisdiction of the United States and beyond the jurisdiction defined by the British treaty.

The Supreme Court, in an order announced by Chief Justice Taft, decided to assume jurisdiction and review the judgment of the lower court.

ANDREWS DEMANDS STILL MORE POWER

SEEKS MORE ARMY OFFICERS

Plans Going to England May 15 to Discuss Allowing Rum-Chasers In West Indies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Assured of the stanch support of Secretary Mellon, regardless of any protests that the drys may make against him because of his testimony about beer before the Senate Committee, General Lincoln C. Andrews, head of the Federal prohibition, enforcement agencies, called on Congress today for legislation granting additional powers to him.

These are in addition to the seven amendments to the Volstead act recently requested by General Andrews, which included the issuance of warrants to search private dwelling houses where distilling apparatus is used or set up for the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor. He asked for authority to search American vessels outside the twelve-mile limit; to retain control over vessels seized as rum-runners which now are free under bond and may resume rum running pending final disposition of their cases, and authority to negotiate reciprocal agreements with other countries, making it unlawful for any person to introduce into the other country merchandise which is contraband there. The latter provision, he believes, would go far toward checking smuggling from Canada.

Wants Broader Treaty Powers.

That a broadening of the treaty powers between the United States and Great Britain which would permit American rum chasers to invade the waters and ports of the West Indies in an effort to smash the rum running trade would be sought was also stated by General Andrews, and it is possible that the General and agents of the State Department will go to England about May 15 to discuss the subject.

Secretary Mellon was asked today if the usefulness of General Andrews, in his opinion, "had been destroyed," as a result of his testimony before the Senate Committee.

"Oh, no," Secretary Mellon replied.

He added that he saw nothing wrong in what General Andrews said before the committee and that the testimony could no justly be interpreted as placing the General or the department on record for modification. As Mr. Mellon saw the situation, General Andrews had been asked simply whether he thought distribution of a non-intoxicating beer under Government control would be helpful in prohibition enforcement work and had stated what he thought to be the fact.

General Andrews, it was pointed out, far from seeking a weakening of the enforcement laws, was doing his utmost to bring about strict enforcement and was asking Congress for additional powers which he felt would make his work more effective against all classes of law violators.

Powers Sought by General Andrews.

General Andrews sent the following letter to the Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee outlining additional changes in the law which he said would extend his powers:

My dear Mr. Chairman:

There are certain provisions which, if enacted into law, would be most helpful to us in the enforcement of the national prohibition laws. I take the liberty of bringing them to your attention with a request that they be given consideration by your committee.

For your greater convenience we have placed them in concrete form and we will greatly appreciate it if your committee will give consideration to these matters, which we consider important to law enforcement, and will then recommend, for enactment by Congress, such laws as they deem most proper to effect these ends.

(1) There appears to be no law which definitely gives the Coast Guard the right of search and examination of American vessels beyond the four leagues' limit. Inasmuch as American vessels in coastwise trade often carry contraband liquor with a view to smuggling it into the United States, there should be no question of the right of our Coast Guard to board and examine these ships anywhere. We therefore request that this right be written into the law and made unequivocal.

(2) In order to stop smuggling by small boats bringing liquor from hovering ships outside our jurisdiction, we should have more complete control of this practice, and for this purpose it is proposed to provide that collectors and customs may refuse to award a number to any boat when it is evident, from its construction, &c., that it is to be used in this business. Today collectors are required to give numbers to boats that have been armored and so built that it is perfectly evident that rum-running is their only possible purpose.

Bonding of Seized Vessels.

3. Under the existing act of March 3, 1925, relative to the bonding of seized vessels, these rum-running boats are immediately bonded after capture and very often returned to the rum-running business. It has happened that the same boat has been captured and bonded again four and five times before court action has been reached and the vessel disposed of. In order to keep these boats out of the rum-running business after they have been once captured, and in order to supply boats for use in executing the prohibition laws, we request that this act of March 3, 1925, be amended so that the boat may be kept in the custody of the United States after it has been captured.

4. The Treasury Department is in possession of 158 surplus Liberty motors, and arrangements have been discussed with the manufacturers of high-power motor boats by which, without further expense to Government, an exchange can be effected of these surplus Liberty motors for complete speed boats ready for use; and the possession of such boats will be of great value to us in stopping smuggling. I therefore ask that tis exchange be authorized by law.

Reciprocity on Contraband.

5. The department is justified in believing that agreements may be entered into with friendly nations by which each nation makes it unlawful for any person to introduce into the other country merchandise which is contraband or restricted in that country. This must always be a reciprocal agreement. We are anxious that the United States shall have a law forbidding such importation into other nations which have similar laws regarding importation into the United States. This will give us a sound basis for negotiation and expedite the consummation of such agreements, and will do more to bring about the elimination of the smuggling of liquor, narcotics and aliens than will anything else that we now know of.

Employment of Retired Officers.

6. We find it particularly desirable to employ retired military officers as men in law enforcement work. Their long years of training in an atmosphere of 100 per cent. protection of the interests of the Government establishes a habit of mind and character particularly beneficial to the Government in the kind of work which law enforcement requires. A decision of the Comptroller General makes it impossible to employ these officers unless they have been retired for physical disability, or unless their retired pay be less than $2,500 a year.

Inasmuch as this retired pay may be considered as a compensation only for work already done, and is in reality a pension rather than a compensation for present or future services, it seems reasonable that these officers and men be made available for appointment to other governmental positions where their experience and character will be of great benefit to the Government. We therefore request that such law will be enacted as will make it possible to employ them and are proposing the amendment to Section 2 of the Act of July 31, 1894, which will make this possible.

BAPTISTS DENOUNCE CHURCH'S CHARGE

Prove or Retract Assertions Made at Liquor Inquiry, Clergy Here Demand.

HEARINGS CALLED UNFAIR

Reed's Method of Cross-Examination Criticized—Catholics Blamed for Mexican Upheaval.

A resolution protesting against a statement of Samuel Harden Church, President of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh, made last week before the Senate Committee investigating prohibition, that the Baptist Church had organized the Lord's Day Alliance and was "moving Heaven and earth to wipe out by civil statute every ounce of pastime and pleasure of the toiling masses," was adopted unanimously yesterday at a meeting of the Conference of Baptist Ministers of Greater New York in the Madison Avenue Baptist Church. The resolution also protested against the further statement of President Church that the Baptist Church was "among those rushing forward to control the Government through organized pressure."

Whereas, in a verbatim report, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of April 16, of the hearing on prohibition before the subcommittee of the United State Senate Committee on Judiciary, Samuel Harden Church, President of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh, is credited with the following statement, made under oath: "Other churches are rushing forward to control the Government through organized pressure. The Baptist Church has organized the Lord's Day Alliance, and under the guidance of the Rev. Harry W. Bowlby, is moving Heaven and earth to wipe out by civil statutes every ounce of pastime and pleasure of those weary and toiling masses who more and more are looking to Sunday as a day of healthful recreation and happy exercises"; and

Whereas, this false statement, sent broadcast as sworn testimony, tends to bring a great denomination into derision and contempt in the minds of the people at large, misled by the high position of the man making it; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Conference of Baptist Ministers of Greater New York respectfully call the matter to the attention of the trustees of Carnegie Institute, and request them in simple justice to obtain from President Church either proof of the truth of his statement or a public retraction.

The resolution was adopted with but little discussion. One of the seventy-five ministers present said, however, that it should not be construed as a reflection on the Lord's Day Alliance.

Dr. Grose attacked the methods of the Senate committee in conducting the prohibition hearing. Senator Reed of Missouri, he said, was very unfair in his manner of taking up an unwarranted length of time in cross-examining the dry witnesses, as well as in refusing to hold a meeting on Thursday so that fifty delegates from the Federal Council of Churches might attend.

A discussion on the religious crisis in Mexico took up the major part of the meeting. Dr. Frederick Smith, an officer of the Baptist Missionary Society, declared that the political activities of the Roman Catholic Church in Mexico was the real cause of the action taken against them by the Government. There was no prejudice against the Protestant Churches, he said, which were looked upon with respect by the authorities.

"The present religious upheaval," he declared, "is not an attempt at religious persecution, but merely an effort to enforce the Constitution, which says that all religious teachers must be Mexicans and that all church property must be owned by the State. It also declares that religion must not be taught in primary schools. In the minds of the Mexicans, Roman Catholicism is always associated with revolution. There is indeed some ground for this feeling, for the Roman Catholic Church from the time of Maximilian has been openly behind radical changes in government.

"The Roman Catholic system seeks to be a political one, and the church gatherings are regarded as being held for the purpose of plotting against the existing Government. The authorities are tolerant and liberal, and at first merely told the foreign priests to stop teaching religion. Only when they failed to desist did the Government have recourse to the constitutional provision for deporting them as 'undesirables.'"

TWO MEN FAST 45 DAYS IN GLASS CASE IN BERLIN

Police Move to Stop Epidemic of Hunger Stunts for Money-Making Purposes.

BERLIN, April 19.—The world's record for fasting is now in the hands of Max Fastello and a man known as Harry, who this afternoon were carried from their glass cage, where they had been sealed up and foodless for forty-five days, thus breaking by one day the record recently made by Herr Jolly.

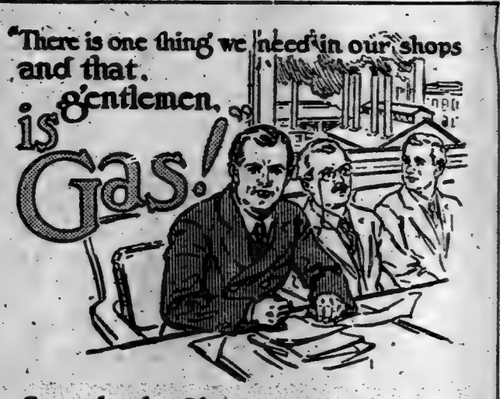
This form of indoor sport, which people are willing to pay money to see and which has caused scores of the feminine sex to burst forth with Springtime poems and leapyear proposals, will soon be history, since the police have forbidden any one to miss meals and collect money for exhibition. Several more persons in various parts of Berlin already had been sealed up when the police order was issued, however, and these will be allowed to continue their fast.

Among them is a girl who believes she can hold out at least thirty days. Her cage is surrounded by many suitors who would prefer a wife who does not bother about food, just as the cages of the men meal missers are haunted by girls who want a husband who cares little for cooking. In Eden a faster who believed he could beat the record even though bound in chains was removed to a padded cell after sixteen days.

Fastello and Harry do not state the amount of their receipts, since the huge sum obtained by Jolly got very adverse press criticism.

Town Breaks Drunkenness Record.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., April 19.—The greatest number of arrests for drunkenness ever recorded here was made over the last week-end. Fifty men were arrested. When arraigned before Police Recorder Pickersgill today they all were fined or sent to the workhouse. After disposing of the cases, Recorder Pickersgill said: "God bless prohibition! Isn't it a wonderful thing?"



So spoke the Chairman of the Board.

"During the past year," he said, "we have spent more money on labor, capital improvements and operating expenses than ever before in our history. I cannot see that production has advanced an inch."

And Then He Learned About Gas

GAS reduces labor costs, because it can be automatically controlled as to temperature.

GAS reduces fuel costs, because it can be turned on or off as needed.

GAS reduces manufacturing costs, because it eliminates uncertainty and guesswork in the application of heat.

GAS reduces overhead, because it requires no storage facilities.

SMITH NAMES BOYS' WEEK.

Sets Aside May 1 to May 8 for State Observance.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 19.—Declaring that the boy is the world's greatest asset, Governor Smith issued a proclamation today setting aside the week from May 1 to May 8 as National Boys' Week. May 1 will be Boys' Loyalty Day, and the Governor urged school authorities, churches, employers of boys and all organizations interested in boy welfare to help make the week a success.

"Youth," the Governor wrote, "is the structure upon which the future rests. That structure will be strong or weak as we develop the spirit of loyalty and devotion in the youth of the nation. This is a responsibility and an obligation on each generation, and it is well for the State as a whole to think for at least one week in terms of the boy, his needs and his future, for his future is the future of the world."

The Governor said that since its initiation in 1920 the observance of Boys' Week had steadily increased in favor until the movement had spread to practically all of the large cities of the world.

CITY WILL PRESERVE OLD BILLOP HOUSE

Landmark at Tottenville, S. I., Was Scene of Peace Conference in '76—Given by Realty Co.

President John A. Lynch of Richmond Borough announced last night that he had accepted on behalf of the city the historic old Billop house, which stands on an acre of ground about eighty feet west of Hylan Boulevard, Tottenville, S. I. The house was built in 1668.

It was offered to the city for preservation by the Harmon National Realty Company of Staten Island. It was constructed of fieldstone by Christopher Billop, owner of many acres when Staten Island was country land. The building is two-storied and contains six rooms.

In the Billop house the first peace conference on American soil was held. It was convened by Lord Howe after the Battle of Long Island to prepare terms that would be acceptable to the Americans. The Continental Congress, then in session at Philadelphia, appointed Benjamin Franklin, John Quincy Adams and Edward Rutledge as peace commissioners. They entered into conference with Lord Howe and his aids on Sept. 11, 1776. The conference was inconclusive, owing to the insistence of the Americans that the only terms they would consider were ones which would guarantee full freedom to the colonies.

It was Franklin who suggested the use of the Billop mansion as a meeting place. Before the city formally assumes title, action of the Board of Estimate will be necessary.

FRIDIGER CASE QUASHED.

Former Lawyer Clear of Perjury Charge in Rendigs Trial.

Judge Mancuso, in General Sessions yesterday, dismissed a perjury indictment returned in June, 1924, against Louis Fridiger, formerly a lawyer, as a result of Fridiger's testimony at the perjury trial of Charles W. Rendigs, one of the jurors in the first trial of Edward M. Fuller on grand larceny indictment in connection with the failure of the brokerage firm of Fuller & McGee.

District Attorney Banton did not oppose Fridiger's request for the quashing of the indictment. Hugo Wintner, as Assistant District Attorney at the trial of Rendigs, before resigning as a prosecutor expressed the opinion that the cases against Fridiger rested on "an oath against an oath."

'ABIE'S IRISH ROSE' PIRATED, SHE SAYS

Anne Nichols Asks $3,000,000 From Producers of Movie, 'The Cohens and Kellys.'

DEMANDS ALL THE PROFITS

Action Is Filed Against Universal Pictures, Carl Laemmle and Pollard, Director.

Alleging damages to the extent of $3,000,000 through showings of the motion picture "The Cohens and Kellys," Anne Nichols, author of "Abie's Irish Rose," filed suit in the United States District Court yesterday against the Universal Pictures Corporation of the United States, Carl Laemmle, its President, and Harry Pollard, director of "The Cohens and Kellys." In addition to damages, Miss Nichols demands an injunction against further showings of the picture and an accounting of all profits which have been made on it throughout the United States.

Miss Nichols sets forth in her affidavit that, while "The Cohens and Kellys" purports to be an adaptation from a play called "Two Blocks Away," it is actually "a complete steal" from her "Abie's Irish Rose." Just how complete, she attempts to show as follows:

"The Cohens and Kellys' contains only one or two episodes taken from 'Two Blocks Away,' but does contain the underlying idea, emotional theme, personification of characters, crucible or background, emotional conflicts, complications, crisis, climax, the derivative situations or episodes, the incidental detail, construction and such picture scenes as visualized by and through the vehicle of a motion picture, the organic structure of 'Abie's Irish Rose.'

"'The Cohens and Kellys' contains but a modicum of the play 'Two Blocks Away,' but it was and is intended to be, with certain minor exceptions, a complete steal, piracy and infringement of complainant's play, 'Abie's Irish Rose.'"

The defendants have extracted and continue to extract large profits from the exploitation of the said picture, and are damaging the complainant in the use and value of her property in the sum of $3,000,000."

Miss Nichols, in her complaint, says that prior to Nov. 17, 1924, she composed and wrote "Abie's Irish Rose" and copyrighted it Nov. 21, 1924, with the result that she became the sole owner and proprietor of all dramatic and motion picture rights in the play for a period of twenty-eight years.

While Miss Nichols does not mention the sum of $3,000,000 in her demands, but merely in the preamble of her complaint, she does demand that an accounting be made to her of all public performances at which the picture has been shown, and also petitions that every cent of the profits made at each of these performances be turned over to her. In addition she asks that she be paid damages, the sum of which she does not name in her demands, but which, to cover the losses she alleges, would be $3,000,000.

The plaintiff alleges that the value of her copyright privileges is largely dependent upon her possession of the motion picture rights and that if the defendants are permitted to continue their alleged violation of those rights she will be irreparably damaged.

DEBUT BY MARIA VERDA.

Soprano Displays a Voice of Sweetness at Aeolian Hall Recital.

Mme. Maria Verda, soprano, gave her first New York recital at Aeolian Hall last evening. Her program included songs in Italian, German, French and English. She displayed a voice of natural sweetness in Salvator Rosa's "Star Vicino." The timbre, however, was not quite so pleasing when she essayed the more dramatic phrases of a Mozart Aria from "Don Giovanni." It was more pleasing to hear her in a simpler air, "Komm Wir Wandeln," by Cornelius, when the intrinsic quality of her voice again had an opportunity of making itself felt. Mme. Verda was greatly assisted by the presence of Richard Hageman at the piano.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Iolanthe" in Superb Revival.

IOLANTHE: OR, THE PEER AND THE PERI, a comic opera in two acts. Words by W. S. Gilbert, music by Arthur Sullivan, settings and costumes by Woodman Thompson, dances by Louise Clifford, staged and produced by Winthrop Ames. At the Plymouth Theatre.

The Lord Chancellor ..... Ernest Lawford
Earl of Mountararat ..... John Barclay
Earl Tolloller ..... J. Humbird Duffey
Private Willis ..... William G. Harlan

The Train-Bearer ..... Bert Prival
Queen of the Fairies ..... Vera Ross
Iolanthe ..... Adele Sanderson

If the genius of Gilbert and Sullivan succeeded in rendering quite simple the complicated embroidery of their comic operas, the genius of Winthrop Ames has wrought nothing less perfect in the revival of "Iolanthe," mounted last evening at the Plymouth. His superb production has blended all the details of this piece, all its various moods and all its mechanism, into a simple, responsive instrument, no less airy in its imagination than the book or the music. Excellent singing voices find the beauties in the songs; an excellent comedian, Mr. Lawford, plays the "highly susceptible Chancellor" in the exact, proper spirit; and the choruses of fairies and "peers of high estate" communicate their joined comedy in no less worthy a manner. Against charming scenery, and to the tempi of a well-conducted orchestra, all these elements are perfectly joined in a shapely performance. In short, the opera is expressed as nimbly and as buoyantly as it was written. Last evening the audience received the various numbers and scenes with the highest enthusiasm, applauding and recalling the singers as often as time would permit, and cheering persistently at the close of the first act.

As a director Mr. Ames's chief virtue is the symmetry of his production. For none of its elements predominates; the singing does not surpass the acting in excellence, nor does the scenic investiture prove more elaborate than the expression. Matching creative art with creative interpretation, he has molded the material well. And in "Iolanthe" he has an opera responsive to this sort of sensitive treatment. However subacidulous Gilbert's comedy may be, with its jibes at the House of Lords and its intellectual prowess, and the guardsman's philosophy about the wisdom of Nature in creating every baby a little Liberal or a little Conservative—however satiric this comedy may be, "Iolanthe" has also moments of the most affecting sentiment and volatile imagination. Consider the lyric beauty of an Arcadian shepherdess in love with an Arcadian shepherd who is half fairy and half mortal. The convention would do credit to an Elizabethan bard. Consider, moreover, the star dust that Gilbert shakes down in his fairy scenes. Indeed, they are not "from Andersen's library," as the Lord Chancellor so coarsely supposes. On the contrary, they are Irish. All these varied facets of "Iolanthe" Mr. Ames turns toward the audience.

Sung by a chorus that obviously takes delight in its duties, the fairy scenes came off daintily with not a little spirit and emotion. The dancing catches the light motives of the opening numbers and the female voices keep the music sweet. After the preliminary business has been accomplished it is good to see how gracefully the performance swings to the stiff comedy of the > —peers of highest station,

> Paragons of legislation,
> Pillars of the British nation!

who march solemnly, with sumptuous robes and brilliant coronets, to the "Tantantara! ting! boom!" of the percussion. Although Mr. Lawford's singing voice may not enjoy the suppleness of Sullivan's music, who expects a singer in the part of the Lord Chancellor? Certainly no one did last evening. It is sufficient that Mr. Lawford skips about the stage facetiously, looks very, very grave indeed, purses his lips and speaks his lines with the precise inflections of their comedy. And he delivers the thoroughly impossible song beginning "When you're lying awake with a dismal headache, and repose is tabooed by anxiety" with a clarity and a flourish that bespeak the rarest talent. Surrounded by such a group of bearded and monocled peers as were never seen before. Mr. Lawford's comedy flows marvelously well.

Although all the women fit nicely into the scheme of the current revival, Miss Bennett combines best the qualities of singing and acting. As Phyllis she sings her lyrics charmingly and, with the exception of one number, in good tone; and she also communicates the devotion and the quick temper of the ward in chancery. Miss Sanderson voices Iolanthe beautifully and enacts most gracefully the part of this fairy mother, "tripping hither, tripping whither." In the minor parts of fairies of less conspicuous station Miss Reece, Miss Sterling and Miss Langlen do well.

Mr. Williams's agreeable voice, no less than his facility as an actor, go into the making of a splendid Strephon. Tall and absurdly stately, Mr. Barclay is admirable as the Earl of Mountararat. Beside him Mr. Duffey is short enough to be likewise amusing as Earl Tolloller. But Mr. Ames is not reduced to principals for the best expression of his revival. All the subordinate devices of a clownish train-bearer, a scarlet-clad brass band with an imposing director and a private in the Grenadier Guards who, being under strict discipline, can release his emotions only by revolving around and around with his rifle stiffly at his shoulder—all these minor devices serve as the finish to Mr. Ames's production, and reveal him as a director who exploits his medium thoroughly. His revival may "blow the trumpets," and "bang the brasses" in his own praise more effectively than the most glowing newspaper comment.

OUSTED FROM PLAY, ACTRESS SEES PLOT

Justine Johnstone Seeks to Stay Producer of "Hush Money" and Two Others.

SAYS MONEY WAS OFFERED

Charges "Conspirators" Sought to Give Understudy Role—Manager Attacks Her Acting.

Justine Johnstone, actress, filed an injunction suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to prevent Charles K. Gordon, producer of "Hush Money," in which she starred; Miss Denise Moore, her former understudy who supplanted her in the part, and Hiram Bloomingdale, of the department store firm, from carrying on an alleged conspiracy to have Miss Moore replace her.

Miss Johnstone alleges that she was engaged to appear in "Hush Money" in the rôle of Kathleen Forrest, and that it was of the highest importance that she be cast in such a rôle as would afford "adequate possibilities for acting" and would make her known to the public, thereby enhancing her reputation as an actress. She said that prior to April 5, when Miss Moore succeeded her, the latter and Mr. Bloomingdale sought to induce Mr. Gordon to oust her from the part. She alleged that Mr. Bloomingdale offered large sums to take the part from her, and Miss Moore also made offers. She was notified on April 5 that her services would no longer be required. She asserted that she had paid $3,750 for an interest in the production, and that under her contract she was to get a percentage of the gross receipts warranted to be not less than $350 a week.

An answering affidavit submitted by Heimann & Rubien of 1,460 Broadway, attorneys for the defendants, denied the existence of a conspiracy on the part of Mr. Bloomingdale and Miss Moore to have Miss Johnstone ousted from the production, and also denied that any money was paid in connection with the alleged conspiracy.

Mr. Gordon asserts that he discharged the actress by giving two weeks' notice as provided for in the contract, because at various performances her acting was not satisfactory, she made frequent mistakes, forgot her lines, lost her cues, "and in many ways conducted herself in an unsatisfactory manner." It was alleged that at one performance she appeared to be intoxicated, stumbled about the staged and ruined the performance.

Mr. Gordon alleges that Miss Johnstone told him that she regretted this conduct. He asserts further that Miss Moore was substituted in the rôle in the regular routine because she was understudy. He alleges that Miss Johnstone threatened that if she were supplanted she would create a disturbance which would disrupt the performance. Concerning the plaintiff's allegation that she bought an interest in the production, Mr. Gordon said that a certificate for $3,750 of stock was issued to Lester Nilson.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB HEARD.

University Graduates Give a Program of Great Interest.

The sixth concert of the Women's University Glee Club took place last evening in the Engineering Building in West Thirty-ninth Street before an audience composed largely of college people. Gerald Reynolds conducted. The assisting artists were Dorothy Fox, soprano, and Rex Tillson, pianist. Eleanor Everitt accompanied. The centre of interest in a most interesting program was the first American performance of parts of André Caplet's "Miroir de Jesus." Miss Fox carried the chief burden of the work, the chorus commenting, much in the manner of a Greek chorus.

The score is singularly modern, and yet archaic. There is none of the grandiose effects of a Handel, and yet Caplet, by the simplest means, succeeds in creating a religious atmosphere as convincing as Handel's. The performance of the Women's University Glee Club and of Miss Fox especially, under the direction of Gerald Reynolds, reflected credit on all concerned.

The program commenced with three seventeenth century madrigals by Byrd, Weelkes and Orlando Gibbons. All three were excellent, but Weelke's charming "Nightingale" won the chief applause. Three hymns from the Rig Veda, set to music for female voices by Gustav Holst, were apparently imitations of primitive Hindu modes. They leaped the gap between past and present and fused into the most modern of idioms.

Miss Fox sang five Greek folk-songs, arranged by Maurice Ravel, and the glee club brought the concert to a successful close with three north country folk-songs, arranged by W. G. Whittaker.

'POMEROY'S PAST' A DELIGHTFUL COMEDY

POMEROY'S PAST, a comedy in three acts, by Clare Kummer. Staged by Ernest Truex; produced by Booths, Gleasons and Truex. At the Longacre Theatre.

Mary Thorne ..... Helen Chandler
Edge ..... Montague Rutherford
Amanda Chilton ..... Laura Hope Crews
Francesca ..... Marjorie Kummer
Pomeroy Chilton ..... Ernest Truex
Edward Marsh ..... Richard Barbee
Hilda Partridge ..... Dorothy Peterson
Little Frances ..... Eleanor Frances Shaw
Trebus Hemingway, D. D. .. Osgood Perkins
William Flynn ..... Harry Oldridge

A gay and delightful and thoroughly characteristic comedy by Clare Kummer came to town last night at the Longacre. The name of it is "Pomeroy's Past," and it contains all of the qualities that have distinguished Miss Kummer's plays in the past—an abundant and buoyant wit, a distinct note of Summer madness, and traces of a hand that is not always steady where plot is concerned. "Pomeroy's Past" is gorgeous entertainment for approximately its first half; the fun flags a little in the later scenes.

It is all entertaining enough, however, to cause one to wonder why it has been so long on the way. It is a play whose leading rôle has been variously assigned to Roland Young, William Gillette and Basil Sidney in the last three years—Mr. Young got as far as acting it in the try-out towns and Mr. Sidney certainly reached the rehearsal stage—and which now reaches the stage of the Longacre with Ernest Truex as its principal player. And, to bring about that consummation, it should be added, Mr. Truex had to produce it himself.

But at all events here it is. No account of its plot content would suffice to convey an idea of its quality; the play takes on charm by the unexpectedness of its wit. And to range so many samples of that wit in a showcase, so that the playgoer may judge whether he would care to hear the whole of it, is likewise a hazardous proceeding; although all would be entertained, surely, by Mr. Truex's account of the young lady who had borne him a child but who had not been party to a marriage ceremony. She didn't like the Episcopal service, she said—she was tired of it.

And when, by this device of claiming paternity, Mr. Truex seeks to persuade a stern elder sister that he should be permitted to adopt a little girl of five, it is the sister who urges caution on the ground that children are a great responsibility, especially in the country. They attract kidnappers.

There is a good deal of it like that. It is all what is known as "thin," but to criticize Miss Kummer's plays for being thin is to complain that she doesn't write melodramas. "Pomeroy's Past," certainly, is at its best when it is thinnest.

The cast, in the main, does well by it, although there is the suggestion, now and then, that the players are a bit conscious of the wit. Even Mr. Truex is not guiltless in this respect, although to most of Miss Kummer's scenes he brings a valuable quality. Laura Hope Crews is admirable as the restraining elder sister, and the poignant Helen Chandler fits nicely enough into the scheme of things. The playwright's daughter, Marjorie Kummer, is likewise importantly cast, and is at least moderately good.

SOUSA SHOWS INCOME REDUCED BY RADIO

Tells Congressional Committee That $60,000 a Month Has Become $29,500 a Year.

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP).—John Philip Sousa paid $25 to have his first song published, but he subsequently attained a maximum monthly income of $60,000 in royalties, he disclosed today before the joint congressional Patents Committee.

His reduced 1925 income in royalties, "a mere pittance of $29,500," he blamed upon the development of radio and the copyright law of 1909, which allows him only "a penny a record" on sales of phonographic reproductions of his compositions.

Opposing the Dill bill, which would set up a scale of rates which broadcasting stations would pay composers, Mr. Sousa said:

"When we furnish the brains through which the companies make money, we ought to get something out of it."

E. C. Mills of the American Society of Composers charged that radio, "the great contribution of science which will give us eventually a universal language and make wars impossible," is controlled by three great groups which soon will be reduced to two.

HALTS SCHOOL REGULATIONS

Mexican Education Chief Suspends Rules Affecting Private Schools.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 19.—The Minister of Education announces the suspension of the recently issued regulation concerning private schools. This is done to enable the principals of Catholic schools and the Department of Education to consider their differences. Apparently the protests of not only the Catholics of Mexico but also those outside and the objections of the American Federation of Labor have had their effect.

The Minister of Education announces that he is willing to consider all objections to school regulation by the Catholics provided the latter accept lay education.

A strong factor in the attempts to reconcile the Catholic schools and the Government is said to have been the representations made by Chester Wright, representative of the American Federation, who has just returned home after a careful examination of labor conditions in Mexico. Mr. Wright advocated a policy of liberality among the Mexican population as a means toward harmony and the stability of the Government.

NAZIMOVA HERE ONCE MORE.

Scores at the Palace in Sketch, "That Sort"—Hippodrome Bill.

Nazimova returned yesterday to the local music halls after an absence of three seasons, appearing at the Palace in a playlet, "That Sort," written for her by Basil McDonald Hastings. The sketch deals with the redemption—through talk principally—of a woman who describes herself as "spiritually dead," and, despite its verbosity, serves as an excellent vehicle for a display of the actress's emotional talents. George Thorpe gives a first-rate performance in her support.

Ted Trevor and Dina Harris, a graceful pair of English ballroom dancers, revealed a smart series of steps. They were assisted by Carl Fenton's Gypsy Orchestra, a string organization, which provided relief from the succession of jazz bands. Others at the Palace were Raymond Baird, boy musician, who conducts the house orchestra from the pit; Joseph B. Stanley and company, Lester Crawford and Helen Broderick Newell and Most and Sylvia Clark. It was a smooth-running bill, containing about everything that a good variety program should have, except trained seals.

This lack of trained seals is made up at the Hippodrome, where Odiva and her amphibians are on an entertaining program that has Cantor Rosenblatt and Willie and Eugene Howard as headliners. The cantor, who by virtue of a previous engagement is a big favorite at this theatre, received an ovation yesterday. The comedy of the Howard brothers goes well, as does that of Toto, the Hippodrome clown.

At the Sixth Avenue Playhouse are Lady Odin-Pearse, British concert violinist; Chas Chase, former "Follies" comedian; George Choos's production of "Danceland," a musical revue; the Albertina Rasch dancers and the Rosemont Troubadours.

RECITALS BY TWO ARTISTS.

Miss Cady, Pianist, Gives Classics—J. Kayser, Baritone, Heard.

Two recitals drew musicians to the new Fifty-seventh Street music centre yesterday. Iarriette Cady, a well-known pianist, appeared at Steinway Hall in a matinee of classics, with which she will contrast an evening of "moderns" next week. Miss Cady was applauded in Bach's G minor "English Suite," pieces by Weber and Henseit, a Schumann "Novelette" and five Chopin preludes.

Joseph Kayser, a young baritone new to the concert platform, was heard by a cordial audience in Chickering Hall last night. With Ward Sekiberg at the piano, he sang a vigorous air from Handel's "Joshua" and varied songs in German, Italian and English. His voice gained musical quality in the lighter airs, from Purcell and Hopkinson to H. T. Burleigh and Deems Taylor.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

"The Desert Healer."

OLD LOVES AND NEW, with Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford, Walter Pidgeon, Katherine McDonald, Tully Marshall, Ann Rork, Arthur Rankin and Albert Conti; adapted from Edith M. Hull's novel, "The Desert Healer," directed by Maurice Tourneur; Joseph Plunkett's "Anniversary Frolic," with John Quinlan, Mlle. Klemova and M. Kiddon, the ballet corps, Pauline Miller, Bernard de Face, De Haven and Nice, and Allen White's Collegians. At the Mark Strand.

A fool there is, in a picture called "Old Loves and New," which is based on Edith M. Hull's novel, "The Desert Healer." This fool not only tramples on women's hearts and apparently never misses the opportunity to become what in the film is termed "saturated," but he also angers an elephant, beating the great animal with his riding whip, and, for a bit of fun, he puts a lighted cigarette on the elephant's trunk. Such a fool is only asking for a violent end, and the pachyderm, with a fairly good memory for what's what, sees to it that this man receives his just deserts.

There are some very good scenes in this pictorial feature, but the narrative as a whole is not overwhelmingly entertaining. The story opens with a glimpse of a party in the home of Lord Gervas Carew, who is devoted to his wife and child. Lady Carew, however, becomes infatuated with the fool, Lord Clyde Geradine, and in a subsequent sequence Lord Carew returns from the battlefront, weak from a wound. He learns soon after he enters his house that his wife has left him and that his child is dead. He therefore goes forth to Algeria, where he "lives like a saint and rides like the devil." Lord Carew becomes a woman-hater and known as the "Desert Healer," but, as the yarn continues, he eventually learns to love again.

One strong scene is where the ambulance train glides into Charing Cross station, in London. Here one perceives on the platform the anxious relatives awaiting the wounded fighters. Marny O'Meara greets her brother, Denis, who has lost both his legs. This is a truly stirring chapter, for it brings back to mind the heroism of the brave, and the bowed hearts that in those days were to be found in so many countries.

There is a decided sincerity in this production, which is presented by Marion Fairfax, one of the few women producers. Its chief weakness is the failure to impress one with an adequate passing of time. An effort has also been made to include too many scenes, with the result that before one has a chance to see what is happening a subtitle interferes, then there is a hurried glimpse followed by something totally different. This might have been obviated with more judicious cutting and the exclusion of some scenes that would not be missed. In the unfurling of the tale there is a strong leaning toward coincidence.

Some of the scenes are in the desert, while others depict verandas shaded by tropical foliage. Lewis Stone, who impersonates Lord Carew, does extraordinarily well with his shallow part. He wears an Arab chieftain's robes after he becomes known as the Desert Healer. Walter Pidgeon has the unhappy rôle of the fool, known as Lord Geradine. He is a prepossessing villain, but his imitation of a staggering drunkard is hardly convincing. He has to go through one scene in which he is supposed to be thrashing his wife with a riding crop, and, judging by the action that follows, the woman's screams must have been heard all over the desert. Barbara Bedford portrays Marny, the nice Irish girl. She is sympathetic and earnest in her acting. Tully Marshall makes the most of a slim character.

Joseph Plunkett's stage offering, "An Anniversary Frolic," to celebrate the twelfth anniversary of the Mark Strand, has several engaging numbers.

SEEK NEW CHURCH RADIO.

Lutherans Here Apply for a Broadcasting License.

The American Lutheran Church has applied to the Department of Commerce for a license to operate a broadcasting station in New York, according to a statement issued yesterday by the American Lutheran Publicity Bureau, 69 Fifth Avenue.

J. F. E. Nickelsburg, business manager of the bureau, said its attorneys had advised that a change in radio legislation was soon to be made which would enable the Lutherans to get a license, despite the fact that the Department of Commerce has more than 525 applications on file. In the event that a license was not granted he said that arrangements would be made to divide time on the air with an existing station but he declined to give the station's name.

If the license is granted it is understood that the aerial masts will be erected on the grounds of Concordia Lutheran College, Bronxville, and the studio will be located in Manhattan.

There are four stations owned and operated by religious organizations in New York: WBBR, People's Pulpit Association, Staten Island; WQAO, Calvary Baptist Church; WLWL, Missionary Society of St. Paul; and WSDA, Seventh Day Adventists.

CHARGE FILMS MAR PRESTIGE OF BRITISH

LONDON, April 19.—The British are getting so alarmed at what is practically a monopoly by Americans of the moving picture field in the entire British Empire that a movement has started to have the matter taken up at the forthcoming Imperial conference.

Today the Federation of British Industries sent to Sir Philip Cunliffe Lister, President of the Board of Trade, the text of the resolution passed at the Federation's recent meeting, officially urging action on the part of the British Government to "arrive at some agreed policy for securing to the British Empire films at reasonable access to screens throughout his Majesty's dominions." One of the principal arguments adduced by those opposed to the Americans is that many American films exhibited in British overseas dominions, such as India, impair British prestige among the natives by exhibiting the worst sides of life as supposedly lived by white men and women.

See Deterioration of Race.

Though the characters in such screen dramas are British, it was pointed out that the natives see them only as whites and reach the lamentable conclusion that the white race is deteriorating, to the serious detriment of British prestige.

The Federation of British Industries declares that the screen situation in the British overseas dominions from the British viewpoint is even worse than it is in the British Isles, fully 90 per cent. of the pictures shown in the dominions being American and barely 5 per cent. British. In some dominions it is asserted that Americans virtually have full control.

In South Africa British films are practically excluded already and the situation will become even more serious for British interests if an important arrangement now said to be contemplated with American film interests goes through.

Australia imported during the year ended last June nearly 23,000,000 feet of American films, as against slightly more than 1,000,000 feet of British and less than 1,000,000 from other countries. The entire importation of film into Australia is controlled by concerns closely allied to American producers. Australians consider the situation so serious that legislative action already has been taken in some parts of the Commonwealth and further steps are contemplated. This is also true of Canada.

Regarding the theory that some American films are damaging British prestige among the natives in India, the following statement was made here recently by the former film censor of Bengal: "Pictures showing the worst side of life, according to Hollywood, are accepted as a representation of the manners and habits of the British. India gets a few of the best American films and all the worst which the American film producers turn out. Such stuff is deplorable enough in European countries, but is absolutely fatal in the East and tends to undermine the prestige that Sahib and Memsahib have enjoyed for generations."

Dominions Reject Films.

What is true of India, it is asserted, is also true of other parts of the British Empire having native populations. Another deplorable phase of the present situation, according to the Federation of British Industries, is that whereas certain British films have found favor in non-British lands they have been rejected by the British Dominions. Films such as "Armageddon," "Britain's Birthright" and "The True Story of the Battle of Jutland" were refused by all the Dominions and only shown there through private enterprise.

This also is largely true of two other British films, "Zeebrugge" and "Ypres," which barely succeeded in being shown in India. The British film "Livingstone," which deals with Explorer Livingstone's feat in South Africa, was refused by South African film interests and shown only in certain South African halls through private enterprise.

The special subcommittee of the Joint Film Trade Committee, will meet representatives of the American film industry here tomorrow in order to discuss the question of reciprocity in the exchange of films between Britain and the United States. The meeting follows a meeting held several weeks ago where a long discussion took place, the upshot of which was a promise by Americans to communicate with the home offices of their firms in America.

It is expected that the result of these communications will be learned at tomorrow's meeting. Among the Americans invited to meet the subcommittee are representatives of Allied Artists, Fox, Universal, and First National. After the meeting with the Americans the British subcommittee will hold a meeting of its own. The present impression in the British film trade is that there is little hope of immediate solution of the problem of reciprocity in the exchange of films with America. However, there is a possibility that some plan may emerge from tomorrow's discussion which may bring the present difficulties.

MRS. GISH HAS A STROKE.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, April 19.—Still in her make-up and just off the motion-picture lot, Lillian Gish boarded a noon train today for New York to sail for London in response to a message that her mother had been stricken with paralysis.

Miss Gish said she received the news last Friday and had worked feverishly almost night and day since to finish her parts in scenes in "The Scarlet Letter." A message received on Sunday, she added, indicated that the physicians were hopeful over her mother's condition. Mrs. Gish went to England last month with Dorothy Gish, her other daughter, who is in pictures there.

SEEKS SIX SHUBERT LONDON THEATRES

Gulliver Sails to Negotiate the Purchase—Disposal of Interests Said to Be Unlikely.

LONDON, April 19.—Charles Gulliver, managing director of London Theatres of Variety, sailed for New York today armed with powers to negotiate with the Shubert Brothers for the purchase of their interests in six leading London theatres. It is stated that Mr. Gulliver also wishes to buy some theatres controlled by the Shuberts in New York, thus reversing the present situation.

Neither Lee nor J. J. Shubert could be reached last night, but one of their representatives said that it was extremely unlikely that they would be willing to dispose of their interests in the six London theatres which they had recently acquired. He pointed out that "Is Zat So" is a big hit at the Apollo, that "The Student Prince" is still running at His Majesty's and that "The Big Parade" will go into another Shubert-controlled London house.

William Gaunt, with whom the American theatrical managers are associated in their English ventures has plans for the other theatres which include the Adelphi, Shaftesbury, Winter Garden and Gaiety and the representative stated that all indications were for an indefinite continuance of the Shuberts' London operations.

Regarding Mr. Gulliver's intention of purchasing some of the New York houses under Shubert management the spokesman said that would naturally depend upon the proposition Mr. Gulliver had in mind.

Cellar Players Win Play Cup.

The Cellar Players of the Hudson Guild received yesterday a silver cup as first prize in the intersettlement play contest of the United Neighborhood Houses of New York, the finals of which were held Saturday night. The winning play in which members of the Cellar Players appeared was "Release." Mrs. Elaine Erlanger directed the play, which was staged by Mrs. Adele Matthews. The Cellar Players have entered "Release" in the Little Theatre tournamnt later in the Spring.

MUSIC NOTES.

Sophie Braslau, long announced in today's final musicale at the Hotel Roosevelt, is unable to appear. Efrem Zimbalist will give the matinee, assisted by Nina Morgana.

Charles Stratton, Betty Poulus, Tosca Berger and Walter Golde give a benefit for the Bronx Free Fellowship tonight at the Community Church, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street.

Senator Copeland, Dr. Sprague Carleton, Dr. J. T. Simonson and others are patrons of a benefit for Flower Hospital and Nurses' Home this evening at the Manhattan Opera House.

H. H. Flagler will discuss plans of the New York Symphony Society at the annual meeting tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock in Walter Damrosch's home, 146 East Sixty-first Street.

SCREEN NOTES.

"The Last Days of Pompeii," an Italian production based on Bulwer Lytton's classic, was offered in preview last night by Jeffrey Bernerd at the Plaza Hotel. The presentation was arranged by Joseph Plunkett.

Charlie Murray, the screen comedian, is to make a personal appearance at the Mark Strand Theatre at 9:15 this evening. He is to relate some of the humorous incidents connected with the making of films, and will also refer to the features of the twelfth anniversary celebration of the Mark Strand.

First National Pictures, Inc., held a luncheon yesterday at Sherry's in honor of June Mathis, the scenario writer who gained much renown for her adaptation of Ibanez's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Richard A. Rowland presided, and in a brief talk he told of the work accomplished by Miss Mathis. Miss Mathis thanked Mr. Rowland and the other officials of the company.

CONGRESS ANXIOUS TO QUIT.

Washington dispatches represent the leaders of both parties in Congress as hoping that the session will end soon. They are said to be urging the President to ask for no further legislation not absolutely necessary. If adjournment could come by May 15, they would be well pleased. But they say that in any case it must not be later than June 1. By that time a vote can be had on the foreign debt settlements, on the public buildings bill, possibly on a rivers and harbors bill; the rest of the legislative cargo can be jettisoned in order to get the Congressional ship quickly into her home port.

This eagerness of Congress to get away from Washington is not because of a feeling that a complete and splendid record has been made. Indeed, it is dread of having to give a "record" vote on several pending measures which leads Congressmen to hope that many bills may be abandoned. Elections are coming on, and it will be much easier for candidates to explain how they would have voted, if they had only had a chance, than how they actually did vote, if they happened to vote in a way to offend any large number of their constituents. Thus it would appear that distrust of itself, and of its ability to judge the public temper at this time, is the main reason why Congress wishes to adjourn quickly and have it over with. It would throw up its job much in the spirit of the despondent man of whom the poet writes, and who said that he was

> Weary of myself and sick of asking
> What I am and what I ought to be.

Another motive for retreat from Washington is darkly hinted. Why should Congressmen stay there to "stand by the President" when he will not stand by them after they have gone out to fight for their political lives? It is sadly and significantly remarked that Senator MCKINLEY went down to defeat in Illinois, yet that no bugle call in his behalf issued from the White House. Senator PEPPER is engaged in a desperate struggle for re-election in Pennsylvania, but while the shallows in Harrisburg murmur, the deeps in the White House are dumb. Of course, the President's well-known policy is to keep himself aloof from these contests within the party, holding himself as it were in a higher Olympian sphere. But it is not strange that worried Congressmen are unable to understand that attitude. So they naturally want to go home.

A LARGER BOARD OF EDUCATION.

A bill now on the eve of passage through the Legislature, which is said to have the approval of Mayor WALKER, provides that the Board of Education in this city shall consist of fifteen members, instead of the present number, seven. It is also stipulated that "not more than nine shall at any "time belong to the same political "party." This might be thought to be introducing political distinctions where they do not belong. Education should be nonpartisan, and the public schools administered by the most public-spirited and competent citizens that can be obtained for the work, no matter whether they call themselves Republicans, Democrats or Socialists. But the fact is that the existing Board of Education was made partisan by Mayor HYLAN. All his appointees were of one party. Obviously the Albany bill seeks to redress this unfairness and to make the Board of Education at least bipartisan.

About the proper size of the Board of Education opinions differ, even among educational experts. For a long time New York had a very large board. Then it lurched to the opposite extreme and got the very small one it now has. There are two conflicting theories about the matter. One thinks of the Board of Education as purely administrative, and therefore likely to be more efficient when the membership is small. The other regards it as representative, holding that the various localities and different interests of the city should each have a spokesman on the board. It is argued, for example, that the large Italian population of Greater New York—over 800,000—is entitled to have an Italian representative on the Board of Education. A similar argument is made for our negro residents. Plainly, however, this is a contention that cannot be pushed too far, otherwise we should have a Board of Education larger than the Board of Aldermen.

A just view of the duties and opportunities of the Board of Education of New York would be that in appointing its members all merely parochial or racial or religious or political qualifications should be disregarded. Men and women ought to be sought with knowledge and sympathies as wide as the city itself. Yet we have in fairness to consider the situation as it was left by Mayor HYLAN. It is not strange if Mayor WALKER is not willing to take the responsibility for continuing the thoroughly partisan board bequeathed to him by Mr. HYLAN. The way out proposed by the Albany legislation may not be ideal, but perhaps it furnishes the only escape now possible.

TWENTIETH CENTURY TRANSPORTATION.

Mr. DEPEW'S reminiscences in connection with the centennial of the New York Central Railway emphasize the fact that a single lifetime embraces the growth of that railway system from a neighborhood to a continent. The record shows the triumph of practical experience over legislative foresight. Billions have been spent to promote competition by water, the railways being forbidden to defend themselves by extending their own lines with steamships. The New York Central has had great natural advantages, but they do not explain the absorption of the traffic which the law has vainly sought to divert to the rival river and canal carriers. It is only one of several railway systems which have proved transport done better and more cheaply on wheels than in boats. It was the vision of the boatman VANDERBILT which conceived the New York Central.

Its train used as an object lesson in its development consists of cars with stage-coach bodies. It was foreseen that horses could not be equal to a sustained speed at fifteen miles an hour. But it was not foreseen that passengers would ride a thousand miles in twenty-four hours and eat and sleep without a stop. In the infancy of the railways the cars were horse-drawn, but the locomotive beat muscle power. The seeds of monopoly and consolidation were planted early, and it is only at the end of the Central century that the law is favoring what it once forbade. The next stage for high speeds and long distances may dispense with wheels altogether. No one knows what may be the result of spending billions for air transport between continents. The railways have no claim to protection against air carriers. The science and art of transportation is not to be crippled even for the conservation of the twenty billions invested in railways. But the railways have shown a ruggedness of constitution which will safeguard their future for a generation at least.

MURDER MERELY "PERSONAL."

A year ago when MAX GOLDBERG was questioned about the murder of "Lefty" KANTER, he said, "Listen, "Captain. This is a personal affair. "The police ain't got no business in-"terferin'." GOLDBERG now lies in the Morgue with two bullet holes in the back of his head. His is the eleventh murder in a three years' feud between the gang of the late "Kid" DROPPER and the Little Augie gang. LOUIS COHEN, who "dropped" "Kid" DROPPER with a bullet in the back of his head as he was standing between two policemen, is now in Sing Sing; but his case is exceptional both for its modicum of courage and for its punishment. The police have summoned witnesses, mostly secured through "stool-pigeons," but never one who would stand up against fear of the gangs. This latest victim was called to the telephone in his restaurant by a woman. As he stood talking glib gallantries, her confederates shot him from behind and escaped. After them bolted all in the restaurant who could serve as witnesses—to whom also the affair was merely "personal," and especially as it might come home to them if they gave evidence. The police have a slender clue and are working on it; but once more the chief result is likely to be only one gangster the less.

There was never a better illustration of BACON'S saying that revenge is "wild justice." The morals of the gang are those of the primeval forest upon the inhabitants of which civil order has taken no hold. The individual is a law unto himself; or, that failing, his cause is taken up by his clan and waged with all the arts of ambush and treachery. Through thousands of years, wild justice decimated the human kind. Even today, respect for property and human life is but skin deep in the anatomy of civilization. Granted a well-ordered home in childhood, an education normally effective, and adult activities in a community duly regardful of civil rights, "cultivated" justice for the most part prevails. Lacking all this, or any essential part of it, mankind reverts, as if automatically, to the passions of the jungle and the clan. For decent home life, with effective education and habitual regard for law, the only alternative is gang law. As to specific workings of the disorder from which American life suffers, commissions of investigation can learn much; but the fact is as clear as it ever will be that, through wide social strata, something is vitally wrong.

A RUSSIAN EDITOR.

A brief dispatch from Belgrade announces the celebration there among Russian refugees of the fiftieth anniversary of the Novoe Vremya—once the great St. Petersburg organ of imperial Russia, of the nobility, the wealthy, the influential, read by thousands of officials and widely quoted all over the world. It is now an inconspicuous folio published, few know where, by the son of its famous founder and hopefully perused by noble exiles as they dream of the fall of Bolshevism.

Unlike the great paper conducted by ALEXIS C. SOUVORIN, that now printed and almost entirely written by his son, MICHAEL, is far from prophetic. On the twenty-fifth anniversary of the paper, under the eye of Czarism, the elder SOUVORIN remarked: "This ju-"bilee is the general rehearsal of "funerals." The son at the fiftieth anniversary merely reviewed those funerals as an apologist; of the father's skepticism about the present and clairvoyance for the future there was not a glimmer.

Twenty-five years ago the Novoe Vremya was easily the most influential daily in Russia, and, for its political and financial articles, its literary news and criticism, among the best in Europe. Based on a Parisian model, it early adopted the anonymous editorial. But a daily feature, called "Little Letters," consisting of pointed comment on the topics of the day and displaying a wonderful fund of curious knowledge on both Russian and foreign matters, continued to be signed "A. C. Souvo-"RIN." He died in 1912—just five years before the fall of the régime which had been lauded by him through all the great resources of the paper—but with his tongue in his cheek. There now seems to be no doubt of this, for his diary unearthed by the Bolsheviki apparently proves it. These words were ironically confided to it in 1900:

> Autocracy is infinitely superior to parliamentarism, for with parliamentarism there are men who govern, while with autocracy one is governed by God. The Emperor only informs himself in accordance with God and takes no advice but of Him, but since God is invisible, he consults the first comer: his wife, his mother, his stomach, his temperament, and accepts them all as an expression of God. There is nothing above autocracy, for it raises an entire hive of drones who see nothing that is good in toil. These drones compose the privileged classes, and the essential of their privileges reposes precisely in the fact that having nothing in the head they form the head which controls the crowd.

Surely curious words to be set down, even in a private journal, by the great Czarist publicist! Again, he wrote in 1901 showing that he harbored no illusions in regard to the imperial régime:

> New times approach; one feels their advent in the fact that the Government is completely demoralized and knows not which way to turn. But will this confusion last long? Shall I die with the conviction that the despotic régime is being gnawed away from beneath and only needs a squall to overturn it? Even an ordinary wind would throw it down.

Of the Grand Dukes he wrote:

> These Grand Dukes are truly a misfortune. They can only be compared with thieves, for by them thieves grow wealthy. For the purchase of ships after the Russo-Japanese War Grand Duke MIKHAILOVITCH exacted a commission of 500,000 rubles. People shed their blood and the Grand Dukes take their "kiatki." Russia is the personal property of the ROMANOFFS, and they make money out of it in every way.

No wonder the present régime in Russia hastened to make this diary known to the world! Nor is it strange that the diarist's son, MICHAEL, has become an apologist rather than a prophet. But more wonderful than all else is the revelation made in regard to the character of the elder SOUVORIN.

A SHOW VOLCANO.

Vesuvius and Etna in the Old World and Mont Pelee in the New have such awful reputations that it is not easy to believe that Hawaiian Mauna Loa, whose lava flood wiped out a little village on Saturday, is not feared by any except the superstitious. They throw offerings of leaves into the craters to propitiate Pele, goddess of the mountain. "During the more "than one hundred years since the "missionaries landed," says GILBERT GROSVENOR, who once used an entire number of The National Geographic Magazine to describe, with typewriter and camera, "the volcanic and floral wonderland of the world." "there "has not been a single death in the "territory caused by a volcanic "eruption." Although the Hawaiian Islands "have been built along a "crack on the ocean bottom, by a "string of volcanoes, some of which "have hoisted themselves seven miles "straight up from the ocean floor," tourists sleep quietly in their hotels, having faith that lava from the craters moves so slowly toward the sea that eruptions are never more than spectacles—though stupendous sights. Seventeen years ago Dr. THOMAS A. JAGGAR built his laboratory on the edge of the Kilauea crater, which is Mauna Loa's greatest spouter, and the doctor always slept there as sweetly as a babe. It is to his bulletins, monographs and photographs that the world owes most of what it knows about Mauna Loa. Describing a convulsion, when the Alika River burst from the flank of the mountain in 1900, Dr. JAGGAR wrote:

> The color effects at sundown at the rift source on Mauna Loa were gorgeous beyond description. Over the scarlet fountains rose the sheets of red and green flame, topped with lilac fume, against a murky green or blue-gray background. Above rose the great buff-colored volutes of cloud, with individual billows coffee-colored or brown. All this was backed by an outer sky of deepest cobalt blue, with normal distant horizon clouds of pearly gray.

Mauna Loa signals from its cone by a column of lava, fume and flame that it is about to begin operations down below. In 1900 the lava stream reported by Dr. JAGGAR flowed to the sea for ten days. The cloud or column from Mauna Loa's altitude of 14,675 feet rises sometimes many thousand feet higher. "The cause of the steady "flow," this scientist has said, "may "be a subsidence of the ocean's bot-"tom all about, or it may be the "elastic force controlled within the "liquid itself or its imprisoned gas." Mauna Loa, which includes Kilauea and other Hawaiian volcanoes, is a constant study for the seismologists. They confess that they have never mastered its mysteries. Happily Mauna Loa is a great, long bulk of a mountain. It does not tower over the surrounding country and the settlements of men. Harmless as the craters of the Island of Hawaii seem today, it is recorded that in 1790 an insurgent army marching to overthrow King KAMEHAMEHA was overwhelmed by a sudden eruption of Kilauea.

Long may Mauna Loa retain its reputation as a show volcanic peak! Estimated by its output of lava, it is the most productive volcano in the world. It is said that "its great flow "of 1855 alone would nearly build "Vesuvius." How considerate it is may be judged from the statement of WILLIAM R. CASTLE Jr., the son of a missionary, that "people who go to "see the flows camp directly in front "of them, moving their tents only "when the lava gets near enough to "be uncomfortably warm."

BEWILDERED PARENTS.

In his eighty-fourth year Dr. PARKHURST refuses to illustrate one of the customs of old age. He will not look out, with the serenity of a sage, upon a world where God's in His heaven and men, despite possible appearances to the contrary, are getting better and better all the time. Dr. PARKHURST does not believe that the young generation is living and thinking as it should. There is too much self-centredness, too much introspection, too much neglect of the objective values and exercises which save the soul from festering. The fault, however, is not with the young, but primarily with their parents. The fault is with the home, which has ceased to be the central point of America's child life. The young are to be pitied rather than to be blamed, and the way will not be straightened for them until "we get "more earnest, sincere homes and "parents."

It is a familiar charge—this of the parents who have eaten sour grapes so that the children's teeth are set on edge. The pursuit of pleasure by the elder generation, to the neglect of the old decorum and the old duties, has been sufficiently stigmatized in sermons, in the movies and in the books written by the young in their own defense. What has not been quite proved is the sequence of cause and effect. Have the parental sour grapes preceded the gritting of young teeth, or have the grapes followed upon the teeth? Has the young generation left the home because home has ceased to be what it once was, or has the home grown frivolous because the children have left it? Economic forces have been battering at the integrity of the home. Self-supporting young Jack and self-supporting young Jill look for their interests and their amusements in the outside world where they earn their living. When Jack and Jill have gone out for the evening with their separate latchkeys, what is there left for the parents to do but seek outside recreation on their own account?

It cannot be solely parental self-indulgence that has led to the abnegation of parental responsibilities. On the contrary, the abnegation has often been a sacrifice, undertaken for the children's own good and in a spirit of humility. For perhaps a generation it has been driven in on the fathers and mothers that they really are not best qualified to look after their children. This begins with the infant, who, as the specialists have pointed out, is much better off with an experienced nurse than when exposed to the amateur if loving ministrations of the maternal instinct. The young child is better off under expert guidance in the model kindergarten than at the lap of his unpedagogical mother. The boy and girl are obviously better prepared for the citizenship of adult life at school than they would be under the fondest and most skillful paternal tuition. School, camp, Boy Scouts, play club—the superiority of expert professional direction outside the home has been unceasingly emphasized, until the conscientious mother has been educated to the belief that if the child is to thrive, it must be outside of the home.

The most conscientious mothers are thus likely to give the impression of being the most frivolous mothers. They have delegated, resigned, abdicated—but not for the motive usually assumed. They have sent their children out into the world for the youngsters' own good. When the children grow up they refuse to come back. Father and mother at home are lonely. They call a taxi and go out to a show.

POETS QUESTION POETRY.

One of the legitimate functions of poets is wondering. They have speculated about everything from a grain of sand to the ultimate destiny of man. But they left their own domain, and with droll results, when they solemnly debated the question "Can Poetry Survive Modern Civilization?" Four speakers took part in the discussion on Sunday, and, like true philosophers, left the matter just where they found it. The first speaker, a physician and essayist as well as a poet, contributed some original ideas. But MAXWELL BODENHEIM pursued his usual course and contradicted everything that had been said by the other man. He got as far away from the subject as he could in his allotted time, while the third poet ran still wider of the theme by dragging in "radio, gland rejuvenation, complexes and sex expression." The last speaker hauled the debate back to the point, but refused to make prophecies. The whole is reminiscent of the days, ten or a dozen years ago, when ALFRED KREYMBORG edited Others and the young radical poets wrote any kind of verse that took their fancy—and got it published. There were poets in that group who have since won fame and prizes, but they are not engaging in debates now. They sometimes give lectures, but they leave debating to those who never grew out of that happy state.

Women's clubs, particularly in the Middle West, where they have had to endure much ridicule for eager excursions into encyclopedias in search of the traits of writers, ought to find amusement in the spectacle of this poetical wrangling. If they were malicious, they might fling back some of the javelins of wit that have been hurled at them. Their revenge, of course, would not necessarily be on their original critics, but would that matter? If their feelings require relief, here is a chance for them. They might even take up the question left floating by the poets, and perhaps settle it. Who knows, if yonder riveter had never thrust his shoulder against the machine, whether we should have had free verse? But for the endless streams of traffic on the avenues, we might never have had unpunctuated poetry. Lines of verse beginning without capital letters might never have been produced except in the modern civilization that gave us the subway. Even if the ladies in pursuit of culture can't decide the question, they might at least get some fun out of it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Should Be More Careful.

Two amusing illustrations of the carelessness with which laws too often are drawn are presented in the latest issue of the little pamphlet in which the New York City Bar Association's Committee on Criminal Courts Law and Procedure expresses and explains its approval or disapproval of measures pending in the State Legislature.

The first is a bill, introduced by Assemblyman ALTERMAN, which provides that County Judges shall not practice law in their own counties, and that "no District Attorney"—except in counties containing a city with more than 1,000,000 inhabitants—"shall practice as an attorney or counselor in any court of record of the county in which he is elected." Of this the committee quietly says, "most people, including ourselves, have labored under the notion that a District Attorney 'practices law' when he performs his official duties," and adds: "The introducer of the bill may not have meant what he has said, but we must take him at his word."

The other instance appears in a bill offered by Senator GIBBS to regulate the keeping of bees in certain villages. In the first place, declares the committee, the bill is unnecessary, for if the bees anywhere constitute a public nuisance, there already is enough law to force their suppression. But this bill says that the bees shall not be kept "within 500 feet of any dwelling or cultivated garden." The absurdity lies in the fact that this would include the beekeeper's own house and garden.

What Will the Catholics Say to This?

Addressing the St. Vincent de Paul Society in Boston on Sunday, Cardinal O'CONNELL made statements sure to excite discussion. Had they come from a source open even to suspicion of antagonism to Catholicism they would have been likely to cause intense resentment.

What the Cardinal said, in effect, was that he had ceased to wish attainment of wealth by his co-religionists because he had observed that they did not make good use of it—that it drew them away from the Church and caused them to "live closed up in the shell of vanity which they have woven around themselves, and you cannot teach them or tell them anything." On the other hand, declared the Cardinal, the Protestants, "though they seem to be lacking in the external—what shall I say, demonstrations?—of religion, have become wonderfully charitable. If they do not go to church, they give to every worthy cause and do not close themselves up and hold tight to every dollar that is coming to them."

The Cardinal admitted that his criticism does not apply to all rich Catholics, and he might have added that some rich Protestants do not deserve his praise; but he did maintain that the difference was in general real.

Assuming that he is right, if rich Catholics do not know as well as rich Protestants what to do with money, why is it? Possibly the reason is that in this country the Catholic who attains great wealth, while he originally may have been no poorer than the Protestant who does it, had less preparation in the shape of what is called "background"—did not come as often from a class which had something of education and training in the gentler side of life. Probably, however, the Cardinal's rule has so many exceptions that it can be attacked easily.

His Machine Has No Nerves.

Now appears a scientific person who wants us to make believe that the noise we hear while traveling in the subway trains is less than that which exists at many places in streets on the surface. He has invented an instrument which measures noises on a scale of 100 units and does it with precision, unaffected, as he says we humans are, by associations and assumptions which make us think the darkness of the subway roars more loudly than it does.

Presumably he is right, in the abstract fashion, but he is wrong, too, because the true measure of a noise is not the effects it produces on a machine, but those on your own auditory nerves and from them on our brains. So graded, the noises in the subway, especially when an express train is going its best, is louder by far than anything we hear on the street.

Minimum Became Maximum.

So there is trickery in bottled milk, as well as in the variety called "loose"! According to Dr. HARRIS, some of the companies that have been so well trusted take advantage of a new law which fixed a minimum of butter content as tolerable, and are reducing to that point much milk into which the generous cows had put more of the most precious constituent.

That explains why there is not so much cream at the top of the bottle as there was in days before the law was changed in this respect, and also why so much cream can be sold separately at high prices. Not violation of the law is charged, but exploitation of it for an extra profit.

The present minimum was set to take in the milk of the Holsteins. They give a lot of milk, but it is poor in the fatty element, and hence the handsome creatures have become prime favorites with the dairymen serving the big cities.

Catalonians and Spaniards.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a Catalonian by birth, with exclusively Catalonian ancestry, I am deeply grateful to Alfredo Elias, who in his letter to THE TIMES brings to the notice of the American public the names of a number of prominent Catalonians many of whom would not have otherwise forged across the Atlantic. The worthiness of all those figures is beyond question. I am willing to subscribe even to the journalistic merits of a Mane y Flaquer, who, in commenting on a certain railroad accident, consolingly stated that "it was very fortunate that most of the victims were third-class passengers."

None of the characters, however, was of more than national (Spanish) prominence, and, as far as the writers and philosophers of the group are concerned, if their fame ever went beyond the borders of Catalonia it was on account of their having written in Spanish. Their love for Catalonia, as in my own case, was thoroughly compatible with their respect and admiration for Spain, and they would turn in their graves if they knew how their memory was enlisted in support of this denigrating campaign against the country served with their talents. The prolix array of Catalonian names submitted by Mr. Elias pales into insignificance before the formidable triumvirate of Cervantes, Velasquez and Calderon, whose fame the people of note obviously in my previous letter to your paper.

The other communication regarding Catalonia offers another example of the incorrigible conceit of certain militant Catalonians. Here is the sample: "It is also unquestionably true that fully two-thirds of the prestige attained by Spain abroad in the last few decades comes from the industry, enterprise, energy and intelligence of the Catalonians." Modern Spain has been made known to the outside world mainly by the following celebrities: Casals, Granados, Falla, Raquel Meller, Eori, Hidalgo, Barrientos, Mardones, Fleta, Ramon y Cajal, Benavente, Echegaray, Franco, La Cierva, Blasco Ibanez, Jhammo, Sorolla, and Zuloaga. Of these only three are Catalonians: the great Casals, Granados, the author of "Goyescas," and Maria Barrientos, a former member of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

SPRING?

About this time of year I write
A little verse to Spring
In which I mention balmy night
And note that thrushes sing.

The youthful grass I give a line,
Another to the brook;
I say that Nature's doing fine
And urge the folks to look.

But just right now I cannot feel
The things I ought to say;
I have no hot, inspiring zeal
For such a roundelay.

The windows rattle in their frames
Beneath the rising gale,
While treasured coal goes up in flames,
At cost of which I quail.

That merry gladsome Spring is here
The calendar insists,
Yet I can make but sorry cheer
Until my cold desists.

I must I fear postpone the gem
While Winter's in his prime;
When Spring puts on her diadem
I'll do that bit of rhyme.

WEBB-LOOMIS BILL.

Regulation of the Practice of Physiotherapy Explained.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE NEW YORK TIMES has several times recently exhibited a misunderstanding concerning the distinction between "chiropractors" and "physiotherapists," with a consequent misinterpretation of certain features of the Webb-Loomis bill.

For example, it was recently stated in THE TIMES that after the Webb-Loomis bill had left the hands of the expert Drafting Committee "there was added to it, from some seemingly mysterious source, one long and one short section, which caused it to be probable that its passage will do more harm than good. * * * As the bill now stands, it would legalize medical practice by everybody professing to use one or another form of what it calls 'physiotherapy'—meaning, in effect, any treatment of any disease otherwise than by surgery and the administration of drugs. * * *"

Under the caption, "Two Mishaps to the Chiropractors," it was stated in the same column that on the day that the Legislature defeated a bill licensing chiropractors, fifteen followers of physiotherapy were haled into court and held in $500 bail for examination.

As one of the representatives of the State Department of Education who collaborated in this bill, I am in an authoritative position to state not only that those sections dealing with physiotherapy were not added from any "seemingly mysterious source," but were submitted in an open hearing on the bill before the Assembly Public Health Committee, with the complete knowledge and approval of both the Education Department and the Legislative Committee of the Medical Society of the State of New York.

The Webb-Loomis bill provides specifically: "A license to practice physiotherapy shall not permit the holder thereof * * * to practice medicine as defined in Section 160 of this article, except to treat diseases under supervision of a duly licensed physician." As Section 160 defines the practice of medicine as the holding out or undertaking to "diagnose, treat, operate or prescribe for any human disease, injury, abnormality or condition, by any means or method whatsoever," it is obvious that the Webb-Loomis bill in no way "would legalize medical practice by everybody professing to use one or another form of what it calls 'physiotherapy,'" nor does it "legalize the practice of medicine by all the quacks or charlatans who are now practicing illegally." What the bill does is to set up a standard for a group of technical assistants trained in giving various types of physical treatments. These treatments, however, are to be given solely after diagnosis and by order of a duly licensed physician. In other words, the legal status of the physiotherapists would be precisely analagous to that of the trained nurse, who is not authorized to practice medicine, but is certified by the State Department of Education as properly trained and authorized to carry out various procedures on the sick, such as the giving of hypodermic injections, solely upon the authority and responsibility of duly licensed physicians.

Many chiropractors who realize that the Webb-Loomis bill would put a stop to their illegal practices are already posing as physiotherapists.

Too strong a distinction cannot be made between chiropractors who on their own responsibility, and contrary to law, attempt to diagnose and treat all conditions, including communicable diseases, and the registered physiotherapist who is distinctly prohibited from making any diagnosis or even from deciding the type of treatment for a patient, but whose functions are limited to the carrying out of various kinds of physical treatments on the authority and responsibility of a duly qualified physician. Undoubtedly more chiropractors will get themselves up as physiotherapists upon the passage of the Webb-Loomis bill, but this bill provides adequate administrative machinery for checking up not only the legal status but the actual practices of licensed physiotherapists, so that physiotherapy cannot become a back door to the illicit practice of medicine by unqualified quacks and charlatans.

Changing American Interests.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Something has changed Americans, in the last thirty years, from the days when political discussion was the academic interest of almost every one to the present attitude of disinterest in public affairs. Robert McLeod Jackson, your correspondent of this morning, is nearer right when he blames the people and not the politicians for the attitude of our Government. The politicians in Washington are there because we want them there, or because we do not care who runs the Government, so long as our private interests are not interfered with.

There is no use blinking the fact that the things which interest the average American are his business, general business as it affects his business, Florida land speculation, radio, the latest models in motor-cars, and prohibition. The League of Nations, the World Court, Locarno Treaties and international debts are matters about which we know little, and care less.

I am unwilling to believe that I belong to a nation without ideals; but I am convinced that, in a civilization in which one must sacrifice his ideals on the altar of crass materialism merely in order to live, the soul must necessarily become dormant. The great crime of the Teapot Dome investigation was not the condition which was the subject of the investigation, but the investigation itself.

In order to revive a sense of right and justice in America, we shall have to dig up another Theodore Roosevelt or Woodrow Wilson, and they seem to appear only once in a generation. There will be no change so long as we continue rolling up unprecedented pluralities for Hardings and Coolidges.

A Challenge From Tennessee.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some time since T. T. Martin of Mississippi challenged the Society for the Advancement of Atheism to supply six men to debate the question "Should Organic Evolution Be Barred From Tax-Supported Schools?" At last account only one man was forthcoming.

I, being one of the six selected by Mr. Martin, am anxious that the "meet" should materialize. If one of that body of gentlemen will answer the call, I promise him the most courteous treatment, but, withal, a warm welcome, which is somewhat characteristic of Southerners. I am a Tennessean from the State where half the married folks are women; the State which made it legal to cut the tails off of monkeys and make men of them—the man, I mean.

Tell the gentlemen to either "stand up to the rack" or take down their sign.

TWO NATIONS MAKE GIFTS TO CATHEDRAL

Japan Presents Two Vases and Serbia an Altar Cloth to St. John the Divine.

SYMBOLS OF PEACE HOPES

Ambassador Tells of Nippon's Desires—Dr. Manning Accepts Offerings at a Luncheon.

World peace rests upon mutual helpfulness and common understanding, according to Tsuneo Matsudaira, Japanese Ambassador, who spoke yesterday at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor, at which his Government and the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes formally presented gifts to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Brig. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, as Chairman of the Historic and Patriotic Division of the Committee for Completing the Cathedral, presided. The gifts—a pair of cloisonné vases from the Imperial Japanese Government, and an altar cloth embroidered by Belgrade war orphans by the Serbs—were accepted by Bishop William T. Manning. Six other foreign Governments will make gifts to the cathedral later.

"It gives me great pleasure," said Ambassador Matsudaira, "to present to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine a pair of cloisonné vases in the name of my Government. I understand that this cathedral was designed to provide a permanent place of spiritual rest for every one who cares to enter its portals. In the midst of the constant changes and uncertainties of human life, the cathedral will stand as a haven of rest and a source of inspiration to those who are engaged in the busy life of this modern city. It will represent the deepest convictions and the highest aspirations of man, both the conception and the design of the building inspire ideals of love, truth, justice and self-sacrifice.

Desires Peace of World.

"It is in a sense a most fitting place for the cultivation and promotion of the spirit of universal brotherhood and mutual understanding among nations. In the ordering of present international relations, the spirit of mutual helpfulness and common understanding can hardly be emphasized too much. Upon these rest the peace of the world. In them lies the destiny of humanity. Japan has long made it a goal of her national aspirations to live in peace with other nations.

"More recently, particularly since the World War, it has been her constant endeavor in all her international dealings, to translate these aspirations into deeds, and she is determined to follow in the future the same path of peace. Nothing is, therefore, more welcome to her than to see the growth of forces throughout the world making for international understanding and universal peace, and it is a source of great gratification to know that resting in its massive solidity upon the rocks of Morningside Heights, a great cathedral has been built in order to foster the spirit of peace.

"In appreciation of the high ideals in which the edifice was conceived, the Japanese Government has charged me with the most agreeable duty of presenting these vases. In doing so permit me to express my sincere good wish for the successful completion of this splendid structure and my hope for the ultimate fulfillment of the noble mission to which it is dedicated."

A Bond of Brotherhood.

"I often hear it said that Eastern civilization stands for principles apart from those of Western culture," continued the Ambassador. "It is true, indeed, that our history, our manners and customs, our language and our mode of thought are different from yours in many respects, but I feel that these differences are more apparent than real.

"Underneath the outward differences of peoples and nations there stretches a solid basis of common humanity sustaining the edifice of our world culture. Without the brotherhood of common humanity, civilization could not long endure. In this belief, let me express the sincere hope that, standing firmly on this solid foundation of common humanity, the people of both our countries may do their utmost, in unison and cooperation, for the promotion of the common interests and general welfare of mankind.

"I am glad these vases will stand as a lasting testimony to the responsiveness and sympathy that the people of Japan entertain toward a sincere movement, wherever and however conceived, which seeks to develop understanding and good-will among countries and peoples—ideals for the fulfillment of which the cathedral has been brought into existence. They will further serve as an eloquent testimony to the international brotherhood and neighborliness that are uniting, and will always unite, our two nations facing each other across the Pacific."

Bishop Accepts the Gift.

Replying, Bishop Manning said:

"It would be impossible for me to express adequately the pleasure which it gives me to accept in my own name and in the name of the trustees these superb vases as a gift from the Japanese Government. It is indeed a gracious act on the part of your Government to send this beautiful gift to be placed in the great cathedral which we are erecting for the worship of God, who made all nations of men to dwell on the earth and whose children we all are. I remember with pleasure that Colonel Moritz, military attaché to the Japanese Embassy, was one of the first to subscribe to the fund for the army and navy bay in the cathedral.

"The beauty and exquisite workmanship of these vases will remind us of the peculiar genius, the artistic development and the spiritual powers of your great nation and of your important part as a people in the life and progress of the world. And the gift of these vases to the cathedral, the Temple of Christ, whom we worship as the Prince of Peace, will speak to us of the peace and good-will and mutual appreciation which must ever continue to exist, and must grow stronger as each year passes, between America and Japan. I beg that you will convey to your Government our deepest and most heartfelt appreciation of this beautiful gift."

The Serbian offering was made by Leonidas Vodenlitch, Secretary of the Serbian Consulate here.

"I have the honor to present an altar cover," he said, "a modest gift, as a token of Christian solidarity and our everlasting gratefulness to America. The Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be a great monument to the christ tried Christian discipline and social constructiveness. The building of the cathedral will refute all those who think that religious architecture has been rendered obsolete. In the modern world, seeking the salvation through various ways, the erecting of the cathedral is meant to lead ar our wandering steps. My country wish and mine is that this cathedra be brought to its completion to the great honor of Christianity and humankind."

BANCROFT, BRITISH STAGE DEAN, DIES

Sir Squire, Famous Actor-Manager, Succumbs in London at 84 Years.

KNIGHTED BY QUEEN IN 1897

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—Sir Squire Bancroft, famous actor-manager, died in London tonight after a short illness, aged 84. He first appeared on the stage at Birmingham in 1861 and was knighted in 1897 by Queen Victoria for his notable services to his profession. He was manager for twenty years of the old Prince of Wales and Haymarket theatres. He retired from management in 1885 and afterward acted with Irving for a time.

Squire Bancroft, dean of the English stage, was born in London in luxury on May 14, 1841, but his father's early death greatly changed his circumstances, and he acted his first rôle at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, in 1861 at a salary of a guinea a week. He retired from a career of successful management in 1885, having realized a fortune in his own theatre, the Haymarket, the lease of which he purchased in 1879.

His wife, Lady Bancroft, died in 1921. She first appeared on the stage under her maiden name of Marie Effie Wilton as early as 1847. In was during her management of the Prince of Wales Theatre in 1865 that Squire Bancroft made his first appearance in London and met the woman who was to become his wife. They surrounded themselves with the best artists of the day, and frequently played inferior characters themselves.

Squire Bancroft was one of the most prolific of actors. Between 1861 and 1865, playing in the provinces, he appeared in no fewer than 346 parts, and after going to London he appeared in new plays every year.

Associate of Irving and Hare.

Although he retired from management at the early age of 44, he later associated himself with Henry Irving and John Hare, both of whom were knighted, and he himself had knighthood conferred on him by Queen Victoria for notable services to his profession. He devoted much time to "readings" and the rendition of Dickens's "Christmas Carol" for the benefit of hospitals throughout the country, and in this way he raised upward of $100,000 for these institutions. He was elected President of the Actors' Association in 1905, in succession to Sir Henry Irving.

Sir Squire visited New York in 1898 on his way home from Canada, where he had given a series of readings from Dickens for charity. He then revealed that he was no stranger in New York, for he was here once before, in 1859.

"Why, I was present at the first performance of 'Our American Cousin' at Laura Keene's Theatre," the famous actor declared.

"America has never had a better stock company than that of Jefferson, Sothern and Miss Keene herself, and Miss Sarah Stevens and Varrey-Edwin Varrey who is now playing Jack Moody in "The Country Girl" at Daly's. The Boucicaults, too, were playing here when I was in New York before, and I saw the elder Wallack at his theatre down below Broome Street."

He was appointed several years ago as the Northern member of a commission to survey the battlefield area around Petersburg as a preliminary to the possible establishment of a memorial of that battle.

WILL SEEK AIR RECORDS.

Wright-Bellanca Plane to Hop Off at Mitchel Field Today.

Efforts to lower four world's records and six American records for speed, duration and distance with a load of 1,000 kilograms (about 2,205 pounds) will be made today by a Wright-Bellanca cabin passenger airplane, driven by a Wright 200 horsepower "whirlwind" motor. The plane which will be used is the same machine which won the commercial efficiency contest during the Fall air carnival.

WESTCHESTER VOTES $500,000 FOR ROADS

Supervisors Approve the County Engineer's Program for Spanish Construction Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 19.—Portions of roads in the towns of East Chester, Harrison, Rye, the villages of Tuckahoe and Pleasantville and the cities of White Plains and Yonkers which are constructed by the county were authorized today to be reconstructed by the Board of Supervisors, the cost of the work to be about $500,000, of which about $300,000 will be paid by the communities named. The work is part of the Spring and Summer program of road construction and reconstruction mapped out by County Engineer Charles MacDonald and the Good Roads Committee of the Board of Supervisors. The Westchester County Park Commission's recommendations that about two miles of the Mamaroneck River Parkway and about five miles of the Tarrytown-White Plains Cross-County Parkway be abandoned were adopted by the Supervisors on resolutions introduced by Edward P. Barrett, Chairman of the Committee on County Parks.

The two-mile Croton River Parkway project, for which $150,000 was appropriated several months ago, also was abandoned and the money withdrawn. Maps of the area to be covered by the Mamaroneck River Parkway, excluding the part abandoned, were asked of the Park Commission. A small sum will revert to the county due to the abandonment of the two miles of roadway between the Interurban Water Company's pumping station at Winfield Avenue and the Boston Post Road.

Abandonment of the three projects was due to the increase in the prices asked for rights of way, and the belief on the part of the commission and the Supervisors that to pay the increased prices would make the projects cost more than they would be worth to the county. About half a mile of the proposed five-and-a-half-mile Tarrytown-White Plains Cross-County Parkway will be retained, linking up the Bronx River Parkway across to Silver Lake Park and the Mamaroneck River Parkway. For construction and rights of way this would cost about $120,000, Mr. Barrett said, and would mean that the difference between that sum and the $1,600,000 appropriated for the construction of the entire parkway would revert to the county.

GLARING FRAUD BARED ON GERMAN RACE TRACK

Swift Horse Substituted for Slow One and the Latter Is Killed Later.

BERLIN, April 19. — Excessively heavy betting on a rank outsider named Strauss, in a trotting race on the Marienlendorff track near Berlin, has led to the disclosure of one of the rankest swindles ever perpetrated in German track records, in which the life of a valuable race horse was sacrificed in an attempt to cover up the trickery.

When the pari-mutuel betting machines showed that the unknown Strauss was quoted at 27 to 10, the officials became suspicious, and when the outsider ran a brilliant race, winning by many lengths, a veterinarian was told to examine the winner on the grounds that the officials believed he was a substituted horse in the place of Strauss.

The horses had already entrained for Munich, however, but the veterinarian was sent there to make the examination. The trainer Sigrin said, when questioned, that Strauss died en route of heart disease, but it was soon established that the horse which the trainer claimed was Strauss was stabbed to the heart by a thin knife, and further examination showed that the dead animal was nine years old while Strauss was only six.

Though it is believed that a number of persons were implicated in this fraud, Sigrin is said to be the brains of the entire plot.

Another case of fraud in which a horse was the victim, came up before the Berlin courts today, when the evidence showed that a driver, wishing to collect 500 marks insurance which he carried on his horse, piled straw around the animal, soaked the straw and the beast with gasoline, and stood by while the frenzied animal was burned to death.

EDIT BUCHAREST PAPER WITH PISTOLS HANDY

Staff of Epoca Plan Hot Reception at Next Attempt to Wreck Offices.

BUCHAREST, April 19.—Newspaper work here is reaching the point Mark Twain once described.

The Epoca, whose editorial offices were devastated on Saturday by a band of young men variously called hoodlums and students, after the police had confiscated that day's edition, reappears now with an announcement covering the front page that the members of the staff in future will work with loaded revolvers lying on their desks.

The paper denounces the Government as the instigator of the attack and declares it will continue its policy unchanged.

The confiscated edition violently criticized the Patriarch Miron Cristea—one of the Crown Prince's Regents—for "meddling in politics," accusing him of trying to play the rôle of Rasputin and of being a member of the "Palace Camarilla led by Jon Bratiano and Prince Barbu Stirbey."

The Epoca for months has been leading an attack on them and less directly on Queen Marie. Its editor, Grigore Filipescu, is the wealthy son of one of the most famous Rumanian patriots.

Police confiscations of newspaper editions are increasingly frequent. The Government has stationed military patrols at some newspaper offices.

FRANCIS HITCHCOCK DIES ON OLYMPIC

Turf Patron Stricken Suddenly With Heart Disease Day After Sailing for Europe.

OWNER OF FAMOUS RACERS

Steward of The Jockey Club for 31 Years—A Breeder of Thoroughbreds in France.

Francis R. Hitchcock, patron of the turf, died suddenly of heart disease aboard the White Star liner Olympic at sea on Sunday, according to radio advices received here yesterday by the White Star Line, which notified Mr. Hitchcock's relatives in Westbury, L. I. Mr. Hitchcock was 67 years old. He was a brother of Major Thomas Hitchcock and an uncle of Thomas Hitchcock Jr. and Frank Hitchcock, polo players.

Mr. Hitchcock made his home at Sherry's, 300 Park Avenue. His friends were shocked to hear of his death. They did not know his condition was serious, although they said he had recently complained of insomnia. They understood that Mr. Hitchcock, accompanied by his valet, was on his way to France when he sailed on the Olympic early last Saturday morning.

Soon after receiving the radio message of Mr. Hitchcock's death White Star Line officials wirelessed instructions to the Olympic to carry the body to Southampton for transshipment to New York. The Olympic will dock in Southampton probably on Friday.

The only relative of the late Mr. Hitchcock who could be reached in New York was Mrs. J. Averell Clark of Powell Lane, Westbury. Mrs. Clark said that her father was in Aiken, S. C., and that she was trying by long distance to communicate to him the news of her uncle's death.

Son of the Late Thomas Hitchcock.

Francis R. Hitchcock was a son of the ate Thomas Hitchcock, for many years a stockholder in The Sun and long a contributor to the columns of that newspaper under the pen name of Matthew Marshall. He was graduated from Columbia and later studied law, but never took it up as a profession. He was an early devotee of the turf and other outdoor sports, but, unlike his brothers, Thomas and Center, the latter death he was never seen in the saddle as an amateur rider.

He was elected a member of the Jockey Club in 1895 and on Oct. 18 of that year succeeded J. Otto Donner as Steward, which place he held until his death. He was prominent in the organization of the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses and became its President when William C. Whitney died in February, 1904. He held that office until 1908.

Mr. Hitchcock was a Governor of the Coney Island Jockey Club for many years and became its Treasurer in 1908, continuing in that office until dissolution of the turf organization in 1917. He transferred his turf allegiance to France, as did W. K. Vanderbilt, who was President of the Coney Island Jockey Club when the Agnew-Hart bill became a law. Mr. Hitchcock's colors often were seen at Longchamps, Chantilly and other courses near Paris.

He engaged in breeding thoroughbreds in France and was member of a syndicate which bought Rock Sand for $150,000 from the late August Belmont. He took the horse to France. He mated the Meddler mare Tangle with the Derby winner and bred the horse Sandy Hook, which proved a winner as a two, three and four-year-old entry. He also bred and raced Upsalquitch and other winners. Lately Mr. Hitchcock owned only a few horses. He had intended to see some of them race in France this Spring.

Part Owner of Yankee.

He was a part owner of the Futurity winner Yankee after he was returned to the stud. He also owned Dandelion and Decanter, popularly known as the best horses that ever bore his colors in America. W. P. Burch was Mr. Hitchcock's trainer in this country.

Mr. Hitchcock frequently served in the stand as a Steward both at Saratoga and Belmont Park. He spent his time between America and Europe. Part of each Winter he spent with his brother, Major Hitchcock, at Aiken, where he went hunting. In June it was his custom to fish for salmon in Quebec.

He was a member of the Jockey, Turf and Field, Knickerbocker, Racquet and Tennis, Union, Brook, Princeton, Downtown, Westminster Kennel, South Side Sportsman's and Columbia University Clubs.

Funeral services for Mr. Hitchcock will be held in the Church of the Transfiguration at noon on May 5.

POULTRY 'TRUST' PUT ON TRIAL BY STATE

Ottinger Opens Action Seeking Dissolution of Community Corporation in Brooklyn.

PRICE-FIXING IS DESCRIBED

Two Retailers Charge Sahn, Head of Concern, Arbitrarily Set Scale Too High for Profit.

The dissolution of the Community Live Poultry Corporation, charged with controlling the business and fixing prices in poultry markets of Greenpoint and Williamsburg, Brooklyn, is sought in an action brought by State's Attorney General Albert Ottinger which went to trial before Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan in Brooklyn yesterday.

The President of the corporation, Samuel Sahn, and several other officers are under indictment charging them with a violation of the Donnelly Anti-Trust act, making it a misdemeanor to form a corporation to control the supply or sale of a commodity of public use or consumption.

Although Attorney General Ottinger was in court part of the day, the case was conducted for the State by Deputy Attorney General Israel M. Lerner, who has been in charge of the investigation into the affairs of the poultry dealers beginning last January and still going on.

Isador Neuwirth, former Assistant District Attorney, and George D. Zahm of 110 East Forty-second Street represented the corporation. The greater part of the morning session was taken up in selecting a jury, only two witnesses had testified when court adjourned until this morning.

In his opening Mr. Lerner said that he would be able to prove that eight or ten poultry dealers had controlled prices through their corporation to dealers and consumers; that after the corporation had been formed in January, 1923, it did not start business until October and that within a few months it had obtained control of 85 per cent. of the poultry business in its district.

The first witness, Max Hendrick, who had a poultry market at 8 and 10 Garden Street, Brooklyn, testified that he had been made a director of the corporation after other retailers had insisted they be represented on the board. He said that Sahn as President had told the dealers that they must join and that if they did not he would find a way to make them.

The witness said that he had sublet his store to the corporation and had been made a manager of his former store as a branch at a salary of $75 a week, which was later reduced. He said the corporation had forced him to do a retail business only at prices so high as to make it unprofitable. Sahn [illegible] refused to sell him poultry at prices the witness said, after a price fixing committee had failed to negotiate to the satisfaction of both.

Under cross-questioning he admitted that he still owed the company $1,200 for poultry, but declared that he had the money and was willing to pay it under certain conditions.

The next witness called by the State was Michael De Bare, a dealer, with a store at 422 Hooper Street, Brooklyn, who testified that for a time he had been a member of the price fixing committee of the corporation. He told the Court that with other members he had decided the high prices and that Sahn finally had arbitrarily dissolved the committee and then himself fixed the prices so high that the dealers lost business.

De Bare related how the corporation disposed of a competitor, who was undersselling the company, by placing him on its payroll at $75 a week on condition that he follow the community scale.

Under questioning by the defense De Bare admitted that he had paid only $300 for his stock and still owed the corporation for goods.

Twenty Years of Banking on Fifth Avenue

WHEN, in 1906, The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company established its Fifth Avenue Office, the Avenue itself still retained much of the atmosphere of the late '70s. The two old brownstone residences shown in this picture at the South East Corner of 41st Street were converted into Banking Quarters for the Company.

TOWERING 23 stories from pavement to cornice, the new Farmers' Loan and Trust Company Building looks out upon a new Fifth Avenue. In its contrast to the buildings it displaced it epitomizes the almost miraculous development of the Mid-Town Section—"New York's Marvelous Square Mile."

IN 1906—twenty years ago—The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company established its Fifth Avenue Office at Forty-first Street.

In two weeks it will open the doors of its new Fifth Avenue Offices in The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company Building at the same corner, which has been identified with the services of this Office ever since it was opened.

Here is the latest chapter in a story of upward-reaching change which is typically American—the story of Fifth Avenue and its neighborhood.

FROM 1906 TO 1926—AND GOING FORWARD

Twenty years ago, men of large vision, feeling the stir of a new century, began to see the Avenue, not as it was, but as it was to be.

This Company saw eye to eye with them. It saw their need—the need of the Mid-Town Section for convenient headquarters in Trust, Custodian and Safe Deposit matters, Commercial and Personal Banking.

Their need then—through the years of change—and in the future.

So the Fifth Avenue Office was established—the first uptown office of a downtown Trust Company. It has served the Fifth Avenue neighborhood for twenty most stirring years.

It is ready to go forward with the Mid-Town Section to still greater things.

TEXTILE MILLS OPEN; STRIKE ZONE IS CALM

Mass Picketing Halted as 500 Armed Guards Patrol Four Embattled Towns.

FEW WORKERS BACK ON JOB

4,000 Give Weisbord Roses in Wallington, Where They Are Welcomed by Mayor.

MOORE ASSAILS LEADERS

Governor Declares Courts Give All Needed Redress for Wrongs—Will Keep Hands Off.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 19.—The crisis which this vicinity expected today in the textile strike, now in its thirteenth week, was not reached after all.

Union officials estimated that 5 per cent. of the strikers accepted the invitation issued by the mills to resume work today. The employers announced that a considerable number had returned. Reporters who toured the mills district early this morning counted about 600 men and women entering the mill gates.

Sheriff Morgan with 150 special deputies, armed with clubs, guarded the Passaic mills during the day and this evening patrolled the section where the homes of the workers are located. The strike area, including Garfield, Clifton, Passiac and Lodi, was guarded by 500 men. Sheriff George Nimmo was in charge of special Bergen County deputies in Garfield, where he read the Riot act last week. Sheriff Morgan had charge of the Passaic police and a large force of firemen on special strike duty, as well as his special deputies.

Strikers Halted in Garfield.

Strikers who marched toward the Garfield plant of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company were stopped by police outposts, who surrounded the mill within a radius of three blocks on every side. Eight motorcycle patrolmen, thirty on foot carrying automatic shotguns, and a large force of deputy sheriffs guarded the company's gates.

Similar arrangements were made in Passaic, where every corner in the vicinity of the mills was guarded by policemen and special deputies.

Strikers picketed the United Piece Dye Works in Lodi today and marched in a circle round the mill singing "Solidarity Forever." Police Chief George Witte stood in the centre of the circle beating time to the song with his club. Pickets have not had trouble with the Lodi police.

Albert Weisbord, the young university graduate who is leading the strike, addressed an open-air meeting in Wallington. He was accorded an enthusiastic reception from 4,000 strikers, who showered bouquets of roses on him. Weisbord said that the injunction against picketing the Forstmann & Huffmann mill in Garfield would not deter the strikers from continuing their fight against all the mills. He called it "a scrap of paper," and told his followers that as the injunction was a civil and not a criminal process, "nobody can arrest you for violating" it. He promised to test the injunction later in the week.

For the time being, the strikers apparently acceded to Sheriff Charles W. Morgan's arrangement when he entered this city today, and they picketed the mill gates in groups of twelve or less. Mass picketing was abandoned temporarily, though the strikers intimated they had not consented to give it up altogether, despite the assumption of the Sheriff that picketing by thousands of strikers would no longer be tolerated.

The Outdoor Meeting.

The outdoor meeting of strikers in Wallington was held at the request of Mayor Nelkin, who announced himself a believer in free speech and free assemblage. The crowd waited nearly an hour for Weisbord, and cheered him again and again when he stepped on the platform.

Weisbord called himself facetiously a "100 per cent. jailbird," and told the audience that the strikers now had a "100 per cent. jailbird leadership." He denounced the mill owners and declared that the "terror of the bosses' clubs and cossack brutality had been unavailing—the union is ten times stronger than ever before."

Discussing the injunction obtained against the strikers by the Forstmann & Huffmann Company, Weisbord said that injunctions "never broke strikes." The strikers, he predicted, would not permit themselves to be "rushed inside the gates" by "any illegal order to break up our strike."

"Remember," he said, "an injunction cannot run a factory. Remember that it is a piece of paper and you cannot make scabs out of union men with a piece of paper."

He called on the strikers to "pursue the same peaceful, orderly policy as before." He predicted that the mill owners would see "their injunction torn to pieces before their eyes" this week.

"This coming week must test out this injunction," he said. With a penalty of sixty years hanging over him, he added, he and the other leaders could not be frightened.

Untermyer Goes to Capital.

The movement for a Senate investigation of the strike is expected tomorrow to overshadow other local developments in the strike field. Samuel Untermyer, on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, left tonight for Washington and will appear before the Senate Committee on Manufactures tomorrow, when the report of Senator Edwards of New Jersey will be presented. Senator Edwards is known to oppose an investigation. Mr. Untermyer will appear also at the request of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who is pushing the Borah and La Follette resolutions for an immediate inquiry.

In Washington this morning Mr. Untermyer will read a voluminous affidavit prepared by the American Civil Liberties Union alleging violation of constitutional rights of strikers. Before leaving Mr. Untermyer said:

"If the Senate investigation is granted I shall also be willing to act as counsel for the strikers during the inquiry. I am interested in exposing this reign of terror and mob rule by public officials whose duty is to enforce the law. I am particularly interested in developing the facts on which to lay the foundation for the punishment of those officials and the 'higher-ups' whose pliant tools they appear to have been in this campaign of persecution."

Governor A. Harry Moore in Trenton gave out a long statement explaining why he could not interfere in the strike unless the county officials were unable to maintain order. Governor Moore said he was still ready to act as mediator in the strike, but for him to appoint an investigating committee arbitrarily would be futile, as the committee would be without power to summon witnesses, adding that the causes of the strike have again and again been set forth in the press and are very generally known.

After pointing out that the officials in the localities involved in the strike have been duly elected and that the Governor lacks power to remove them, he said:

"The men are entitled to fair and honest judgment, and to this end the courts of our State are open to any one aggrieved by their actions.

"It appears that the group who are leading this strike do not belong in New Jersey, and their legal advisers either do not know the laws of New Jersey or, finding them irksome or unfavorable to the immediate success of their contention, seek to have them peremptorily set aside by appealing to the Governor or to the newspapers, neither of which methods can be successful. There is in New Jersey an orderly and due process of law, which, if intelligently invoked, will give just and lawful relief. There is, in the strike zone, a Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey; one whose duties it is to be in touch with the conditions existing in his district, and one who I know will fearlessly and impartially consider any proper complaint made to him.

"There are in the same zone grand juries made up of the citizens of the counties, who have power to investigate any condition affecting the public weal, and who also have power to indict any officials who are either overzealous or lacking in the performance of their duties.

Agencies Always Ready.

"There is also a Chancellor of New Jersey, who may enjoin even a public official. All of these agencies are practically accessible at any hour of the day or night and are prepared to protect the rights and privileges guaranteed to the citizens by the Constitutions of the United States and New Jersey.

"The Governor has power to do just one thing, and that is to invade the strike zone with the armed forces of the State, and, obviously, this should only be done where the disorder amounts to rioting and bloodshed, and the local authorities are unable to maintain law and order. Such action would, of course, mean the end of the strike, and as far as the strikers are concerned, the loss of their cause.

"The Governor has been in close touch with the situation for weeks through the daily reports of an official and impartial observer. He has been in frequent conference with interested citizens and officials of the strike area, and for several days past the Adjutant General of the State has spent his entire time in the strike zone in close touch with the situation.

"As Governor I shall be glad to cooperate in every way within my power to bring about a settlement of the strike. But I will not be coerced or cajoled into sending the armed forces of the State into the strike zone except as a last resort, and only when I am convinced that such action is necessary to preserve law and order.

"I may say that no such need exists at this time."

Botany Directors Meet.

The directors of the Botany Worsted Mills met today at 200 Fifth Avenue, New York, Mr. Stoehr presiding, and listened to a report on the strike by Colonel Charles F. H. Johnson, First Vice President. The board approved the position of the management, and sustained its officers in dealing with the strike.

A statement issued after the meeting declared that it was the policy of the mill to maintain as high wages if not higher than those in other mills doing the same class of work. The 20 per cent. wage decrease last October, it was said, was absolutely necessary, as the mill would have had to shut down without it.

"Botany Worsted Mills has during slack times provided work for more workers than were actually needed, and as a result we have often had to carry large stocks of goods over long periods.

"The Department of Labor of the State of New Jersey has commended and approved the sanitary and working conditions at the Botany Worsted Mills.

"Our employes have at all times received full opportunity to present any grievances, and their right to do so while in our employ will continue to be respected.

"The strike came entirely unexpectedly. It is now clear that it was stirred up by outside agitators for the purpose of promoting Communism.

"Botany Worsted Mills has remained open and there has been from the beginning a substantial working force.

"The management of the company has agreed with the United States Department of Labor to discuss with the workers in our employ any grievances, and that if they cannot be settled by conference, then to abide by the decision of arbitration conducted by the Department of Labor. This action has the approval of our board.

"Many of our former workers are now applying for employment. Conditions in the trade now are such that the work in hand and in immediate prospect will provide employment for only part of our former employes. It is necessary in the interest of economical operation to employ in each department only enough people to carry on the operation of the mill as a whole."

Norman Thomas, of the League for Industrial Democracy; Arthur Garfield Hays, who has been associated in the defense of the strikers; James Oneal, editor of The New Leader; Judge Jacob Panken of the Municipal Court of New York, and Abraham I. Shiplacoff, of the Pocket Workers Union, will speak at a meeting, protesting against the actions of the New Jersey authorities, Friday evening in Webster Hall, New York.

Goldsmith's Home, Now a Shed, May Be Bought by Free State

LONDON, April 19.—The Irish Free State may acquire and restore the home of Oliver Goldsmith, poet and novelist, at Lissoy, in County Westmeath.

The movement is the result of an appeal by E. P., Gaston, an Irish-American. On a recent visit to Lissoy Mr. Gaston found the rectory in which the poet lived as a boy being used as a cattle shed. He visited President Cosgrave, who sent an inspector to survey the property. It is estimated that it could be bought and restored for $25,000.

Lissoy is supposed to be the scene of "The Deserted Village" and "The Vicar of Wakefield." An apple tree, there, whose fruit Goldsmith is said to have eaten, is still bearing, according to Mr. Gaston.

M'LAUGHLIN TO ASK FOR 3,000 MORE MEN

Mayor Tells Board of Estimate, Which Then Adds to Civil Service Examiners.

McKEE NETTLES WALKER

He Objects to "Indiscriminate" Appropriations, but Votes "Aye" With Colleagues.

During a meeting of the Board of Estimate in Committee of the Whole yesterday, Mayor Walker disclosed that Police Commissioner McLaughlin intended to ask soon for authority to appoint 3,000 additional uniformed policemen. The Police Commissioner, it was said, believed that many recruits were needed for effective protection against criminals and enforcement of the traffic regulations.

Mayor Walker's statement was elicited when the Municipal Civil Service Commission, which conducts the examinations of police candidates asked for four additional investigators and examiners. The Committee of the Whole approved the request.

After the committee had voted to recommend an appropriation of more than $500,000 for repaving items, Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee entered a mild protest against the manner in which appropriations were being recommended for public improvements. "I want to make my position clear on the record," he said. "This board has appointed a special committee to take into consideration the city's financial status and to recommend, in view of that condition, what expenditures are of paramount importance and, with the cooperation of the controller, that committee has tentatively fixed maximum sums which should not be exceeded in various classes of appropriations.

"Despite that procedure, we are now going ahead somewhat indiscriminately as it seems to me, voting money away for this and that purpose, without knowing just where we are to come out. I want to have it appear in the record that I do not think this is being done in a businesslike way."

"I think the procedure that is being followed here is a perfectly orderly and proper one. In the tentative apportionment of available funds for public improvements $5,000,000 was tentatively set aside for repaving projects. If we recommend these items on today's calendar there will still be an approximate surplus of nearly $3,000,000 remaining of the sum."

Mr. McKee contented himself with placing his criticism on record and voted "aye" on the roll-call. The items which aroused his comment included $450,000 for repaving Broadway between Fifty-ninth and Seventy-first Streets, and the west side of Broadway between Ninety-sixth and 106th Streets and $375,000 for repaving the floor of the Manhattan Bridge, which Commissioner Goldman of the Department of Plant and Structures certified was urgently needed.

At the opening of the meeting the room was thronged by property owners and representatives of civic organizations who appeared in connection with the proposed modification of the zoning ordinance which would open up to business a part of the east side of Fifth Avenue which still remains exclusively residential.

Captain William J. Pedrick, Vice President and General Manager of the Fifth Avenue Association, who champions the commercial interests, asked for a further postponement of one month on the ground that other interests which had made common cause with the Fifth Avenue Association desired to be heard through counsel, who had not yet been able to familiarize themselves with the situation.

Opponents of the change contended that further delay in clearing up the uncertainty was unfair to property owners in the district.

At Mayor Walker's suggestion the hearing was postponed for two weeks.

Alderman Peter J. McGuiness, Democratic leader of the Greenpoint district of Brooklyn, spoke against the proposed rescinding of a $950,000 appropriation recommended by the Hylan Administration for a new bridge over Newtown Creek at Greenpoint Avenue. Borough President Guider of Brooklyn also favored the bridge as an important link between Brooklyn and Queens. Mayor Walker, who seemed favorable to the enterprise, wanted to know whether the estimated cost four years ago would be sufficient now. When Commissioner Goldman said he thought it would the Mayor remarked:

"That's the first thing I've heard of the cost of which hasn't gone up in four years!"

The Mayor directed that Commissioner Goldman and Arthur S. Tuttle, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate, report within two weeks whether construction costs had changed materially and what the necessary condemnation of real estate would add to the cost.

The Mayor announced that the special calendar involving the subdivision of the available funds for subway construction, schools, hospital betterment, libraries and also the salaries and wage schedules would be taken up in special executive session at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

COURT UPHOLDS TAX ON INSURANCE FUND

Supreme Bench Rules Income Levy Must Be Paid on Deferred Policy Fund.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—In a decision handed down today by the Supreme Court the action of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York in enforcing the collection of income tax from the New York Life Insurance Company on a large fund set aside for payment of dividends of what are known as deferred policies was sustained.

The Court disposed of four questions presented in this case involving the payment of taxes. They were raised in the suit of the New York Life, petitioner, against William H. Edwards, Collector, and also the case of Edwards, as Collector, against the insurance company.

The first question related to the taxation of overpayments by deferred dividend policy holders. Under the policies, the Court explained, in an opinion read by Associate Justice McReynolds, all overpayments by deferred dividends policy holders must await apportionment until the period named in such policies comes to an end.

For the year 1912 overpayments by deferred dividend policy holders amounted in the case of the New York Life Company to $8,189,918. The Collector refused to deduct the amount named from the total receipts and demanded the tax of 1 per cent.

Zita Seeks to Recover Hapsburg Jewels Pawned by Ex-Chamberlain of Late Emperor

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, April 19.—At the instance of former Empress Zita a French judicial commission is expected here shortly in an effort to ascertain the whereabouts of the Hapsburg Crown jewels, stated to be worth at least $1,125,000, which were pawned with Geneva jewelers by Baron von Steiner, former Chamberlain of the late Emperor Charles, for an insignificant sum in order to raise funds for Charles's unsuccessful aerial attempt to regain the Hungarian throne.

Baron von Steiner was arrested in Paris and extradited to Berne, charged with fraud, but was acquitted. Neither the Swiss nor French authorities know whether the jewels are in Switzerland or France, while the Italian Government has failed to trace a famous Florentine diamond belonging to this Hapsburg collection.

Former Archduke Frederick, who lives at Basle, is helping Zita to regain possession of the jewels and obtain a new trial of the case at Geneva, when the unusual spectacle of an Empress in the witness box may be seen.

POLICE HEAD REPLIES TO FUND CRITICISM

R. A. C. Smith Statement Smoke Screen to Hide Conditions at Camp, McLaughlin Says.

HOYT DEFENDS NEW PLAN

Change in Administration of Relief Money Resulted From Inquiry at Tannersville, He Says.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin characterized yesterday as a "smoke screen to hide conditions at the Police Recreation Camp at Tannersville, N. Y.," the statement issued last Saturday by R. A. C. Smith, former President of the Police Relief Fund, criticizing the present functioning of the fund under a reorganization effected last February by the old Board of Trustees at Mr. McLaughlin's request.

Mr. McLaughlin authorized Deputy Police Commissioner Philip D. Hoyt to make a more detailed statement of the camp conditions, in which Mr. Hoyt told of the current functioning of the relief fund, which is not connected with the camp project.

Later, when informed of the statements of the police heads, Mr. Smith, in his office at 100 Broadway, revealed that within the last month he had personally advanced $1,000 for the immediate relief of the widows of two slain patrolmen, although he no longer is an official of the relief fund.

Intended for Outsiders.

"My statement on Saturday was intended for all those outside the police Department who had aided in the work of building the Police Relief Fund, which amounts to about $2,000,000," Mr. Smith said. "It was based on facts. It was not intended as criticism of anybody. Reference today to the Police Recreation Camp does not alter the situation. I have had no official connection with the Police Camp organization. I declined membership in it because I had all I could do to take care of the relief work. I had to employ a secretary out of my own pocket to manage the distribution of funds to those in need of them as speedily as possible."

Commissioner McLaughlin was ill with laryngitis when he reached Police Headquarters and had to return to his home in Brooklyn. He authorized Deputy Police Commissioner Philip D. Hoyt, however, to make a more detailed statement of objections to conditions at the camp developed through an investigation of its affairs conducted by Thomas Moran, an auditor from Controller Berry's office. Mr. Hoyt said that current appropriations from the relief fund had been paid under the new management to the widows and other relatives of policemen for the months of February and March. When this was called to Mr. Smith's attention he said that the checks were not sent until April 10.

Camp Cost $1,032,414.

In explaining the reorganization of the relief fund, Mr. Hoyt said:

"Commissioner McLaughlin meant no reflection on the former trustees when he requested that the relief fund be placed under the control of city officials and the heads of the various police benevolent organizations. The investigation of the police camp fund was a development of the change in the administration of the relief fund. It has been going on for more than two weeks, and a preliminary report shows that thus far the cost of the camp has been $1,032,414.34."

The police camp scheme was developed by former Commissioner Enright, and the 1,000 shares of stock issued are now held by the relief fund as the result of a loan at a par value of $390,000.

"If the policemen of the city had been consulted about this project they never would have tolerated the spending of so much money for the camp," Mr. Hoyt said. "The money would have been turned into the relief fund. Of the money expended at the camp, $325,000 came from the relief fund before and after the latter fund was incorporated under act of Legislature; $250,000 from the 1925 police field games and between $17,000 and $18,000 from donations."

Friends "Taken Care Of."

Mr. Hoyt said there were indications that relatives and friends of former Mayor Hylan and former Commissioner Enright were "taken care of" with jobs at the camp, and told of William Hylan, reported to be a relative of the former Mayor, being on the payroll with an annual salary of $1,080 and "provided with heat, light and milk." It also was uncovered in the records of the camp, Mr. Hoyt continued, that the firm of Sinnott & Canty, of which a brother of the son-in-law and former secretary of Mr. Hylan, is a member, acted as agent for the camp in obtaining insurance policies.

"Included in the total amount for the camp was $355,000 for improvements 'by day labor,' without competitive bidding," Mr. Hoyt said, "and there is no information on any of the vouchers to show how the money was spent."

He said the cash resources of the camp fund amounted to about $150,000, but added that $255,000, previously appropriated for improvements at the camp, had yet to be paid. Commissioner McLaughlin, Mr. Hoyt said, believed that the present resources of the relief fund, about $2,000,000, including the stock of the police camp, were not ample to meet the future needs of the fund. That was one of the problems the new trustees were preparing to surmount, he added.

CLERICS BACK MOVE TO HALT CRIMINALS

Two-Year Cessation of Parole Activities and Further Child Welfare Work Urged.

HOME CONDITIONS SCORED

Clergymen of Many Creeds in a Brooklyn Conference Adopt Definite Program.

Forty Brooklyn clergymen, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, meeting in the Hotel St. George yesterday under the auspices of the Brooklyn Juvenile Protective Association, adopted a set of resolutions aimed to put the clergy on record behind a definite program of attack on crime.

Following discussion under the chairmanship of Dr. Thomas W. Potterton of the Universalist Church of Our Father, recommendations were made for suspension of Parole Board activities for two years, enlarged policing facilities, purifying of moving pictures, week-day religious education and the establishment of a municipal welfare bureau.

It was voted that these and other resolutions be sent to every State legislator and to every Brooklyn clergyman. The opinion that the Church should utilize its power for a concerted blow at increasing crime was voiced by several speakers as the recommendations were adopted.

Preceding the business sessions, Supreme Court Justice Mitchell May expressed his pleasure in the signs of a religious program to cope with crime, but declared that the situation was essentially a biological and economical problem, not political or religious. The true preventive, he said, was a bettering of home and social life.

"The lawbreaker and the criminal is warped physically and mentally," he said. "He is undersized, weak and backward in everything, save in crime."

Discussing the causes of crime, he said drugs and the automobile had been the two agencies which had contributed most to the rising tide of crime.

Lenient Judges and juries, easy bail and the law's delay had little to do with promoting crime, he said. The bulk of modern criminals thought little of those things when they went out with gun in hand to rob and kill if circumstances were against them, Judge May declared.

Dr. Louis D. Gross, a trustee of the Juvenile Protective Association, submitted a proposal for Saturday morning moving pictures, including a feature, a Bible film and the singing of religious hymns. The rabbis present protested, however, and other ministers were equally insistent that the Church should not be put into a position of fostering attendance at moving pictures.

Other recommendations which were approved urged the press to refrain from publishing crime details in a manner making them attractive, asked the limitation of boxing activities, commended the proposal for a State Crime Commission and suggested a more earnest observance of moral law by the nation and its officials.

Explaining the proposal for a municipal welfare bureau, the resolution advocated that the bureau "do welfare work among wayward children with whom the public schools are not equipped to cope, this bureau to serve as a clearing house in cooperation with all existing welfare organizations to provide psychiatrists and social workers to visit homes and ameliorate conditions in such homes and adjust relationships between parents and children."

FUR STRIKE HEADS VOTE TO MEET EMPLOYERS

Workers' Meeting Tomorrow to Take Final Action on Parley—Long Island Shop Raided.

Chairman of the striking fur shops, representing more than 12,000 fur workers in this city, met yesterday afternoon at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street, and approved a proposal to hold a conference among strikers, employers and Federation of Labor officials in an endeavor to end the long-drawn-out struggle.

The conference plans were explained by Ben Gold, leader of the strikers, who said that the recent dissension between the International Fur Workers' Union and the Joint Board of the local Furriers' Union had failed to obscure the real purpose of the strike. Friction within the union, Gold said, had been merely a manoeuvre on the part of the manufacturers, who thought that they could disrupt the opposition and thereby win the strike.

The strikers themselves will vote on the proposal at a mass meeting tomorrow, it was announced, in a hall to be determined this morning.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I., April 19.—About a dozen New York gangsters, said by the police here to be New York fur strikers, severely beat two owners of a local fur shop this afternoon, after driving two young women workers, not members of the union, into the street. The screams of one woman were heard by the police and two men were arrested after a long chase.

Jack and Michael Barnett were in the shop on Observer Street with Miss Mary Forkas and Miss Trigona Vasdeca, employed since the strike, when the strangers entered. The men told the young women they would have to join the union, and offered to take them to New York to do so, but the women refused.

The Barnetts were ordered to disrobe partially, so they would be unable to give an alarm. The gang then cut telephone wires, pulled down shades and damaged the furs in the place. When the young women ran into the street, some of the gang pummeled the Barnetts so severely that one was removed to the hospital and the other was badly cut and bruised.

EIGHT JURORS PICKED TO TRY WHITTEMORE

EXPECT TO GET REST TODAY

All but One of Eight Married With Families—Defense Seeks the Fathers of Sons.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 19 (AP).—Two youthful attorneys faced a veteran prosecutor in the Erie County Court House here this morning to contend for the life or death of Richard Reese Whittemore. The robber was placed on trial for the murder of two Marine Trust Company guards during a $93,000 payroll hold-up last Oct. 29. He sat by his lawyers with the manner of an interested spectator.

If the robber felt any anxiety he displayed no evidence of it. The ten days since his arraignment, which he has passed in a double-locked cell in the county jail, seemed only to have raised his spirits. His former sullenness was gone. Dressed in a newly pressed blue suit with a white pin stripe, an English shirt with an almost imperceptible check, a striped tie and patent leather shoes, he followed with deep interest the selection of eight of the twelve jurors who will decide his fate.

When the tiresome monotony of the proceedings was relieved on one or two occasions by humorous incidents, Whittemore smiled his appreciation as broadly as any one else in the courtroom. His attorneys have stanchly protested from the start that he was in no way connected with the Buffalo crime, and Whittemore seems confident of his acquittal.

Prosecutor Also Confident.

But District Attorney Guy B. Moore also is confident. He seemed almost cocksure today. Throughout most of the session he sat beside a small table with his head propped up on his right arm. His examination of trial jurors was done almost mechanically. But once or twice he roused himself to send a shaft of sarcasm flying in the direction of W. Bartlett Sumner, the principal counsel for the defense.

Sumner was for eight years an assistant in Mr. Moore's office, and the District Attorney's attitude today was that of a eacher. Sumner was plainly annoyed by this attitude and took no pains to hide the fact.

Sixty-one trial jurors were rejected during the day. Thirty of these were excused by the Court. Fifteen were challenged by the prosecution and sixteen by the defense. Thirty challenges are allowed to each side. Three of the eight jurors chosen were farmers and the others a broker, a realtor, a hardware dealer, a merchant and a clerk. In order of their selection they were:

Roscoe C. Stacey, 60 years old, hardware dealer; William A. Kidd, 50, architect; Albert J. Frank, 60, clerk; Clyde F. Horton, 50, farmer; Edwin M. Lee, 46, broker; Roy C. Bradley, 30, farmer; George F. Christ, 48, realtor, and Frederick M. Lochnicht, 58, merchant.

All but one are married and have families. The youngest is 30 years old and the others range in age from 40 to 60. It became obvious early in the day that the defense wanted elderly jurors, preferably with grown sons of their own.

Five of the eight jurors selected were chosen during the morning session. The first fourteen trial jurors called were excused. The fifteenth, Roscoe C. Stacey, was accepted and became Juror 1. Four others were also chosen almost in succession. During the afternoon, however, the work of selecting jurors proceeded more slowly and when court adjourned only eight had been obtained. Even then court officers were greatly surprised, as they had estimated that three or four days would be required to pick a jury.

Expect to Get It Today.

Opinion now is that the remaining four jurors will be chosen at the morning session tomorrow and that the prosecution will begin to present its case during the afternoon.

Despite the evident interest in the Whittemore case, comparatively few persons were at the court house when the trial began at 10 A. M. It had been widely advertised that only persons connected with the case would be permitted in the court room, but despite this ruling the court was well filled at all times.

Extra precautions were taken by the police against the possibility of escape. Squads of patrolmen lined the corridors of the court house, and when Whittemore was brought through the tunnel from the county jail he was handcuffed to Deputy Sheriffs John Luders and Egbert Owens. The handcuffs were not removed until he reached the seat assigned to him facing the Judge's bench.

As Whittemore was entering the court room he was confronted by a number of photographers. Heretofore he has always displayed intense hatred of cameras. He kicked one from a photographer's hands when he arrived here. But today he only smiled when asked if he would pose and readily consented.

The first trial juror called was Raymond C. Bittell, a mechanical engineer. He was asked if he believed in capital punishment for murder in the first degree and replied that he did. But in reply to another question he declared that he would not vote for the conviction of any one on circumstantial evidence, whereupon he was challenged by the District Attorney and was excused by the Court.

Mr. Moore's questioning of trial jurors was brief. He seldom asked more than three questions—whether the juror believed in capital punishment, whether he favored capital punishment for first degree murder and whether he was in accord with the law which holds that if several men participated in a hold-up and one of their number commits murder all are equally guilty.

MILK INQUIRY FAILS TO STOP GRAFTING

Witnesses Expected to Swear 5 Cents a Can Still Is Being Paid.

BRONX HEARING TODAY

Dr. Harris Promises Immunity to Dealers Who Aid in the Investigation.

JUSTICE LEVY TELLS PLANS

Queens Prosecutor Expects to Question Hylan and Hirshfield Today.

Witnesses are expected to testify before the Bronx County Grand Jury today that, despite the plea of guilty to a charge of extortion by Harry Danzinger last week and the publicity which the milk scandal has received, dealers in bootleg milk at the present time are continuing to pay protection money to persons formerly associated with Danzinger in the collection of tribute.

Some of these witnesses, who would confess to being illicit milk vendors, would swear, it was said last night, that they were paying graft at the rate of 5 cents for every can of milk they handled and that payments still were being made, not only in the Bronx, but in Manhattan and Brooklyn as well. They would also tell, it was reported, of a recent secret meeting of milk bootleggers where $2,000 was raised with which it was hoped that District Attorney John E. McGeehan of the Bronx might be "reached" and the present investigation there called off.

In connection with the expected revelations, Dr. Louis I. Harris, Commissioner of Health, last night agreed to grant immunity from prosecution, as far as his department was concerned, to all who testified of wrongdoing before the Grand Jury in the Bronx today. Fear that their permits as milk dealers might be revoked had prevented many of those who have been paying graft from coming forward, it was said. Dr. Harris agreed at a conference yesterday afternoon with Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy that he would take no action to bar them from legitimate business in the future.

Expects to Reveal a Plot.

"I propose to charge the Bronx Grand Jury at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow in connection with this scandalous situation," said Justice Levy after spending two and a half hours with Dr. Harris in chambers. "The Grand Jury in the Bronx ordinarily meets every Tuesday, but I shall direct it to continue its sessions from day to day until this matter is disposed of.

"I do not direct the procedure before the Grand Jury as far as the calling of witnesses is concerned. I think that Dr. Harris will be a witness tomorrow but I do not believe that Thomas J. Clougher, who was secretary to former Health Commissioner Monaghan, will be called. It may be that the stories told by witnesses tomorrow will suggest the names of other witnesses who will be subpoenaed.

"I am sure that the testimony will reveal bribery in connection with the milk situation and I am confident that it will disclose conspiracy and extortion. It may even reach out to the poisoning of milk. That's the most important thing and the thing I am most interested in, as I told Danziger. Poisoned milk touches the home life and it means the poisoning of babies. This is the thing that I am going to stress before the Grand Jury."

After the conference Dr. Harris said Justice Levy had asked him to go to the Bronx today and present to the Grand Jury evidence he had obtained of extortion, adulteration, more extortion and bribery. He said he would be there. He went on:

May Investigate All Foods.

"I am not authorized to speak for Justice Levy, but it is impossible to say at the present time how far the ramifications of this investigation may extend. It is possible that it may widen to include all sources of food supply for the city. I am concerned chiefly with remedying conditions and I do not wish to go into personalities expect so far as I must to clean matters up. Nothing has developed which would lead me to believe that former Health Commissioner Monaghan was involved in the milk scandal or that he had guilty knowledge of it."

District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe of Queens County said last night that he expected to question former Mayor Hylan and former Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield concerning the milk situation today.

District Attorney Newcombe has called the Queens Grand Jury to meet in special session next Thursday to hear testimony in the milk scandal. Dr. Harris will be among the witnesses called, as will Dr. Monaghan and eight or nine other persons.

Chief Milk Inspector Arthur K. McRoberts of Jersey city, suspended last Friday by Mayor Frank Hague, received orders yesterday to appear before the Mayor tomorrow to answer charges of neglect of duty. It was also announced at the Mayor's office that Frank A. Fredericks and Harry F. Kelly, Milk Inspectors, had been suspended and would be summoned to answer similar charges.

Commissioner Harris yesterday returned to Jersey City some of the samples taken in the raid on 232 milk wagons last Friday morning. Analysis at the Department of Health laboratories here showed the mil

World's Record Set by Miles in Winning Boston Marathon

MILES, 18, CAPTURES BOSTON MARATHON

Canadian, Running His First Race of More Than 10 Miles, Sets World's Record.

STENROOS FINISHES SECOND

DEMAR HOME A POOR THIRD

Four-Time Winner Falters Under Terrific Pace—Finnish-American A. C. Takes Team Prize.

BOSTON, April 19 (AP).—A youth of 18, running his first Marathon race, set a new world's record today. John C. Miles of Sydney Mines, N. S., was first home in the Thirtieth Boston A. A. Marathon in a field of eighty-eight runners, which included Alvin Stenroos of Finland, Olympic champion, and Clarence De Mar of Melrose, four times winner of the event. The winner's time was nearly four minutes under the world's record set by De Mar over the same course in 1924.

It was a two-man contest almost from the start at Hopkinton. Miles drew away from the field at Natick, five miles from the starting line, pounded along on the heels of the Olympic champion to Lake Street, five miles from home, and in the final stretch sprinted away to finish 400 yards in the lead.

The Nova Scotia youth set a pace that forced Stenroos himself to clip 1-5 of a second from the old record. Miles's time was 2:25:40 2-5. Stenroos covered the 26 miles 385 yards in 2:29:40. The old record was 2:29:40 1-5.

De M r Finds Pace Too Fast.

The forty-eight-year-old veteran, De Mar, who won the event in 1911, 1922, 1923 and 1924 was a poor third at the finish line at the Boston A. A. clubhouse here. His time was 2:32:15. De Mar started the favorite and was cheered by thousands at every checking point along the route, but the pace was too fast for the Melrose sprinter.

William Kennedy of Port Chester, N. Y., the only other former winner entered in the race, finished in eighth place in 2:44:01. Kennedy was the victor in 1917 and has competed in every Boston Marathon for years.

The Finnish-American A. C. of New York captured the team trophy, given this year for the first time in connection with the race. Entries from this club finished second, sixth and seventh in the Marathon. They were, in order, Stenroos, Karl Koski and Nestor Erickson.

1. John C. Miles, Sydney Mines, N. S., 2:25:40 2-5.
2. Albin Stenroos, Finland, 2:29:40.
3. Clarence De Mar, Melrose, 2:32:15.
4. Albert R. Michelsen, Port Chester, 2:34:03 2-5.
5. Wallie Carlson, Dorchester, 2:40:25.
7. Nestor Erickson, New York, 2:42:35 2-5.
8. William Kennedy, Port Chester, N. Y., 2:44:01.
9. J. Foxcroft Carleton, East Sandwich, 2:44:20.
10. Arthur R. Scholes, Toronto, 2:48:14.
11. Thomas E. Quinlan, Medford, 2:53:32.
12. Christopher Bolakos, Osterville, 2:53:49.

Young Miles, the first Canadian to win the event since Edouard Fabre of Montreal led the field in 1915, was fresh at the finish. He said later that he had never before entered in a race over a course of more than ten miles. Next week he is to engage in a three-mile race.

Born in Cardiff.

Although born in Cardiff, Wales, he has spent most of his life in Sydney Mines, N. S., where he drives a grocery wagon. He has worked in the coal mines, but not as a miner. He was trained for the race by his father, John W. Miles, who formerly was a boxer. Miles had never run over the Hopkinton-Boston course, but walked over it once to study the terrain. Both of his parents were at the clubhouse to greet him when he broke the tape at the finish.

Three countrymen of Miles finished among the first fifteen. They were Arthur R. Scholes of Toronto, who was tenth; James A. Dellow of Toronto, thirteenth, and Francis T. O'Connell, Montreal, who was in fourteenth position.

In winning the club trophy the Finnish-American A. C., New York, had a total of 15 points. The Cygnet A. C., Port Chester, N. Y., was second with 32 points, by placing Michelsen in fourth place, Kennedy in eighth and John Rossi in twentieth. The Gladstone A. C., Toronto, was third with 45 points, the Millrose A. A., New York, fourth, with 74, and the Dorchester Club, Boston, fifth, with 84.

After the race Stenroos said that the only difficulty he had found with the course was among the Newton Hills, where the steep grade wore down his strength. Stenroos had complained that the course was too short. At the finish today he said he believed it to be long enough.

DeMar congratulated the winner and then said:

"He's a wonderful runner. If at 18 he can better my record by four minutes, I don't know what he will be doing after he has been running seventeen years and has reached my age."

Stenroos Sets Early Pace.

Stenroos forged ahead with Wallie Carlson of Dorchester in the first five-mile stretch to South Framingham, covering the distance in 31 minutes 14 1-5 seconds, the best time on record for the course. Ten yards behind DeMar was bunched with a score of other contestants, including Karl Koski, James P. Henigan of Medford, and Miles.

Stenroos was running easily with a long stride and Carlson was shoulder to shoulder with the Olympic champion. Strung out behind the leaders at short intervals were Louis Gregory, New York; Michelsen, Henigan, Herb Tranter, New York, and Silas D. McLellan of Boel, N. S.

At Natick, nine miles from the start, Stenroos had drawn away and was leading Miles, who was in second place, by 20 yards. His time at this point was 12:51:46, which was 14 seconds better than the course record. Strung out behind were Gregory, DeMar, Koski, Michelsen, Carlson and Henigan. DeMar was 50 yards behind the leader.

At Wellesley, the half-way point of the course, Stenroos led Miles by 20 seconds. He had covered the distance from Natick in 1 hour 3 minutes 20 seconds. Gregory held third position, passing the checking point at Wellesley a minute and a half after Stenroos. DeMar was fourth, Carlson fifth and Koski sixth. The field was now well strung out along the road.

Miles Cuts Down on Leader.

Miles cut down Stenroos's lead between Wellesley and Woodland Park Hotel in Auburndale, a distance of four miles. Although the champion was running strongly, the Nova Scotian was only two-fifths of a second behind at this checking point. Carlson was third, three minutes behind Miles, and strung out behind him were De Mar, Michelsen and Koski.

At the top of the Newton Hills, six miles from the finish, Stenroos and Miles were running neck and neck, but the Canadian appeared leg weary while the Olympic champion showed no sign of distress. They had held their lead over the rest of the field over the hardest three miles of the course.

DeMar was five minutes behind the leaders at this point. As he came up, running with easy stride in spite of the long stretch of upgrade, he received a hand from the waiting crowd. Carlson was next to pass, about fifty yards behind DeMar.

Miles took the lead in the next three miles, passing the Hotel Beaconsfield in Brookline, three miles from the finish. He was fifty yards in advance in Stenroos. Miles drew away quickly in the next mile, reaching Coolidge Corner nearly 300 yards ahead of Stenroos. The leader's time for this distance on the course was 2 hours 11 minutes 23 seconds, setting a new record.

At Governor's Square, a mile from the finish line, Miles had maintained his advantage over Stenroos and appeared a certain winner. Miles appeared fresh as he broke the tape at the Exeter Street clubhouse of the Boston A. A. Stenroos also was fairly fresh after the hard struggle.

The men under command of Colonel Wade H. Hayes will sail on the Carmania on May 8, and the contest will be held at Bisley on May 31 and June 1.

RICKARD-DEMPSEY PLAN SIGNING TODAY

Promoter, in Fort Worth, Awaits Arrival of Champion to Clinch Title Bout.

TUNNEY HIS FIRST CHOICE

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 19 (AP).—Tex Rickard arrived here today to sign articles of agreement tomorrow with Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion, for a championship match next August or September in which Gene Tunney probably will be the contender for Dempsey's crown.

The heavyweight champion will arrive here from El Paso either late tonight or early tomorrow. All arrangements for the signing of the articles were conducted by wire and were completed before Rickard left New York.

Dempsey endeavored to have Rickard meet him in El Paso Saturday, but the promoter asked Dempsey to meet him further East. Fort Worth was chosen because Rickard's old home was at Henrietta, not far west of here.

"Tunney, in my opinion," said Rickard, "is the logical man to meet Dempsey. Tunney is a better fighter than Wills and for that reason I expect to send him in."

Rickard explained that he had Tunney already under contract and that as soon as Dempsey signs everything will be in readiness. The fight will take place Aug. 12, or Sept. 2 or 16 in the Yankee Stadium, New York City.

Rickard was met here by Guy L. Waggoner, a life-long friend.

Dempsey Ready to Fight.

EL PASO, Texas, April 19 (AP).—Jack Dempsey left El Paso tonight for Fort Worth, where he will meet Tex Rickard tomorrow and discuss the terms for a fight with Gene Tunney. The champion was confident that the conference would result in a meeting with Tunney in New York late this Summer.

"I expect to stay in Fort Worth only long enough to meet Rickard and sign if he is ready with a definite proposition," said Dempsey. "From there I will go to Asheville, N. C., for a three-day period of intensive training."

Although the champion characterized the arrival of Gene Normile as "of no significance," reports here from San Diego stated that the San Diego sportsman had accepted a position as Dempsey's manager.

"Normile is just a good friend of mine; put it that way," said the champion. "He has nothing to do with my business affairs and joined the party in order to accompany us to the Asheville camp. He will probably attend the Fort Worth conference, but it will not be as my manager."

If Tex Rickard signs Dempsey today it is expected a showdown soon will be declared on the critical situation involving the championship. Opposition to a meeting between Dempsey and Tunney at the Yankee Stadium still is entertained by the State Athletic Commission. Chairman James A. Farley has repeatedly declared he will not, under any circumstances, tolerate a bout for Dempsey in which the champion's opponent will be anybody but Wills. It is understood that rather than permit Dempsey to dodge a Wills bout Chairman Farley is prepared to resign from the commission if his views on the matter are overruled by Commissioners George E. Brower or William Muldoon.

Rickard, therefore, is exposing himself to the wrath of the board in negotiating with Dempsey for any contest save a Wills bout. If the promoter, in the face of the opposition to a Dempsey-Tunney bout here, attempts to take the match to his arena in Jersey City, the license of the Madison Square Garden, operating under a corporation of which Rickard is the President, will be revoked. This statement also has been made by Chairman Farley repeatedly.

As far as could be learned yesterday, there were no new developments to the Dempsey-Wills situation. Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills, in the absence of any definite word from Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons, for whom Mullins signed a contract last Winter, declared he intended to bide his time and await further developments in the matter.

FAVORS FIRMER POLICY.

Tad Jones Says Stricter Football Officials Are Needed.

NEW HAVEN, April 19 (AP).—An iron-handed policy on the part of football officials is favored by T. A. D. Jones, head coach of the Yale football team. Speaking at the first annual meeting of the Connecticut Board of Football Officials here tonight, he said that officials are needed who, when they see a foul committed, no matter how slight, will call it and apply a penalty. Failure to do so, he continued, would result in a loss of confidence on the part of the players in the ability of the official.

Jockey Who Rode Schwartz Horse First In the Grand National Dies From Fall

LONDON, April 19.—William Watkinson, the jockey who rode Jack Horner, the horse owned by A. Charles Schwartz of New York, to victory recently in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, died today of injuries received when his horse fell in a race at Eglinton last Saturday. Watkinson had long been a jockey, but occupied an obscure position until he won the Grand National. As a result of his victory with Jack Horner Mr. Schwartz gave him $5,000.

Watkinson rode a heady and clever race on Jack Horner in the Grand Nation, getting the horse, which Mr. Schwartz bought two weeks before the race, home three lengths ahead of Old Tay Bridge. The latter was first over the last jump, but Watkinson shook Jack Horner up on the flat. Watkinson's mount was one of the fifteen survivors of the field of thirty-one that started.

FINNEGAN DEFEATS STEIN ON POINTS

SCHWARTZ BEATS WEXLER

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

A crowd of about 3,500 fight fans saw Honey Boy Finnegan, the Boston featherweight, batter his way to the decision over Ruby Stein, the Brooklyn boxer, last night in the main ten-round bout at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn. Judges James Riley and Herman Kahn and Referee Jed Gahan gave Finnegan the decision after ten one-sided rounds.

There was no question of the winner when the final bell ended the bout. Finnegan won every one of the ten rounds, subjecting Stein to a severe beating. The Boston lad, a southpaw boxer, presented a style which Stein could not solve and with stiff right jabs and snappy left hooks and uppercuts Finnegan pelted his rival through every one of the ten rounds.

In the third round and in the fifth, Stein countered with solid right smashes to the body, which hurt Finnegan, but these attacks were mere flashes compared to the steady work of the Boston boxer. Finnegan took the offensive with the opening bell and held it throughout.

Stein Takes Trouncing.

In the first round two solid left hooks to the mouth split Stein's lower lip and brought the blood in a stream. Finnegan made this injury the target through each succeeding round and seldom missed with any of his punches. In the fourth Finnegan curved over a right hook which brought the blood from Stein's left ear. Finnegan weighed 128¾ pounds and Stein 131 pounds.

Corporal Izzy Schwartz, east side flyweight, received the decision over Manny Wexler, Harlem youngster, in the semi-final bout, limited to six rounds. The contest was originally scheduled for ten rounds, but was cut by order of the State Athletic Commission to permit the main bout to start at 10 o'clock, as is provided in the commission rule.

It was an interesting and satisfactory battle. Wexler was the aggressor, but Schwartz's clever boxing and clean hitting overcame the efforts of Wexler on the attack. Schwartz weighed 111¾ pounds and Wexler's weight was 115 pounds.

Kirby in Hard Tussle.

Tom Kirby, the Boston light-heavyweight who formerly was America's amateur champion, battled to a draw with Billy Vidabeck of Bayonne in the first of the ten-round bouts. The decision met with a howl of disapproval from the fans. Some thought Kirby entitled to the honors, while others thought Vidabeck won.

Vidabeck was the aggressor throughout the fight, but was wild at times in his attack, while Kirby boxed cleverly on the defensive and scored repeatedly with clean rights and lefts to the body and head. It was a close fight and a fast one. Kirby weighed 168¾ and Vidabeck 172¾ pounds.

Cy Shindel, Kingsbridge middleweight, knocked out Patsy Yodice of South Brooklyn in the fifth round of their scheduled six-round preliminary bout. A right uppercut to the chin stretched Yodice on the canvas in two minutes, 55 seconds of the fifth round and the Brooklyn youngster was counted out. Shindel weighed 152 pounds and Yodice weighed 163 pounds.

CRICKET INVASION AROUSES ENGLAND

London Crowds So Dense That Australians Escape Through Back Door of Hotel.

10,000 AT VICTORIA STATION

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 19.—The Australian cricket test team is here and had its first practice this afternoon at Lord's.

This may not sound unduly impressive in New York, but in London it means almost as much as news that England has been suddenly invaded by Italy. It requires at least half of the front page of every newspaper to chronicle it. It signifies cheering crowds, clamoring autograph hunters and great excitement. It means, in short cricket, the strange sport where the ball is thrown on the ground not as a gesture of dissatisfaction with the umpire, but as the integral feature of the game.

The Australian test team represents the cream of antipodean cricket and it will shortly compete with the flower of English cricketers in a series of test matches for the trophy known affectionately as The Ashes.

Professional cricketers are not paid so highly as American baseball players. They cannot sell their cinema rights or expect to do star turns in vaudeville. But as idols of the public they take second place to none.

Exploited by Cable.

The selection of the Australian team, its preliminary form in Australia, every detail of its doings on the long voyage to this country and every possible contingency and circumstance likely to affect the forthcoming contests with the English wielders of the willow have been exploited by cable every day for months.

Australian cricket experts accompanied the team as special representatives of English newspapers, and the eleven was met by London journalists on its first arrival in Europe. Every minute of its tour of Italy and Switzerland, including its thoughts when it watched Helen Wills play tennis for its benefit, were faithfully recorded.

Something like 10,000 persons assembled at the Victoria station to greet the visitors upon their arrival here Saturday. So dense was the crowd waiting in the Strand to see them today and obtain their autographs that the Australians, who are modest men, though heroes, urgently demanded their way to the back door of the Hotel Cecil, and by twos and threes they slipped out to the Australian House, where they were officially welcomed by Colonel Amery, Secretary of the Dominions.

Many of the visitors are married men, but Australian cricket authorities had decreed that their wives—it was ungallantly explained not for fear of distraction but for love of harmony—must stay on the other side of the world. Colonel Amery suggested it would be only fair to send the wives of the English players to Australia.

The Giant Gregor at Play.

This afternoon the visitors, rangy, serious-looking men, were hard at practice on Lord's famous cricket ground. There was the giant Gregor, batsman, who is said to be able to hit them like Babe Ruth, though it is true that he has a bigger bat; Collins, the Australian captain, who never fails to guess the spin of a coin that decides which team shall go in first, and Everett, new but noted as a fast bowler.

Fast bowlers are really fast. Muirhead, the American baseball expert, who has been engaged by the cricket team to coach its fielders in the art of low fielding, admitted this today.

"I tell you," he said, "I would be just a little bit nervous about standing in front of those wickets while that ball is being slung at me so hard."

English cricketers have a good deal to learn about fielding, but Australians, who play baseball themselves part of the year, throw like the big leaguers in America.

The first test match will take place on June 12. England, after many defeats, feels pessimistic about the outcome.

"In the Spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-seven different kinds of weather inside of twenty-four hours," once complained Mark Twain.

Too bad he didn't do his countin inside of a Scotch Mist*! Wouldn't have minded then.

Spring is certainly a quick-change artiste, but she can't work her changes too quickly for these handsome cheviot overcoats; they easily keep up with all the weather's whims.

Scotch Mists* are made our special way to be wet-proof as well as good-looking, in browns, grays, blues, blacks and mixtures.

Woerner's Single in 7th Drives Shefflot Over the Plate With Winning Run.

HARRINGTON HURLS WELL

Landry Leads Maroon Attack With 3 Hits—C. Cronin Gets Homer and Double for Losers.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 19.—The Fordham University nine got the jump on Boston College at Alumni Field this afternoon and emerged a 4 to 3 victor in one of the most exciting games seen on the local field in years. Tex Landry led the Fordham attack with three hits in four trips to the plate, scoring two of his team's runs.

Joe Harrington hurled a good game for Fordham, although C. Cronin drove out a home run and Weston a triple in Boston College's bid for victory in the eighth and ninth innings. The work of the Fordham infield was particularly effective and frequently proved a lifesaver for the visitors.

In Fordham's half of the first inning Landry doubled, was sacrificed to third and scored on a passed ball. White was passed and Landry hit safely in the third and two runs were scored when Woerner singled and Clancy was safe on an error. The decisive Fordham tally came in the seventh with the bases full when Woerner drove in Shefflot with a single to centre field.

Boston tallied in the first inning when C. Cronin doubled and scored on W. Cronin's single. C. Cronin hit a home run in the eighth and Weston tripled in the ninth, scoring on Costigan's infield out. Extremely cold weather discomforted the 3,000 spectators.

Braves Again Bow to Giants Before Shivering Crowd, 8 to 3

By HARRY CROSS.

The Giants took another game away from the Boston Braves up at the Polo Grounds yesterday by an 8-to-3 score. The event was important enough to hoist them into first place. When the game was over about 1,000 spectators had survived the cold and hobbled home to get revived. The valuable hands of the New York players were frost-nipped, which was the main reason that three errors were chalked against them. The Braves were so thoroughly frozen they didn't get near enough to the ball to make errors.

The Giants were bundled up in extra clothing and were better fortified against the bleak than either the Boston players or the spectators. Ross Young wore three heavy undershirts, which made him look as if he had gained forty pounds on home cooking.

The Hakoah soccer players from Vienna were at the game, and the first thing they asked was why the ball players were not on skates. They didn't know what the ball game was all about, but they did like the peanuts. They mentioned the fact that when they left Vienna they understood they were going to the United States, and they wondered how they happened to land in Labrador.

Manager Bancroft shook up his lineup and placed himself at the head of the batting order. He probably did this so that he could get his turn at bat over as quickly as possible and get back to the bench and wrap himself up in a blanket.

Ryan Faces Ordeal.

Bill Ryan, who pitched for the Braves, did the most suffering. Both the cold and the New York bats got him and got him good. After he had been slammed for four hits and as many runs in the sixth inning he was hurried to the steam room, and Hearn pitched the last two innings without giving the Giants a hit. Hearn must be an Eskimo.

Zeke Barnes pitched the whole game for the Giants and had the situation in hand all the way. The Braves didn't get a run off him until the sixth, when Burrus clicked a double to left and scored on Wilson's single.

By that time the Giants were out in front with four runs. They gathered a couple in the first. Lindstrom singled and went to third when Frisch smacked a single to right. Young's sacrifice fly scored Lindstrom and Frisch stole second. He beat it to third on Meusel's sacrifice fly and scored on Kelly's single.

In the fifth Lindstrom singled again and went to third on a double by Frisch. Again Young scored Freddy with a sacrifice fly, Frisch tearing to third on the same play. Meusel's second sacrifice fly scored Frisch.

Braves Score One.

The Braves got another run in the seventh. E. Taylor, hitting for Ryan, drew a ticket, moved along on Banny's out and Johnston's single, and scored while Brown was forcing Johnston at second. In the ninth Gibson rattled a double to right and scored when Bancroft whistled a double to left.

It was a momentous day for Lindstrom at the bat. He had a triple, two singles and a sacrifice in four times up. A perfect day for him. Jimmy Johnston, the former Brooklyn veteran, is carrying on a batting all of his own this season. He got three singles yesterday, and is hitting the ball just as heartily as any of his younger confreres.

The ball players are greatly disturbed about the weather. They cannot find a thing in their contracts which calls for them to play ball when the thermometer flirts around zero. Yesterday during the game when a few flakes of snow started to fall, the players began to inquire about the trains for Florida.

ATHLETICS DIVIDE TWO WITH RED SOX

Groves Hurls Them to 3 to 1 Victory in Morning, but Boston Retaliates in Afternoon.

BOSTON, April 19 (AP).—The Red Sox and Athletics divided the Patriots' Day twin bill here today. While Lefty Groves held the Sox to three scattered hits his teammates thumped Wingfield for seven safeties and took the morning encounter by a score of 3 to 1.

In the afternoon 15,000 fans gathered to see the home team upset the Mackmen, 2 to 1, in a game featured by sensational fielding on the part of the Boston outfit. Ira Flagstead turned in several circus catches in the outfield, cut off two Philadelphia runs at the plate and headed a four-man double play that nipped a threatening rally. Bischoff's single, following a single by Rigney and Herrara's double, accounted for the Red Sox runs.

M'GRAW PITCHES ROBINS TO VICTORY

Prince Bob Limits Phils to 5 Hits and Team-Mates Turn In 4-to-2 Triumph.

BROOKLYN BUNCHES BLOWS

Makes Three Safeties and Three Runs In Third Off Dean, With McGraw Starting Rally.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 19.—If pitching alone won pennants the Robins would be waving flags with all the fervor of George M. Cohan. Today another member of the staff climbed the hill for the first time this season and started off like a whirlwind. This time it was Prince Bob McGraw who stopped the Phillies and he did it in a manner that was worth telling about.

Just five hits were all that he allowed and only one of those, a double by Wilson, did any damage. The Robins didn't do much better against Wayland Dean, but they did well enough to bunch three hits for three runs in the third inning and squeeze out a 4-2 victory.

It wasn't until the seventh that the Phillies were able to score. In that session Jack Bentley led off with a solid single to left, but Wrightstone hit into a double play and a shut out still was within reach. Friberg, however, received a pass and scored on a double by Wilson.

Ninth Full of Danger.

Still there wasn't any real danger. It wasn't until the ninth that anything but victory for the Robins was even considered. In that last frame, however, McGraw had to pitch himself out of a hole to avert disaster.

Harper walked, but Rabbit Maranville jumped up in front of Bentley's drive toward second and forced Harper. Wrightstone followed with a single, and when Johnny Butler booted Friberg's easy roller the "standing room only" sign was hung out on the bases.

McGraw made the situation worse by walking Wilson, forcing a run across the plate. But he grabbed Dean's tap on the box himself and forced Wrightstone at the plate and then he made Henline, batting for Buskey, bounce an easy chance to Maranville.

McGraw started the rally that gave the Robins their lead. He singled in the third, and when Jacobson also hit safely and Marriott walked, the bases were filled. Wheat drove two runs across with a smack to left field, and Fournier's sacrifice fly cleared the way for a third tally.

Robins Pick Up Another.

The Robins picked up one more in their half of the ninth without striking a swift blow. Maranville and O'Neil walked, but as there were two out and McGraw at the bat there seemed little chance of any runs being added to the Brooklyn total.

Rabbit watched Prince Robert swing at two wide ones and then Gave O'Neil the sign that meant "we won't get anywhere standing here, let's get going." So on the next pitch both runners started moving, executed a double steal, and the Rabbit went on home when Wilson's throw to third hit him in the leg and bounded into left field.

It was another cold, cold day, but John A. Heydler, the National League President, didn't leave until it was all over. Amundsen also would have enjoyed it.

Rabbit Maranville has been covering three infield positions ever since the season opened and today he took on two more jobs. He went deep into centre field to catch Cy Williams's fly in the third and dashed into right to capture the same player's potential single in the sixth. Cy calls Rabbit the one-man crime wave.

Pickups and Putouts

The crowd at the Polo Grounds yesterday was just about the same size as the gathering which stands around a hawker in Times Square selling a monkey on a string.

The surprising part of these cold weather games is that they are played as well as they are. You can't expect a player to perform miracles with a ball when his hands are frozen.

Both Kelly and Jackson made cold weather errors in the second, but Barnes pulled out of the difficulty withotu any damage.

Andy High was rushed into the game in the sixth when the Braves had the bases loaded and one out. It was a great chance for High to make himself solid in Boston by making a hit. He made himself solid in New York by hitting into a double play.

Bill Ryan says he is a warm pitcher and not an Artic explorer.

The current baseball season ought to mean a big boom in the wool market. The prize to the most valuable player this year should be a fur coat.

The Braves remain in town another day to suffer. Today will see the last game of the series and the pitchers will be the flinger on each club who has the highest temperature at game time.

YANKEES KEPT IDLE BY COLD WEATHER

Third Game With Senators Postponed—Huggins Sends McQuaid Back to St. Paul.

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19.—On account of cold weather and the fact that nobody would have attended anyway, the third game of the Yankee-Senators series was called off today. It was a humane move and, inasmuch as the game will probably be played as part of a future double header, may not cost the Washington club a penny.

The contest will be played off at some future date. Whenever it is, Herb McQuaid will not be among those present. Herbert was released outright to the St. Paul club of the American Association today, which is just the same as going back home, since St. Paul was the club that sold him to the Yankees last Fall.

With ten active pitchers on his staff, Boss Huggins wanted to cut down to nine and somebody had to go. If the truth were known, the Yankees probably owed St. Paul a pitcher in the Pat Collins or Mark Koenig deal and had to deliver either Beall or McQuaid. Otherwise, Huggins would have shipped them George Cummings, who is still on the roster, but will be sent to a minor league for seasoning.

Cummings is now in New York where he went from St. Petersburg to have his tonsils removed.

McQuaid did some good work against the Robins on the trip north and was not so bad in two innings against the Red Sox last Wednesday. This is his second departure for the minors. He was tried out by the Cincinnati Reds several years ago, but was found wanting.

CARL MAYS STOPS PIRATES.

Reds Win, 2-1, Behind Brilliant Pitching—Wright Spiked in Hand.

CINCINNATI, April 19 (AP).—Through the brilliant pitching of Carl Mays the Cincinnati Reds made it two out of three in the series with the Pittsburgh Pirates today, winning, 2 to 1. Cuyler scored the champions' only tally in the ninth when he walked, stole second and scored on sacrifices. Wright of Pittsburgh was spiked in the hand when Roush slid into second base in the eighth, and had to leave the game.

GOLDEN SPIRE FIRST IN THE EDGEWOOD

PRYCE SADDLES 3 WINNERS

Sends Out Post Horn and Punjab for W. J. Salmon and Phantom Fire for R. T. Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

HAVRE D GRACE, Md., April 19.—Golden Spiru carried the colors of the Sunnyland Stable of Bob Smith to victory this afternoon in the Edgewood Handicap, a gallop of a mile and a sixteenth for three-year-olds and upward, which headed the program. Under 117 pounds and with Morris up, the son of Golden Broom and Glorymaid ran the distance in the slow time of 1:49 over a fast track. The winner paid $8.80 for $2 in the mutuels.

The weather would have been ideal had it ot been for a strong raw wind, but the track was in first-class shape. Fast time was out of question against the wind. The Walter J. Salmon colors were twice to the fore, J. R. Pryce saddling Post Horn to take the opener and Punjab to win the fourth. Johnny Maiben had the mount on both. Willie Munden also scored a double, bringing Red Pennant home first in the second race and winning the sixth with Flint. Trainer Pryce also saddled a winner for R. T. Wilson in Phantom Fire.

With Cudgeller scratched out of the Edgewood Handicap, T. W. O'Brien's Forecaster was the odds-on public choice. The field was sent away without delay, W. C. Trover's War Man taking an early lead. Harvey brought up Forecaster with a challenge and the two fought it out. Forecaster was the first to crack, and stopped badly, Harvey not persisting with him when beaten.

Morris held Golden Spire under wraps for half a mile while the leaders raced themselves out, sent him up on the outside and took command on the turn for home. In the stretch drive he outlasted Prince Hamlet to win by a neck. War Man managed to hold on to take third money.

The Yarrow Brae Purse, a dash of six furlongs for the three-year-olds, brought out a field of six, with Punjab, the Salmon Preakness, and Kentucky Derby candidate, the public choice. The homebred son of Brown\Prince II made good for his followers by coming home at the head of his field in 1:14 under 110 pounds.

Punjab was slow to find his stride, but once Maiben got him going he moved up rapidly. He took the lead in the final furlong and came to the wire with a margin of a length over E. Seagram's Dust Up. The Sagamore Stable's French-bred colt Montferrat had the early speed, but could not hold it in the stretch drive and finished third. Punjab paid $4.30 for $2 in the mutuels.

Mirels Victor at 300 to 1 On St. Cloud Race Track

PARIS, April 19 (AP).—G. Patat, a trainer who was reinstated a short time ago after several years' suspension, made a killing at the Saint Cloud track today with an obscure outsider, Mirels. The horse ran away from a field of nineteen in a mile and a half race to win at odds of 300 to 1. Mirels is a three-year-old and heretofore has been an "also ran."

HUNTINGTON RACE ENDS IN DEAD HEAT

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 19 (AP).—W. J. Waterman's Arragosa and W. M. Cain's Lavinia thundered down to the wire as a team in the sixth race here today and the judges could do nothing else but call it a dead heat.

The dead heats of a racing season can usually be counted on the fingers of one hand and this was the first recorded for the 1926 season. There were only two run last year, one at Havana and the other at the Long Branch track.

As there was no run-off today the owners of the principals in the dead heat split the purse, while the mutuel officials honored straight, place and show tickets on both Arragosa and Lavinia.

Arragosa, on his past two races here, both of which he won, was backed down to odds-on before starting time. He was a length behind entering the stretch, but they went past the judges' stand together. Arragosa was conceding ten pounds to Lavinia over the mile and seventy yard distance. Air Mail finished close behind the leaders.

Post Horn outbroke his field. He saved ground, closed gamely and outlasted his opponents. Dexter, forced wide entering the stretch, made a game effort but hung in the closing strides. Amy A. forced the pace. Willie K. broke in close quarters and closed a good gap. Grouse II was badly ridden.

Donarita, a forward contender throughout, outlasted Rusovia in the final drive. The latter closed a big gap from a slow beginning. Hobson and Jacques stopped.

Columbia Improves

ROWING MIRACLES NOT FOR COLUMBIA

But Crew Candidates Are Already Showing Improvement Under the Glendons.

FRESHMEN DRAW ATTENTION

This is the first of a series of articles on the rowing situation at various Eastern colleges.

By HERBERT REED.

Columbia is in the throes of rebuilding rowing and already shows the handiwork of the two Glendons, father and son, who have done remarkably well considering the size of the task at hand. Had the problem been one merely of building it would have been much easier to solve. The remaking of oarsmen, no matter how enthusiastic, is, however, one to call out all the finesse of Richard Glendon Jr., the titular head coach, and the ripe experience of Richard Glendon Sr., the wise old waterman who made so great a reputation for the Navy oarsmen over a long stretch of years.

The Glendons found the Columbia sweep-swingers rowing a hybrid stroke, unsound and faltering, and they had to start their work with men who had been in the habit of finishing in the ruck, and often last by many lengths of open water. Progress with these men was necessarily slow, and it is too much to expect that the varsity eight will produce anything in the way of rowing miracles, although from what they showed on the cold and turbulent Harlem yesterday this season will find them at least closing the gap and coming up into the procession. They may do even better than that, since the first race is three weeks away and much can be accomplished in that time, but it is certain that if the big crew comes along as fast as it has been coming in the last week it will turn in at least some creditable racing.

Real Future for Freshman Crew.

Naturally, the coaches have given a great deal of attention to the freshmen, new to the game and therefore unspoiled by a hodge-podge of systems. The results are gratifying not alone to Columbia men but to those who want to see Morningside oarsmen live up once more to the old traditions. There is a big and powerful freshman eight on the water, already well grounded in the Glendon type of stroke and able right now to give the beat up to racing pitch. In the rough going yesterday the crew put on a burst of speed that was promising, and it was plain that the power was well in hand. This eight has a real future, even this season.

There was little opportunity to study the work of the second varsity, for the shell was wrecked by driftwood at an early stage of the practice—nothing unusual in Columbia's experience on the Harlem. There were bits of good rowing by the 150-pound eight, but there was too much wind and water for a light crew to show its paces.

Principal interest centres, of course, on the varsity as remolded under the new régime with the greatest of care and patience. The work has been anything but hurried, for there was a great deal for some of the men to forget, and naturally an endless amount to learn. This eight is still far from a real racing crew, although it might hold its own in a burst of half a mile or a mile, or perhaps even the Henley distance.

It is a big, fairly matched eight which already has learned to keep the boat on an even keel, a true touch of the Glendon method, for their crews have always been noted for keeping the big boat going steadily as a church. This is the first feature that strikes the observer. The second is the unison of the blade work, and the third is the straight backs, giving plenty of room to the human engine room. These three things are real accomplishments in such a short time under a new system. There is ample evidence of a world of power, and of power at its maximum just at the point where the Glendons want it—when the oar is at right angles to the boat. Maximum power at the instant of greatest leverage—that has been the making of Glendon crews of the past. With an eight crowding 180 pounds on the average this means business.

Unison of Blades a Feature.

Through the rough going yesterday, with the stroke down around the early twenties, about the best gait that could be expected under the conditions, the second feature, the unison of the blades, especially at the turn-off of the feather, was a pleasure to watch. Inboard there were some slight breaks in the body work, but these things mean little, usually being due largely to slight differences in the conformation of the men. Such things are generally corrected by rigging, and there is nothing about rigging that these coaches do not know.

The blades are in and out together, are properly covered, save that Lohr at stroke sometimes clips a little, but there is never a sign of washing out—something, incidentally, all but impossible with the Glendon stroke—and when the blades are together a great deal may be overlooked. These good points are dwelt upon at length for the reason that they are encouraging in the extreme in an eight that is frankly very far from a finished crew. The straight backs are an unalloyed joy and uncommon even in eights of considerable reputation.

Columbia men need not expect too much in a hurry, for it takes at least three years to install a real rowing system, but they may at least have the comfortable feeling that they are well away on the right track.

The varsity boating: Bow, Born; No. 2, Buddine; No. 3, French; No. 4, Kerrigan; No. 5, Wiberg; No. 6, Woefle; No. 7, H. Jacobi; stroke, Lohr; coxswain, Miller.

INVITE FOREIGN CREWS.

Amateurs Expect Them to Row In National Regatta on Schuylkill.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19 (AP).—Invitations have been sent to crews in Argentina, Cuba, England and Canada to compete in the national regatta to be held on the Schuylkill River Aug. 5, 6 and 7. Harry Penn Burke, President of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, announced today. A number of foreign crews are expected to accept.

Mr. Burke said the association had decided that no oarsman who has rowed on a university or college crew will be eligible to compete as a junior and that any one who has competed in a varsity race, regardless of whether the boat won, will be classed as a senior.

Detroit and Chicago Enter The Central Hockey League

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 19 (AP).—Detroit and Chicago will have teams in the Central Amateur Hockey League next season, it was decided today at the Spring meeting of the organization. There will be eight cities in the league instead of six. Detroit will take the place of Sault Sainte Marie. The Eighth city will be selected from Milwaukee, Toronto, Marquette, Michigan and Fort Frances, Ontario. The other cities in the league are Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Winnipeg and Eveleth-Hibbing.

HARVARD OARSMEN ON LAKE CARNEGIE

TO ALTERNATE IN SESSIONS

Princeton Eights Practice After Two Crimson Boats Close Long Afternoon Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 19.—In spite of wintry blasts, Lake Carnegie was the scene of unusual activity today, the Harvard and Princeton crews rowing here this morning and afternoon. Two Harvard varsities, under the direction of Coach Ed Stevens and Manager Jack Preston, arrived at the Tigers' Camp this morning for a week's practice.

A schedule has been arranged by Coach Chuck Logg of Princeton so that the Tiger and Crimson oarsmen will occupy the lake at different times.

Coach Stevens declared that he will devote most of the time here to the perfection of form, due to the fact that the Harvard crew has been handicapped by the late Spring. Toward the end of the week, however, he will give his charges racing starts.

The first Harvard varsity was boated as follows: Stroke, Watts; No. 7, Barton; No. 6, Captain Winthrop; No. 5, Platt; No. 4, Hubbard; No. 3 Leavitt; No. 2, Darlington; bow, Barry; coxswain, Pforrheimer.

Varsity Coach Logg and Gordon Sikes, coach of the Princeton 150's, called out their men late in the afternoon, after Harvard completed its second long session. Langhorne, recently given stroke in the first varsity, kept his position there today.

BOS, MATSUYAMA MEET NEXT WEEK

The first challenge match of the season for the national junior 18.2 balkline championship will be held next week when Ary Bos of Holland, defending champion, meets Kinrey Matsuyama of Japan in a 1,200-point match at Dwyer's Broadway Academy. The match will be played in three blocks, each of 400 points, on successive nights, starting next Monday.

The champion must defend the emblem every thirty days, and as the last tournament ended on March 27 the champion was forced to accept those dates or forfeit the championship.

REISELT TRAILS WAKEFIELD.

Otto Reiselt, newly crowned king of the three-cushion game, made an inauspicious beginning in his first match in this city since winning the title when he trailed Harry Wakefield, 93 to 100, in the first two blocks of their 600-point match which opened yesterday at the Strand Academy. Wakefield won in the afternoon block and Reiselt in the nightcap. Wakefield reached his quota in the night block, stopping play before Reiselt had caught up the points dropped in the afternoon.

Wakefield won, 50 to 30, in the afternoon in fifty-eight innings. He made a high run of 8. Reiselt's high run was 3. Reiselt won, 63 to 50, in seventy-nine innings at night. The victor's high run was 8 and Wakefield's 6.

OTHER BILLIARD RESULTS.

Andrew St. Jean leads Ralph Greenleaf, for six years pocket billiard champion of the world, in their handicap pocket billiard match which got under way at Dwyer's Broadway Academy yesterday. St. Jean is playing for only 1,250 points as against 1,500 for Greenleaf and now leads 206 to 168. In the afternoon block St. Jean won 105 to 33, going out in seven innings. His high run was 54 and Greenleaf's 24. Greenleaf won 135 to 101 in the evening, making a high run of 70. He went out in eighteen inning. St. Jean's high run was 33.

In a three-cushion team match at Hoppe's Billiard Academy last night Edward Jackson and Bert Abrahams defeated H. Mohr and Albert Stone, 22 to 16, in thirty-five innings. Jackson made the high run of 3.

Edward J. O'Brien defeated Joseph A. Powers in a pocket billiard match in the New York State amateur tournament at the Recreation Academy, Brooklyn, last night by the score of 100 to 12, in fifteen innings. O'Brien had a high run of 21.

Orfino Lauri took the lead from Charles Harmon in a special 1,200-point pocket billiard match for $1,000 by defeating Harmon in both the afternoon and evening blocks yesterday at Kreuter's Academy. He won the afternoon block, 107 to 90, making a high run of 22 against Harmon's run of 19, and the evening block by 96 to 52, running 29 to Harmon's 16. The score is now 203 for Lauri and 172 for Harmon.

James Langdon and Joseph Johann were winners at 18.2 balkline billiards in the Poggenburg Memorial Cup tournament matches played yesterday and last night at Lawler Brothers' Brooklyn rooms, Langdon defeated Seymour Kling 125 to 106 in thirty-five innings. Kling moreover was playing for 175 points. The winner had a high run of 19 and the lower one of 16. Johann took the measure of Jacob Ward 175 to 80 in forty-five innings. Ward was playing for only 125 points. Johann's high run was 18 and Ward's two points more.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

While yesterday's movement on the Stock Exchange was irregular and undecided, there were one or two changes on other markets which were more interesting, although not pointing very plainly to what might be expected next. In the exchange market, francs slipped off another fraction, going under the period's previous low figure; yet the Paris market showed improvement. Wheat at one time went to the highest price since the last week of February and 17 cents a bushel above the low price of a month ago. Cotton, on the other hand, declined to the low price of the year, which was the lowest reached since May, 1922. That the wheat market subsequently lost all of its advance and more, indicated at least the prevalent tendency of prices.

The stock market advanced in the early hours of business and fell back later, leaving prices irregularly changed at the close. On the whole the changes were unimportant, whether upward or downward, and the day's market reflected nothing but the experiments of professional operators. Transactions of the day, slightly overtopping a million shares, made up the smallest trading of any five-hour day with two exceptions during the year.

Return of the 4 per cent. call money rate reflected this comparative inactivity. The money market's movement, and the inferences drawn from it, illustrate again how confusing Wall Street's views of cause and effect may be. When the call money rate advanced to 5 and 6 per cent., the high rates were taken to be an influence making for lower prices, and relaxation in the rate was assumed to foreshadow stock market recovery. But the essential fact recognized at the moment is that the present relatively low rate is itself mostly a consequence of Stock Exchange liquidation. Eventually, if maintained, a lower rate is apt to become cause rather than effect even on stocks; but that always depends on the financial situation itself. The influence of easy money brought about by extensive stock market liquidation will almost always become first perceptible in the market for fixed investments.

Whether the speculative market was or was not actually influenced by the exchange of views in regard to dividend policy, at yesterday's annual meeting of the United States Steel Corporation, the answer of Chairman Gary to a shareholder's demand for increased dividends was read in Wall Street with exceptional interest. This interest converged especially on the Chairman's remarks regarding possible recourse to a "stock dividend." Judge Gary appeared to place the possibility of such a step in the more or less remote future, and distinctly declared that it could not be done with safety under present conditions. In taking that position he evidently assumed that issue of new stock pro rata to the shareholders of the moment would not be accompanied by such downward readjustment of the dividend rate as should leave the actual aggregate outlay for dividends at an unchanged figure.

Several stock dividends of the recent past have pursued that course, with the result that the subsequent rising market for the old shares was pure illusion, since the investor received on his old and new shares combined the same sum as before. Judge Gary's remark that a Steel Corporation stock dividend would "add to the amount of cash dividends on the common stock" appeared to preclude the adoption of just that policy, though it naturally went no further. His statement, however, that any large addition to dividend disbursements could not be now considered in view of business fluctuations, uncertain selling prices and trade competition, clearly enough defined the attitude of the company. It is re-statement of the conservative policy which, pursued since the corporation recognized the warnings of 1903, has placed the enterprise in the position that it now occupies with the investment community. That it means mistrust of the business future cannot necessarily be inferred, except so far as the whole financial program of the company during the past two years has recognized that we are living in a period of economic uncertainty, in which the working of forces unknown before the war is yet to be fully tested.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Business on the Stock Exchange yesterday was again on a small scale and prices generally moved within a narrow range. Sales barely exceeded a million shares and approximately 10 per cent. of the trading was in Hudson Motors. The railroad shares as a group closed with a slight loss; the industrials were a shade higher. The action of Steel common attracted attention in the early afternoon, due to Judge Gary's remarks concerning dividends at the annual meeting yesterday. The stock immediately sold off more than 2 points from the day's high level and this reaction influenced the general list, the result being that most issues closed below the high levels of the day. Numerous specialties, however, attracted attention because of their wide changes in opposite directions. These included United States Rubber, Armour B, Freeport Texas, International Combustion, General Electric, Columbia Gas and Allied Chemical. Little attention was paid to the standard issues. Call money again closed at 4 per cent. and the calling of loans was less active than last week.

Gold Exported to Canada.

The first shipment of gold from this country to Canada this year has been announced, and is expected to be followed by a further movement. The initial shipment amounted to $1,000,000 and was made in response to an advance last week in Canadian exchange to its highest level since last Autumn. The gold export point is calculated at a premium of eleven-sixty-fourths of 1 per cent., and the Canadian dollar on several days last week was quoted at that figure. Yesterday it had receded to a premium of five-thirty-seconds of 1 per cent., at which point it was figured that gold shipments were not profitable. Since the rate was within so small a fraction of the gold export point, however, it was expected yesterday that a further movement would take place soon, as the approach of the big season for exports of Canadian commodities causes demand for Canadian funds in this market. Last year more than $40,000,000 of gold was sent from the United States to Canada, and in the first three months of this year, when Canadian exchange was at a discount, $66,000,000 was imported from Canada.

March Railway Earnings.

The publication of railroad earnings for March begins today with the statement of the Kansas City Southern. Railroad men said they would be surprised if that month was not substantially better than March, 1925. Carloadings were in excess of the previous year and operating conditions permitted the reduction of maintenance of way forces, which were increased in February to a record point in order to keep the tracks clear of snow. March was also the first month since last September that the movement of hard coal was near normal.

Cotton at Year's Low Price.

The decline in spot cotton yesterday to 19.05 cents, the lowest price of the year, although previously touched on March 24, caused some comment in view of the fact that recent news has brought forward two considerations favorable to maintenance of the price. One of these was last Wednesday's report on consumption of cotton by home mills during March, which astonished the cotton trade by showing the mill takings of the month to have exceeded the home consumption of any other month on the record. The other was continuance in a large part of the cotton belt of the unseasonable weather, delaying planting operations. The weakness of the market was commonly ascribed to a growing belief that so large a surplus would be carried over from the great crop of 1924 that even a very considerable reduction in the coming season's yield would leave abundant supplies. The large mill takings of last month have been subject to perplexed discussion throughout the cotton trade, where no one has professed to remember an occasion when absorption of raw material on such a scale has occurred at a time when manufacturers were talking discouragingly regarding the business outlook.

Sellers of Francs Buy Pesetas.

From a purely trading standpoint, one of the most interesting developments in connection with the decline of the French franc, which touched a new low point yesterday, has been an upward movement in Spanish pesetas. The latter advanced again yesterday, and in the exchange market it was understood that there had been considerable accumulation of pesetas by those who had been selling the franc. The franc at one time yesterday showed rallying power, apparently in response to support in Paris, but this quickly encountered a new wave of selling, under which the rate dropped. Bankers said that nothing new had developed in the French situation and that the decline in the rate was the result of the same influences that had affected the market last week. The recession caused a new decline in the Belgian franc.

Bond Trading Decreases.

Price changes in the bond market yesterday were limited, mostly to fractions, and there was about an equal division between advances and declines. Transactions were smaller in volume than has been general in recent sessions. Good buying was concentrated in the better class of railroad bonds, and these generally moved up slightly in price. Following the almost uninterrupted advance of more than a month, the demand has become restricted, but there seems to be a little tenency on the part of holders to offer their securities, even at present prices. The principal buying yesterday was in the second-grade bonds, apparently with the idea of bringing them in line with first-class issues, in which most of the recent advances have taken place. French bonds declined moderately, in line with the continued depression in exchange, but there was no other movement of significance in the foreign list.

Chances of Railway Legislation.

Only a few weeks of the present session of Congress remain and the railroads have two important bills awaiting consideration. The more important from the financial point of view is the Loan Funding bill, which got under way slowly this year and was recommended by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee only last week. Its chances of getting by both the Senate and House before adjournment are regarded as slim. The other piece of legislation, the Watson-Parker bill, has only the House to [illegible], and its prospects have been materially brightened by the Pr[illegible]dent's intimation that he wanted it enacted into law at this time.

Voting and Non-Voting Stocks.

Utility men see in a recent decision by a public utility commission a repercussion from the famous Nickel Plate merger denial. The decision by the State body was made on an application by a public utility company for the approval of an issue of stock. The application was denied on the ground that through the erection of a structure of voting and non-voting stock control of the utility was vested in a small group of shareholders. The application in other respects conformed with regulations, and it was announced that the decision was made as a matter of public policy.

MONEY.

MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1926.

In the face of a quiet market Stock Exchange call money was in light demand and at a slight concession from last Friday. Opening at 4¼ per cent. the rate soon dipped to 4, while Street trades were reported at 3½. Some $10,000,000 was withdrawn. In time money some special funds not wholly banking money was loaned for ninety days at 4⅜ per cent., and a moderate amount for six months at 4½ per cent. Otherwise renewals and replacements made up the most of the day's business. In bankers' acceptances ninety-day bills tightened ⅛ to 3⅜@3⅝ per cent. Commercial paper was quiet and unchanged.

In creating bond issues, as in building bridges, factors of safety must rule.

The builder of bridges locates bedrock for a safe foundation. Carefully he computes the stress of maximum loads and specifies arches that will more than support it. He puts into his structure the essential factor of safety.

An underwriting department planning and building a bond issue must be governed equally by factors of safety if their work is to stand every financial test of the passing years. In the creation of Miller First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds we insist upon stringent financial and legal safeguards to protect Miller investors against loss or even delay in receiving funds due them.

As an example of safety in underwriting let us cite the $525,000 issue of 6½% real estate gold bonds secured by the Greystone Apartments, St. Louis, Missouri. The factors of safety in this Miller issue were so convincing, and the interest rate so attractive, that the entire issue was purchased by a large insurance company.

This $525,000 bond issue represents only 61.5% of the appraised value of the property, allowing a factor of safety of 38.5%. The estimated net annual income, $80,351 (based on rentals 25% lower than existing rentals for similar apartments in St. Louis), is over 2.3 times the greatest annual interest charges on the bond issue—another factor of safety. A still further safeguard of the bond issue is that appraisals of value and estimates of income were confirmed by the local realtors whose figures were in excess of the amounts used as a basis for underwriting this issue.

Out of the earnings, the owner of the Greystone Apartments makes monthly payments to a trustee, taking care of interest, coupons and the maturing of the bonds as they become due. Thus the investor is guarded against delay in payment of interest or principal.

Other safety factors

These are but some of the safeguards that the Miller Underwriting Department uses in preparing Miller Bonds for the investor. This department determines the demand for the structure—assists in planning and supervising its construction — even counsels in its management. This is a task calling for skill and experience in real estate, engineering and architecture as well as finance.

A booklet valuable to every investor

Knowledge of the thorough methods that the Miller Underwriting Department follows in preparing every issue of Miller Bonds is important for all investors. The booklet, "Creating Good Investments," explains it. Send for your copy today.

BAKING BOARD CALLS WARD DEAL BENEFIT

Unnecessary Capital Retired by Stock Purchase, General's Directors Assert.

ANSWER DEININGER CHARGES

Committee Head Consented to the Transaction as Chairman of the Board, Statement Says.

The Board of Directors of the General Baking Corporation sent a letter to stockholders yesterday giving the details of a report just approved by the board containing an answer to charges brought against the management by an independent stockholders' committee, headed by William Deininger, former Chairman of the board. The board also announced that Paul H. Helms had resigned as President and director at yesterday's meeting and that C. Leslie Lowes was elected to succeed him. George N. Meissner of St. Louis was elected a director.

The stockholders' committee, of which Mr. Deininger is the head, charged that William B. Ward, who organized the corporation, depleted the cash resources of the organization through the sale to it of 119,900 shares of Class A stock for approximately $8,500,000, or an average of more than $71 a share. It further alleged that the transaction was carried out without the knowledge of the directors, and was submitted to the latter for ratification only a few weeks ago, where as the deal was completed last February. The committee announced its intention of compelling the management to force Mr. Ward to return the money to the treasury.

The Directors' Statement.

The following statement was issued by the directors:

"The report of the directors recites in detail the results of their investigation that led up to the ratification of the previous purchase by the corporation of 119,900 shares of its own A stock, and of the arrangement by which the corporation traded non-voting Class A stock in the corporation for all of the voting Class B stock formerly controlled by William B. Ward or his company, the Ward Securities Corporation.

"The statement emphasizes the fact that the General Baking Company is the operating company and that it had at the time plenty of cash for its needs. It states that the General Baking Corporation is the holding company and that it had more than $9,000,000 in cash remaining after it had acquired over 98 per cent. of the stock of the operating company. According to the directors, the corporation had no need for this large amount of money, nor any way of earning dividends on it because it is not an operating company. They say that Mr. Ward's company had been accumulating stock for some time on the open market and that the opportunity came to the General Baking Corporation to buy all of his holdings at exact cost and without profit to him.

"The statement goes on to say that the legality of thus retiring unnecessary capital by purchase of its own shares of stock was established by the then Board of Directors, who, with Mr. Deininger as Chairman, all consented to the purchase. The Ward Securities Corporation's holdings of A stock were thereupon purchased at prices below the then market quotations and without any profit to the Securities company, or Mr. Ward.

"The statement then says that the 1,000,000 shares of B stock controlled by Mr. Ward were acquired under the same authority by trading them in for non-voting stock in order to eliminate the possibility of criticism by the Government in its suit under the anti-trust acts.

"The net results are, the board declares, beneficial to the corporation and its stockholders, as well as being fully authorized under its charter and the law.

Reports Increased Sales.

"The statement reviews the large increase in the sales since last October and says that current earnings are ample to continue the 5 per cent. dividend rate on its A stock and to provide necessary surplus for expansion.

"The corporation, according to the statement, had as of March 28, 1926, $5,500,000 in cash and current assets totaling $8,751,234.20, against current liabilities of $2,437,561.22; that the corporation is free from debts and bonds except current accounts payable and a mortgage of $160,000 on recently acquired property.

"The statement concludes with the opinion of the Board of Directors that there is no need of any proxies for a stockholders' meeting and none will be necessary until the next annual meeting of the corporation, which will be in February, 1927."

ATTACK GENERAL BAKING.

Stockholders Seek Corporation Books to Show Payments to Ward.

BALTIMORE, April 19 (AP).—A petition for a writ of mandamus to examine the books and papers of the General Baking Corporation, to obtain information regarding alleged payments of $8,547,385.96 out of its funds, was filed today in Superior Court by five stockholders. The petitioners, who deposed that they were constituted a committee for the purpose of the suit, are William Deininger, Louis J. Kolb, John U. Weber, Nicholas Weber and Henry Deininger, all of New York.

The General Baking Corporation was incorporated in Maryland last October and was alleged to be allied with the Ward Food Products Corporation, recently dissolved by a Federal court decree. The petitioners complain that at the request of William B. Ward and without submission to the Board of Directors, checks for $5,000,000, payable to the Ward Securities Company, were signed by the President and Treasurer of the General Baking Corporation on Jan. 19, and checks for $2,679,505 were signed Jan. 23, with further payments of $589,680 on Feb. 9 and 18. Refunds were received of $26,219 in cash and 119,900 shares of Class A stock. The petition alleges that the transactions enabled Ward to liquidate stock at 71⅛ which is now selling around 50.

WARD BAKING INCOME GAINS.

Total for 12 Weeks Shows Slight Increase Over a Year Ago.

For the twelve weeks ended March 20, 1926, a net income of $636,853 is reported by the Ward Baking Company, after depreciation, interest and Federal taxes. This is equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.25 per share on 56,093 Class A common shares, and to 25 cents a share on 500,000 Class B common shares. In each case this is 1 cent more than the net income of the same period in 1925, which was $236,822. The Class A common is entitled to non-cumulative dividends of $5 per year, and then shares in the remaining profits with Class B common as one class.

Total income of Ward Baking for the period this year was $1,130,097, as against $1,418,055 in 1925. Depreciation and interest totaled $450,823 this year as compared with $474,133 in the like period of last year. Federal taxes were $113,831, as against $111,500.

DETROIT EDISON EARNINGS.

$1,017,031 in March, Making Net for Quarter $3,247,084.

Total expenses were $2,651,776 in March, while for the quarter they totaled $7,762,189. Other reductions, including interest, amortization, &c., were $330,217 in March and $3,247,084 in the quarter.

GOOD OUTLOOK SEEN IN BUSINESS WORLD

Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co. Report Says Trade in First Quarter Was Above Normal.

FUTURE BUYING CHECKED

Review Also Finds Stormy Weather Has Hit Retailers and Held Up Planting in South.

Conditions in the majority of manufacturing and general business lines are still being maintained at an encouraging level and there is a generally sanguine outlook for the future, despite some drastic recessions in industrial stocks, according to the mid-month review of business issued yesterday by the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company.

The volume of general business was well above normal during the first quarter, the review said, in some manufacturing lines, however, mainly textiles, the outlook is somewhat pessimistic, but no definite reason is advanced anywhere for expecting any severe recession in the near future. Building construction in New York City and vicinity is at an extremely high level and automobile manufacture has reached a new high point.

A large amount of forward buying has been blocked by the steady downward drift of many wholesale commodity prices throughout several months, and hand-to-mouth buying is still the order of the day. Retail trade has suffered considerably because of the cold, wet and generally stormy weather of the Spring. Cotton and corn planting in the South and Southwest has been slowed up by heavy rains. The condition of Winter wheat, however, is placed at 84.1 per cent., or about 8 per cent. above the ten-year average for this time of the year. The United States Department of Agriculture's reports show that there has been no sign of diminution in planting intentions thus far this year. The probability of easier money rates ahead is regarded as considerably important in mercantile circles, as well as in the bond market.

In respect to retail trade this Spring the review said:

"Heavier retail sales in March than a year ago were due largely to the earlier Easter buying season. Last month's sales of 322 retail firms reporting to the Federal Reserve Board were 7.3 per cent. higher than in March, 1925, and sales of five and ten cent chain stores 11.8 larger. Leading mail order houses reported a gain of 12.9 per cent. over March a year ago; sales for the first quarter of the year increased 8.4 per cent. over the corresponding period in 1925."

Arkansas Natural Gas Income.

Net income of the Arkansas Natural Gas Company for 1925 reached $1,222,120 after expenses, depreciation and depletion, according to the annual statement issued yesterday. This is equal to 73 cents a share (par $10) earned on 1,623,690 shares of stock. Gross income was $5,221,014, while expenses were $3,021,017; and depreciation and depletion totaled $1,054,847. Dividends paid were $322,776 and profit and loss items reached $249,359. Surplus was $453,012.

White Eagle Oil Co. Report.

The White Eagle Oil and Refining Company report for the quarter to March 31 shows net sales of $5,220,623, against $2,912,726 in the same period last year. Profits from operation amounted to $427,533, against $334,369 last year. After crediting miscellaneous income and before deducting reserve for depreciation, depletion and taxes, the net income was $416,915, against $312,836 in 1925.

SHIPMENT OF GOLD TO CANADA STARTS

$1,000,000 Sent by Acceptance Bank Since Exchange Rose to 11-64 of 1 Per Cent.

TRADE SWINGS THIS WAY

The International Acceptance Bank, in conjunction with Harris, Forbes & Co., has shipped $1,000,000 gold to Canada, it was announced yesterday. This was the beginning of a movement that was forecast last week when Canadian exchange advanced to 11-64 of 1 per cent., the point at which it is calculated the shipment of gold from this country is profitable. The rate has since sagged slightly, the premium yesterday having been 5-32 of 1 per cent., but with the rate so close to the gold export point it is expected that shipments will be resumed shortly when the big season for the export of Canadian commodities gets in full swing.

Navigation on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River is being resumed following the Winter inactivity, and this is expected to bring a heavy movement of Canadian wheat and other products to the American market. At this season of the year Canadian purchases of American goods are comparatively small, resulting in a demand in this country for Canadian funds in commercial settlements and an absence of demand in Canada for American dollars. These conditions were responsible for last week's advance in Canadian exchange, which reached the highest level of the year.

The $1,000,000 shipment was the first transfer of gold from this country to Canada this year. In the first three months of 1926 Canada sent $66,000,000 of gold to the United States. This followed the shipment of about $40,000,000 of gold from the United States to Canada last Autumn, when conditions were similar to those existing at present. Bankers expect a large volume of gold shipments to Canada during the coming months.

Hupp Motor Car Earnings.

The Hupp Motor Car Corporation report for the first quarter of this year shows a net profit of $1,122,308 after depreciation and Federal taxes, which is equal to $1.22 a share (par $10) earned on $9,138,090 of common stock. This compares with $852,963, or 93 cents a share, in the same period of 1924.

Mason Valley Mines Profit.

The Mason Valley Mines Company report for 1925 net profit of $84,834 after expenses, interest, depreciation, &c., which is equal to 11 cents a share (par $10) earned on 746,268 shares of stock. This is against a net loss in 1924 of $7,042. Total income for 1925 was $215 542.

Baltimore Has Biggest Issue Of Municipal Bonds in Sight

High prices and a dearth of new offerings continue to feature the municipal bond market, resulting in close attention being paid by investment bankers to the plans of cities and States for forthcoming issues. The largest offering in sight is one of $18,822,000 of City of Baltimore 4 per cent. bonds, for which bids will be received on May 17. This is the largest bond issue ever arranged by Baltimore, and several New York banking groups will bid for it.

Although a 4 per cent. rate is considered low, there is no regulation against the sale of Baltimore bonds below par. In view of the ready sale of recent State and city issues at high prices, close figuring will be done by the bankers in arriving at bids. Proceeds of the issue will be used for paving, sewers, municipal buildings, schools and other purposes.

The largest issue to be awarded this week is $1,656,000 of Nassau County, N. Y., 4½ per cent. bonds, bids for which will be opened tomorrow.

NATIONAL CITY BANK STILL HOLDS LEAD

CHASE NATIONAL IS NEXT

The National City Bank retains its position as the largest bank in the United States with resources of $1,110,459,408, according to figures published yesterday. The Chase National Bank, which issued its first statement of condition since its merger with the Mechanics & Metals National Bank, has resources of $918,915,628, leaving the National City still the only bank in the country with total assets in excess of a billion dollars. Deposits of the Chase, however, are only $3,635,578 below those of the National City, which are listed at $795,934,514.

The actual difference in deposits is larger than indicated, for the National City's figures do not take in the People's Trust Company, which was merged into the National City recently. The People's Trust, according to its latest report, had deposits of $65,700,000, which will be added in large part to the total of the National City.

The statements of virtually all the large banks which have been made public so far show decreases in deposits from the figures of Dec. 31, 1925, when the last previous statements were issued. The deposits of the National City in that period decreased $125,636,984, the Chase (adding together the December figures of the Chase and the Mechanics & Metals) decreased $104,317,000; the National Bank of Commerce decreased $126,320,000, the First National decreased $33,320,000, the Seaboard decreased $44,731,000 and the National Park decreased $17,283,000.

One of the few large banks to report larger deposits than last December was the Hanover, which announced an increase of $3,770,000.

The decreases in deposits were described as a seasonal development. Added to this has been the heavy liquidation in the stock market, which contributed to the reductions in deposits.

Fireproofing Surplus Is $199,887.

The General Fireproofing Company of Youngstown, Ohio, reports for the first quarter of 1926 a surplus after charges and preferred dividends, but before Federal taxes, of $199,887. This is equivalent to $2.44 a share earned on the 81,740 shares of common stock outstanding.

Northwest Utilities Net $860,790.

A net income of $860,790 after depreciation, interest and subsidiary dividends and including equity in earnings of controlled companies, is reported for 1925 by the Northwest Utilities Company. It compares with $890,415 in the previous year.

Bond Prices and Interest Rates

Under the stimulus of a strong and constant investment demand bond prices have advanced steadily. If it is the investor's opinion that bonds are high priced, it should be remembered that they have appeared so for a long time past, but that this feeling has not checked the upward tendency. The question is not whether bond prices are high, but whether we are entering a period of lower interest rates during which they may be higher.

From our portfolio, we select the following bonds, representative of their several classes, which we own and offer, subject to prior sale and change in price.

In addition, subsidiary companies have outstanding $6,368,000 bonds, for which Puget Sound Power & Light Company has no liability, excepting on $2,590,000 for which a subsidiary has agreed to furnish the necessary funds.

The following information has been furnished by Mr. Donald C. Barnes, Vice-President of the Company:

BUSINESS: Puget Sound Power & Light Company owns one of the most important electric power and light systems in the United States. It furnishes nearly all power and light (outside of that supplied by municipalities of Seattle and Tacoma) in an area of over 31,000 square miles in the State of Washington—a territory half as large as New England. Also, but principally through subsidiaries, it does part of transportation business in same territory.

Properties include generating plants with a present installed capacity of 229,890 H.P. of which 185,180 H.P. is hydro-electric and 44,710 H.P. is steam, with necessary transmission lines and distribution systems. The hydro-electric generating capacity includes 40,215 H.P. at Baker River of which one unit began commercial operations on December 1, 1925, and the other on April 1, 1926.

SECURITY: The mortgage covers, in the opinion of counsel, substantially all the electric power and light properties and certain other property now owned or hereafter acquired by the Company, subject only to the divisional bonds underlying on a part of the property. It is a first mortgage on properties having a present value in excess of $22,700,000 (based on appraisals or costs and including property to be constructed in part from the proceeds of these Bonds). It also covers by direct first lien $10,835,000 "City of Seattle Municipal Railway 5% Bonds of 1919," maturing serially. The properties and securities covered by this mortgage are valued by the Company substantially in excess of the entire mortgage debt including underlying issues. The mortgage, with one unimportant exception, does not cover electric railways and does not cover certain properties or securities hereafter acquired but not made the basis of the issue of First & Refunding Mortgage Bonds.

EQUITY: Based on the present market prices of the capital stocks the equity in the properties is valued at more than $35,500,000. Dividends are being paid on all classes of stock.

EARNINGS: Earnings of the Company and subsidiary companies:

Year ended Dec. 31	Gross Earnings	Net Income after Taxes	Interest Charges	Balance
1921	$10,038,544	$4,905,250	$2,442,614	$2,462,636
1923	12,424,707	5,543,055	2,532,624	3,010,431
1924	12,539,869	5,215,051	2,557,141	2,657,910

Net income from the mortgaged properties and securities alone for the year ended December 31, 1925 after taxes other than Federal income taxes was $4,976,332 or more than 1.8 times the interest requirements of $2,708,054 on the bonded debt of the Company on the mortgaged property including this issue.

Interest requirement of $2,708,054 includes interest on money invested in important hydro-electric developments under construction during 1925 but statement of net income does not include any earnings from this source prior to December 1, 1925.

SINKING FUND: The mortgage provides for a substantial annual sinking fund, first payment September 1, 1926.

LINKS BIG INTERESTS WITH CLAIMS BILL

MELLON URGES MEASURE

Says Americans Should Not Be Forced to Wait Eighty Years Until Germany Can Pay.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Representative Garner of Texas declared in a statement made public today that big financial groups, including the Standard Oil Company, the Mellon interests, the Morgans and the duPont and Schwab corporations, would benefit directly or indirectly from the operations of the bill introduced by Representative Ogden L. Mills of New York, providing for a return to German Nationals of property seized during the war, and authorizing a liquidation of awards made to American Nationals by the Mixed Claims Commission through Treasury borrowings.

Mr. Garner, who had denounced the bill in the House as a "stupendous steal," and who charged that five Mellon corporations would receive moneys under its terms, brought into the matter today the names of Dwight W. Morrow and Thomas W. Lamont, partners in J. P. Morgan & Co.; former Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey; Otto H. Kahn, T. Coleman duPont, Charles M. Schwab, C. H. Remington, Paul Warburg and Elihu Root Jr.

The charge was made by Mr. Garner that the various firms and individuals listed in his statement had received awards from the Mixed Claims Commission approximating something over $40,000,000. He also pointed out that former Kaiser Wilhelm would receive moneys from what was formerly known as the Mills bill, as he was a stockholder in German corporations whose ships to the value of $33,000,000 were seized in American ports when war with Germany was declared in 1917. A section of the bill provides that the Treasury shall pay such claims of German nationals in cash.

Mellon Replies to Critics.

Secretary Mellon answered his critics in Congress today by stating that he had not been conscious of the fact that any corporation in which he had an interest had made claims against Germany which were granted by the Mixed Claims Commission. Even though such a situation existed, he said, he did not feel that it should be permitted to stand in the way of what appeared to be a fair settlement of the problem.

Such claims, whether coming before the Mixed Claims Commission or any other body, he pointed out, naturally were handled in just the same manner as claims in which the Secretary of the Treasury had not the slightest interest, and, if the plan was sound in principle and represented the wisest and the just way in which to handle a perplexing question, the charges which had been made did not alter that phase of the situation.

The Secretary also issued a formal statement reviewing the various angles of the Treasury plan, in which he pointed out that unless the American Government paid the American claimants such payment would not be made under the provisions of the Dawes plan and the Paris agreement, before eighty years. He contended that to hold the German seized property over that period as a guarantee would amount to confiscation, an immoral act and against the policy of this nation.

To return the German property and force American claimants to wait for eighty years to have their claims liquidated, Mr. Mellon contended, would, in fact, amount to confiscation of the private property of American citizens. Under the arrangements which have been made by this Government to obtain satisfaction out of Germany, such an act, he also felt, would be immoral.

Secretary Mellon invited suggestions for a solution of the problem from his critics, declaring that "we need constructive, not destructive, criticism."

Garner Names Others.

Mr. Garner stated that an examination of the records of the Mixed Claims Commission disclosed that the Mellon interests held stock in five corporations which had received awards from the commission. He said the commission had made a total of about 5,000 awards, involving $250,000,000, and among those who would be beneficiaries of the bill, in addition to the interests already cited, were the six leading American packers, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, in which Representative Ogden L. Mills is a director; the Bethlehem Chile Iron Mines Company, the Chase National Bank, the du Pont de Nemours Company and numerous other corporations. Mr. Garner insisted that his list was not complete, but that he would amplify it from official records if an attempt were made to pass the bill in the House.

According to Mr. Garner, the five Mellon corporations have been awarded a total of $1,085,190.04 by the Mixed Claims Commission, the Standard Oil more than $12,000,000, the J. P. Morgan interests more than $2,000,000, the packers more than $1,000,000, the Globe and Rutgers Insurance Company, with which former Senator Frelinghuysen is associated, more than $6,000,000, and other corporations in amounts that run from small sums up into the millions.

According to Mr. Garner's statement Mellon corporations have received awards by the Mixed Claims Commission as follows:

Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company	$960,000.00
Crucible Steel Company	55,000.00
Aluminium Company of America	87,875.60
Mellon National Bank	1,814.25
The Carborundum Company	80,500.00
Total	$1,085,190.04

Other Claimants Cited.

Armour & Co.	$2,139.91
Swift & Co.	940,020.00
Armour Fertilizing Works	44,544.01
Cudahy Packing Company	5,000.00
Swift Packing Company	10,000.00
Total	$1,001,803.92

Mr. Garner says Representative Mills is a director in the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, which has been awarded $249,926.80, and the United States Trust Company, which has a claim of $22,356.36.

The J. P. Morgan interests are listed by Mr. Garner as follows:

International Mercantile Marine	$175,000.00
Aetna Insurance Company	1,573,020.44
National Tube Company	1,500.00
U. S. Steel Products Company	195,000.00
Total	$2,243,529.44

Thomas W. Lamont of Morgan & Co., is listed as interested in claims of $3,316,765.92 of the International Harvester Company, and $315,002.07.

Dwight W. Morrow, a director of Morgan & Co., is put down by Mr. Garner as interested in the Bankers Trust Company claim of $93,554.42.

J. S. Frelinghuysen appears on Mr. Garner's list as interested in three insurance companies' claims amounting to $7,056,383.16.

Otto H. Kahn interests are listed in connection with Equitable Trust Company awards totaling $1,340,476.89.

Paul M. Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., has a claim of $510,978.83.

T. Coleman du Pont interests are connected in Mr. Garner's statement with claims of $45,453.09 held by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Bethlehem Chile Iron Mines Co.	$6,930.00
Chase National Bank	108,902.07
U. S. Steel Products Company	195,000.00
Total	$370,532.97

C. H. Remington, a director in the Chase National Bank, is on Mr. Garner's list as interested in the $1,419,-063.65 claim of the Automobile Insurance Company of Hartford.

Elihu Root Jr., as a director, is given as interested in the American Smelting and Refining Company's claim of $42,-658.58.

House Leaders Favor Postponement.

Despite the strong Administration support of what was known as the Mills bill, House leaders are not disposed to press it in this session. They point out that this is a campaign year, and that in view of the manifest determination of Mr. Garner and other Democratic leaders to attribute a sinister purpose to certain corporations in urging the passage of the measure, which, it is understood, will be sponsored in the future by Representative Hawley of Oregon, the time is not opportune to pass the bill.

Reports are heard around the Capitol that some leaders had felt that sponsorship of the bill by Mr. Mills would strengthen him in his candidacy for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination. There are Republicans now, however, who insist that Mr. Mills has damaged his cause materially, in view of the disclosure that he would have benefited personally from the measure, and that there is no good reason why the party as a whole should be placed upon the defensive in the coming campaign on an issue made out of hand by the Democrats.

Officials and Administration leaders deny positively that advocacy of the bill had any connection with a desire to win over the German-American vote, but there continues to be much talk about this feature of the controversy.

Indications are that no serious attempt will be made to pass the bill, although Secretary Mellon contends that it is correct in principle, and that Mr. Garner has failed to show anything that would warrant the Republican leaders in throwing this Administration proposal into the discard. Representative Garner made the prediction today that the bill would not be further considered in committee this session.

At the Treasury Department Secretary Mellon, after discussing informally the charges made by Representative Garner that the Secretary would benefit by the provisions of the bill, issued a formal statement outlining the purposes of the bill and the Treasury attitude toward the critics.

Secretary Mellon's Statement.

"Partisan opposition," said Secretary Mellon's statement, "has developed in the Congress to the plan prepared by the Treasury for the settlement of the private German property in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian, and for payment of the American mixed claims. I should like to restate in substance the considerations which must be taken into account in any solution of these problems.

"In the Versailles treaty Germany agreed to pay as reparations to the Allies 132,000,000,000 gold marks ($24,000,000,000) plus interest at 5 per cent. In the Berlin treaty Germany agreed to pay to the United States the American mixed claims, which are now estimated, with interest, at $250,000,000. These treaty payments were more than Germany could make, and Germany went into receivership.

"A creditors' committee investigated Germany's economic capacity, and found that 2,500,000,000 gold marks a year ($625,000,000), was Germany's entire capacity to meet her treaty obligations. This annuity of $625,000,000 may be compared to the $1,700,000,000 annual interest charge on the reparations which by the Versailles Treaty Germany had agreed to pay to the Allies. Germany's creditors accepted their committee's recommendations as embodied in the Dawes plan, and by the Paris agreement divided the total annuity among the creditors.

"The United States signed the Paris agreement and thereby accepted the Dawes plan. By the Paris agreement the annuity for the payment of the American mixed claims was fixed at 45,000,000 gold marks ($11,000,000). A Mixed Claims Commission between Germany and the United States has been set up and the American losses have been judicially determined by an impartial tribunal of high character. The United States holds the private German property as security for the payment of the private mixed claims.

Says "We Must Stick to Agreement."

"It is futile to say that Germany must pay the American mixed claims immediately because under the Berlin treaty it has promised to do so. The United States by the Paris agreement has agreed to the Dawes plan, which limits Germany's payments. Even if the Paris agreement could be canceled and the Dawes plan abandoned, the United States, under the Berlin treaty, would stand in no better position than Germany's other creditors under the Versailles Treaty, whose claims are enormous and quite beyond Germany's capacity. We must of necessity stick to the agreement we have signed in Paris.

"There are three possible courses: (1) Confiscate the private German property and use the proceeds to pay the American claims; (2) retain the private German property as security until the American claims are paid by Germany; (3) return the private German property.

"(1) Confiscate the private German property and apply the proceeds to pay the American claims—I pass over the legal question of the power of Congress to confiscate this property in view (a) of the joint resolution of Congress of March 3, 1921, which specifically provided that the property should be held as security for the payment of the American private claims; (b) of the Winslow act of March 4, 1923, which recognized that title to the property was in the German owners by providing for return of a portion of the property and for the payment of the income from the property to the German owners; (c) of the fact that the war is over and the international provisional against the taking of private property for public use without just compensation is now applicable.

"I believe that the question might be decided on broad grounds of national policy. To confiscate the private property of enemy citizens is inconsistent with the historical American policy, detrimental to our own citizens who now have, or will make, large investments abroad where similar confiscation might be adopted, and is, above all, wrong in morals. I can see no justification for the adoption of such a course.

Would Not Retain Property.

"2. Retain the private German property as security until the American claims are paid by Germany.—We can expect no larger payments from Germany than those provided by the Paris agreement. If the Dawes plan works 100 per cent. it will take eighty years for the specific annuity to liquidate the American claims, with interest. To retain the private German property in the hands of a public trustee indefinitely is virtual confiscation. To ask the American claimant to wait eighty years for payment is to deny him relief. This course gets us nowhere.

"3. Return the private German property.—If the private German property is returned to its owners, the security of the American claimants for the payment of their claims by Germany is taken away by act of the United States. This course will avoid confiscation of the private property of Germans only by confiscating the private property of Americans. The United States cannot do an immoral act to its own citizens so as to do a moral act to German citizens.

"It has seemed to the Treasury that the only practical solution of these problems, which are now before the Congress for determination, is to return the private German property, and for the United States to advance the funds necessary to pay now the American claims, and to recover the amount advanced from payments to be made to the United States under the Dawes plan on account both of the mixed claims and of the army of occupation costs. These payments together should reimburse the Treasury for the advances, with interest, within eight years.

"I am quite open-minded. If those opposed to the Treasury plan have any other practical plan to solve these questions, I believe it should be presented for consideration. We need constructive, not destructive, criticism."

GERMAN PRESS HOPEFUL.

Berlin Boerse Recovers From Slump Due to Claims Bill Situation.

BERLIN, April 19 (AP).—The disappointment with which the press discusses the reported tabling by the United States House of Representatives of the bill for the restitution of German properties is tinged with considerable hopefulness. The announcement caused the decline of stocks on the Boerse today, but they rapidly recovered from the initial slump, which affected principally shares in undertakings directly interested in such restitution.

The Boersen Courier declares: "Despite the disquieting news from America, there is no occasion for pessimism at the present time."

The Catholic organ, Germania, says: "Through the attitude of Representative Mills the situation is certainly not improved, but exaggerated pessimism is not called for. It is not unlikely that a Stock Exchange manoeuvre is behind the New York report. In place of Mr. Mills, another Representative might well introduce the bill in its present form, but postponement was deemed advisable, as objection to the bill would have furnished the Democrats with an election issue in the Fall."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung also is of the opinion that Mr. Mills's refusal to continue his support of the bill does not call for postponement until the Fall session, "because any other Congressman would be able to act as its sponsor."

The Zeitung Am Mittag reports that America was the sole topic of conversation in banking circles this forenoon. It expresses the opinion that the United States is sure to avoid establishing a precedent extending the means of warfare to private property, in view of heavy American investments in Germany in recent years, and the conviction that restitution ultimately will be approved.

LAGO OIL DUE TO MAKE ALL ITS STOCK VOTING

Special Meeting Called May 1 to Overcome Objections to Two Classifications.

Directors of the Lago Oil & Transport Co. have called a special meeting of stockholders for May 1, to have them approve proposals for simplifying the company's capital structure. This proposal is in the form of an amendment to the company's certificate of incorporation, eliminating the present classification of shares into Class A and B shares, and making all of one class, each share to be "equal to every other such share in voting rights as well as in all other respects." The total number of shares authorized to be issued is 4,000,000, all of which are to be common stock without par value.

While no official comment was available yesterday, it was assumed that the proposed change in the capital structure will pave the way for listing the shares on the New York Stock Exchange, and at the same time will meet the criticism which has developed during recent months, originating with Professor William Z. Ripley of Harvard, against the issuance of non-voting stock.

The company had previously applied to have the stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The application, however, was rejected because of the fact that the stock did not carry voting power. The Lago Oil and Transport Co. is controlled by the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Co.

LOSE "BUCKET" APPEAL.

Supreme Court Refuses to Review Cases of Silkworth and Others.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The United States Supreme Court today declined to review the sentences of conviction imposed by the lower courts in the cases of William H. Silkworth, former head of the Consolidated Exchange, and others involved on charges of using the mails to defraud and "bucketing." Three separate petitions praying for review were filed with the high court, but each was refused. The convictions, therefore, will stand.

Some of the men were sent to the Essex County Jail while others were sent to Atlanta. The petitions were filed on behalf of Silkworth, of Nicholas, Trusdell & Gilbrough, members of a firm of stock brokers, and Edward A. McQuade and Francis X. Quillan, curb brokers.

20-Year 6% Sinking Fund Gold Debentures

Dated February 1, 1926 Due February 1, 1946

The Company agrees to pay interest without deduction for any normal Federal Income Tax not exceeding 2%, which the Company or Trustee may be required or permitted to pay at the source, and to reimburse the resident holders of these debentures, if requested within 60 days after payment, for the personal property tax in the States of Connecticut, Pennsylvania and California, not exceeding four mills per annum, State of Maryland not exceeding four and one-half mills per annum and District of Columbia not exceeding five mills per annum and also for the Massachusetts income Tax, not exceeding 6%, on the interest.

EXCHANGE PRIVILEGE: These Debentures, in limited amounts, carry the opportunity of exchange into National Public Service Corporation, Class "A" Common Stock, as follows: Debentures up to but not exceeding $500,000 principal amount in each of the following years will be accepted in exchange for (a) 40 shares for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures during the year ending April 30, 1927, (b) 35 shares for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures during the year ending April 30, 1928, (c) 30 shares for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures during the year ending April 30, 1929. This privilege will extend to the Debentures first presented for exchange in each of said years and will expire at the end of each of said years to the extent not exercised by that time. This Class "A" Common Stock, in addition to certain participating features is entitled to priority as to dividends over Class "B" Common Stock, to the extent of $1.60 per share per annum. Such dividends are cumulative to the extent earned in any calendar year, and have been paid regularly since issuance. For the twelve months ended December 31, 1925, dividend on the outstanding Class "A" Common Stock was earned approximately four times.

Mr. A. E. Pitkin, President of the Company, summarizes his letter to us as follows:

Company: Virginia Public Service Company and its subsidiary Newport News and Hampton Railway, Gas and Electric Company, serve with electric light and power, 130 communities of a total population over 220,000. This territory includes Newport News, Hampton and environs, Alexandria, Warrentown, Charlottesville, Staunton, Clifton Forge, Emporia, South Boston, and immediate communities in Virginia. Gas and ice business is done in eight communities, and street railways are operated in Newport News and Charlottesville, with an aggregate trackage of 53 equivalent miles of single track.

The Company has set aside funds estimated to be sufficient in amount to acquire the balance of the outstanding preferred and common stocks of the Newport News and Hampton Railway Gas and Electric Company, of which it now owns over 93% of Common Stock and 70% of Preferred Stock. In the near future, it is proposed to merge the properties with those of the Virginia Public Service Company, and upon such merger, the bonds of the Newport News and Hampton Railway Gas and Electric Company, now outstanding consisting of $4,734,500 of 5% Bonds and $46,000 of 4½% Bonds, will become divisional liens of the Virginia Public Service Company.

LOREE HEADS BOARD OF THE M-K-T ROAD

Action Places Him in Charge of Two of the Three Lines He Plans to Merge.

SURPRISE FOR WALL STREET

Reports Had Been Current That Harry S. Black Would Get the Important Post.

Contrary to expectations in Wall Street, where it was predicted several days ago when Harry S. Black was elected a director of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad that he would be made Chairman of the board, Leonor F. Loree himself was selected as Chairman yesterday at the local organization meeting. This action places Mr. Loree at the head of two of the three railroads he plans to merge into a new Southwestern syatem—the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the Kansas City Southern.

The third member of the group—the St. Louis Southwestern, or Cotton Belt—is headed by Edwin Gould, last of the Gould family to serve as Chairman of a railroad. Mr. Gould no longer controls the road, the majority of his holdings having been sold to the Rock Island and then to Mr. Loree. He has remained as Chairman of the board of the Cotton Belt pending further development of the merger plan, and railroad men regard it as doubtful if he will continue long in that capacity.

Charles N. Whitehead, now the executive Vice President of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, will become its President on May 1, succeeding C. E. Shaff, who will retire on that date.

Mr. Loree, who is now in California on a vacation trip, said recently that an application would be made soon to the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the Cotton Belt by the Kansas City Southern. He indicated that the corporate identity of the three companies would be retained and they would be operated as a "family group."

Yesterday's action of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas directors in placing Mr. Loree at the head of the road is regarded as convincing evidence that the Katy will be an important part of the new system, possibly the most important part.

Nine of the fifteen members of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas board are "Loree men," and the election of as large a majority is expected at the coming Cotton Belt meeting.

DECLINES TO REVIEW DIVIDEND TAX CASE

Supreme Court Denies Plea of American Telegraph and Cable Company.

The United States Supreme Court yesterday denied a writ of certiorari in an income tax action brought by the American Telegraph and Cable Company, thus declining to grant the review of a case involving unusual contentions as to what constitutes income. The payment under dispute was levied by the Government on the $700,000 which the Western Union pays to American Telegraph shareholders in the form of guaranteed 5 per cent. dividends.

It was contended by counsel for the company that the $700,000 did not constitute income because it was paid to shareholders and not into its treasury. It was held that the company had no control of these payments by the Western Union and derived no income from them.

Application for the writ was made after the Court of Claims had ruled against the cable company. It was said that a new action would be started based on the grounds that, as the Western Union held 23,094 shares of the cable company, the dividends paid on these shares should be deducted from the taxable income, which would leave the latter amount at about $330,000.

The action by the cable company involves the 1922 dividend payments. The decision of the Supreme Court, it was said, did not affect the validity of the points at issue, but meant only that the court declined to reopen the action, and that another action on similar grounds could be brought in new cases.

The Western Union guarantees dividends on the cable company's stock in return for the use of two Atlantic cables.

KEROSENE RISES IN WEST.

Ohio Oil Co. Goes Outside United States for Production.

Kerosene tank-wagon prices were advanced 1 cent a gallon yesterday in Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico by the Continental Oil Company. The new price at Denver is 16½ cents.

The Ohio Oil Company, one of the oldest of the Standard Oil group, is going outside of the United States for the first time since its organization to obtain crude oil production. A new company has been formed under the laws of Mexico known as the Ohio-Mexican Oil Corporation, in which the Ohio Oil Company holds the majority interest, about 60 per cent. The balance is owned by the Hoffer Oil Corporation and others.

Under the arrangement the Ohio Oil pays for the initial development, which consists of two wells to be drilled in ninety days and for geological research. Three geological parties have been sent to the property.

St. Paul Hearing Reopens Tomorrow.

Hearings in the Interstate Commerce Commission investigation of the affairs of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will reopen tomorrow morning at the Port Authority offices at 11 Broadway. John D. Ryan, copper magnate, who was on the stand last Wednesday to supplement his testimony of April 12, will continue the story of his connection with the St. Paul.

Austria's February Revenue Up.

A preliminary statement by the Austrian Government shows that February revenues exceeded current expenditures by $2,000,000, compared with a budget estimate of $571,428. Including capital expenditures of nearly $2,143,000, there was a deficit of $27,140.

Purchases Shares in German Bank.

European Shares, Inc., announced yesterday the purchase of a block of shares in the Darmstaedter Bank of Germany. The bank has a capital of 60,000,000 marks and a reserve of 40,000,000 marks. It paid a 10 per cent dividend in 1924 and has 130 branches.

Congressman Davey Raises His Insurance to $1,050,000

Martin L. Davey, Congressman from the Fourth Ohio District, increased his insurance yesterday to $1,050,000 by taking additional policies for $500,000, all of them twenty-year endowment. He is believed to be the youngest man in the country carrying policies so large. Mr. Davey is 42 years old.

The policies were written by Robert L. Bowen of Cleveland, and are apportioned among six companies. It might be added that the doctors of all six insurance companies have examined Mr. Davey and have pronounced him physically perfect.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Complexion of Market Unchanged —French at New Low; Spanish and Japanese Continue Strong.

Nothing developed in the foreign exchange market yesterday to set it aside from the trend, and the factors governing it, which characterized the sessions of last week. A fresh slump in the French, Belgian and the Chinese descriptions, while the Spanish and Japanese documents continued strong, were again the high points of the day.

The selling which carried the French franc to a record low at 3.30 cents, was not of broad proportions, dealers said, although offerings were present in the fore and afternoon. Lack of support and a thin buyers' market allowed it to wend steadily and slowly from 3.36½, the opening, until 3.30 was reached. The Belgian unit was also weak at 3.65 cents. The upturn in Japanese yen carried it to above 47 cents, for cables, but the rate finally settled at that figure at the close. This is the highest in more than three years. Spanish pesetas climbed 4 points to 14.41 cents, and was strong despite break-up in conference on Riff warfare. Chinese exchanges yielded ⅛ to ⅜ cents, new lows. Sterling, lire, the Scandinavians and Swiss were quiet but firm. South Americans were virtually unchanged.

CITIES SERVICE NET INCREASES $2,215,327

Earnings for 1925 Were Equal to 15.24 Per Cent. on the Common Stock.

SURPLUS IS $78,347,922

Net income of the Cities Service Company for 1925 exceeded that for 1924 by $2,215,327, according to the annual report issued yesterday. The earnings in 1925 were $18,989,071 as compared with $16,773,774 in the preceding year.

After interest and other charges the 1925 income equaled 2.19 times the preferred dividend requirements, and after preferred dividends, a balance of $11,496,900 remained which was equivalent to 15.24 per cent. on $75,417,420 common stock outstanding. This compares with 12.79 per cent. earned on $72,102,174 of common stock in 1924.

Gross earnings of the company in 1925 were $19,764,976, of which $12,255,184 came from public utilities and the remaining $7,509,751 came from oil interests. These figures compare respectively with $17,463,217, $11,559,318, and $5,903,899 in 1924.

The company balance sheet shows current assets for 1925 of $67,367,121 and current liabilities of $33,214,931, with working capital of $34,152,190 against $29,147,937 in 1924. Cash in 1925 totaled $19,040,153 and total capital assets were $519,727,884. The total surplus and reserves were $78,347,922.

President Henry L. Doherty, in his remarks to the stockholders, said:

"Business conditions in general throughout the country showed marked improvement over the preceding year, and because of your company's diversified activities in the production of commodities so essential for all industrial operations and domestic comfort, it shared this general improvement.

"The scope of your foreign oil activities was broadened during the year through the acquisition of important and extensive oil rights in Canada and Panama drilling operations were begun in both countries and are now making good progress. Customer ownership activities during the year were carried on in practically all of your subsidiaries and resulted in a widened distribution of securities through their sale to more than 41,000 individuals and to more than 5,200 employes. The total number of security holders of your company and its subsidiaries is now in excess of 235,000.

"During the year the new business departments of your public utility subsidiaries reported appliance and installation sales of $7,731,842 as compared with $5,636,763 in the preceding year.

"Your company continued in 1925 its policy of encouraging the development of a greater and more efficient utilization of gas and oil through the installation of several hundred combination gas and oil house heating burners. The year 1926 opens with business conditions on a high plane in all the communities served by your subsidiaries, and with the manufacturers reporting orders on hand which will carry them well into the year. We are looking forward to another year of good industrial conditions."

AMERADA NET PROFIT IN 1925 $2,498,428

Gain Over the Earnings in 1924 Represented the Equivalent of $2.20 a Share.

Net earnings of the Amerada Corporation and subsidiaries for 1925 aggregated $2,498,428, equivalent to $4.21 a share on the 588,200 shares outstanding on Dec. 31. This represents a gain in net income equivalent to $2.20 a share over the earnings in 1924, the increase being attributed to larger production of crude oil and gasoline, improved conditions within the industry and to the sale of storage oil at a profit.

The balance sheet shows current assets of $2,571,386 as of Dec. 31, 1925, equal to more than twice the amount of all liabilities. The surplus available for dividends amounted to $4,105,416, equivalent to $6.98 a share on the stock then outstanding. A dividend of $1 a share was paid on Jan. 15, 1926.

Since the beginning of 1926 the authorized capital has been increased from 600,000 shares of $10 par to 1,000,000 shares of no par value and the old exchanged for new, share for share. Also, 125,000 new shares were sold and an option given on 200,000 additional shares at $25 a share to Dillon, Read & Co. These negotiations were in connection with a financing arrangement among Dillon, Read & Co., the corporation and former stockholders, by which the control of the corporation passed from British to American interests. Of the 1,000,000 shares authorized 713,300 are issued and outstanding.

RAILROADS DISPUTE AGE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 19.—Officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and those of the New York Central disagree as to which was the first railroad in the country. At the celebration in New York Saturday night of the one hundredth anniversary of the Mohawk & Hudson road Chauncey Depew, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the New York Central, said the charter for the line was granted by New York State on April 17, 1826. This date marks the granting of the first charter to build a railroad in America, the records show.

The Baltimore & Ohio received a charter on Feb. 28, 1827, from the State of Maryland. Governor Albert Ritchie has appointed a commission to cooperate with the Baltimore & Ohio, the City of Baltimore and any organizations that may desire to participate in a centennial celebration of the granting of that charter. It will be held Feb. 28 next year.

The line which originated in New York State, considering the dates of the charter is ten months and ten days older than the Baltimore & Ohio, it is contended by officials of the former line.

That this is true is admitted by officials of the Baltimore & Ohio, but the first steam engine was operated on the Baltimore & Ohio on Aug. 30, 1830.

The first steam engine on the Mohawk & Hudson was not operated until 1831, according to that line's records and therefore the Baltimore & Ohio officials contend, it is outranked as a locomotive road despite the irrefutable fact of an earlier charter to operate.

It is further contended by the Baltimore & Ohio that the honor belongs to it because it has grown from that first nucleus to its present status, while the Mohawk & Hudson has been merged into a larger system under an entirely different name.

CRUDE RUBBER PRICES UP 70 TO 90 POINTS

Crude rubber futures turned strong and prices advanced from 70 to 90 points yesterday. The market had an irregular opening, as near-by months were down nearly 1 cent from Saturday's final, but the accumulation of buying orders over the week-end caused a renewal of the activity in May and July and sent the former up to 48.30 and the latter to 48.30 cents.

The market was a fairly broad one, five months being traded in and 230 lots changing hands. December, the most distant position in which business was done, bounded to 45.20 cents, from 44 cents at the start, closing at 45.00 cents, an advance of 2 cents over Saturday. Offerings in considerable volume appeared when the high prices were struck, but the pressure was not forceful enough to last through a strong last half hour.

The range of prices for the active positions follows:

	High.	Low.	Saturday's Close.	Close.
May	48.30	46.10	47.60	48.00

Other months closed: September, 45.60; October, 45.50; November, 45.50; January, 45.30; February, 45.00; March, 44.80. Spots were quoted at 48.00.

Business in the outside market was comparatively quiet, although here the trend followed the rally in prices on the Exchange. The principal grades advanced 1 cent a pound on speculative buying and short covering.

According to the weekly report of the London Rubber Association, stocks in London April 17 totaled 16,953 tons, an increase of 1,653 tons over the amount on hand at the end of the previous week. Cables reported British tire manufacturers as having cut tire prices 10 per cent., effective at once.

Hudson & Manhattan Profits.

The income compares with $454,004, or 97 cents a share in the first quarter of last year. Gross earnings for the quarter were $3,072,172, as compared with $3,058,085 in 1925.

Earnings of other public utility companies made public yesterday follow:

SALES TURN GAIN IN WHEAT INTO LOSS

The Market in May Trust Opens With a Two-Cent-Plus Rise Closes With a Drop.

EXPORT SLOWS DOWN AGAIN

Railroad Predicts Enormous Grops in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Nebraska.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 19.—Wheat was active and sharply higher early with May up 2¼ cents, to a top of $1.70¾, a new high on the present movement, but heavy profit taking developed, a break of 2¾@3¾ cents from the outside figures followed, and the finish was at net losses of ½@¾ cents. There was nothing in the general run of the news to account for the selling other than that values have advanced 12¾@13¾ cents from the recent low point and the technical position has been weakened.

Winnipeg claimed that exporters had bought around 1,000,000 bushels of futures against export sales over night, but that market flatness out rapidly toward the last and closed 1¾@1¾ cents lower for the day. Liverpool gained 1¼@2¼ pence, while Buenos Aires was ½@1 cent higher.

The seaboard failed to confirm a good foreign demand and final estimates on sales were 250,000 bushels to 300,000 bushels.

Selling of wheat futures, which was largely responsible for the sharp decline from the best figures of the day, was by local longs, some of whom had liberal profits and were anxious to secure them. At the close a majority of the local operators were out of their wheat and some of them were short.

Toward the last there was liberal selling of May wheat here by a house with Northwestern connections, which led to fears that there had been more cash wheat to come here, but the order was to close a spread between here and the Northwest.

Local contract stocks are down to 81,000 bushels in public elevators and there is little prospect of any further reduction unless the owners of the 23,000 bushels of No. 2 red Winter in special bins should order it out.

The Rock Island Railroad estimates the crop of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Nebraska at 337,600,000 bushels based on the present outlook, compared with 139,000,000 harvested last year.

A decrease of 1,828,000 bushels in the domestic visible supply made the total 29,290,000 bushels, compared with 31,116,000 the previous week and 53,203,000 last year.

The visible supply decreased 1,585,000 bushels for the week and is 33,943,000, against 35,528,000 the previous week and 27,706,000 last year.

Primary arrivals today were 711,000 bushels; week ago, 573,000; last year, 805,000. Shipments, 404,000 bushels; week ago, 370,000; last year, 546,000.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN REPORTS LARGE GAIN

Gross Revenue of $6,749,302 in 1925 the Best in Road's History.

The Georgia Southern & Florida Railway in its annual statement for 1925 reports a larger volume of traffic, both freight and passenger, during the year than ever before and the revenue therefrom the greatest for any year in the company's history.

Gross operating revenue was $6,749,302, an increase of $1,569,174, or 30.29 per cent., over the preceding year. Operating expenses increased from $3,611,860 to $4,415,378, or 22.25 per cent., and with taxes consumed 71.02 cents out of each dollar of revenue, compared with 73.98 cents in 1924. Net income for 1925 remaining after payment of rents and interest charges was $1,003,779, compared with $581,192 in 1924. Dividends on the first and second preferred stocks of 5 per cent. were paid during the year.

Surplus after payment of these dividends was $915,379, or the equivalent of $45.76 per share on $2,000,000 common stock. This compares with a surplus of $492,792 the previous year.

"The increased and economical handling of the greatly increased volume of traffic on your railroad," says President Fairfax Harrison, "renders imperative the provision of many additions and improvements to the physical plant, and the Board of Directors has deemed it essential to devote such surplus cash as current income results have made available to paying for such of these improvements as are immediately necessary."

The general balance sheet shows current assets of $1,982,441 against current liabilities of $1,244,721. They compare respectively with $1,244,721 and $1,404,418 at the close of 1924. The road is controlled by the Southern Railway.

ARMOUR STOCK BREAKS.

A Shares Go Below 20 on the Chicago Exchange.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 19.—A sharp break in Armour A shares was the outstanding feature of the trading on the Chicago Stock Exchange today. The A stock dropped below 20 for the first time since it was brought out early in 1925 at 22½ a share. The drop of 2¾ points to 19 carried it down to where it has a yield of more than 12 per cent. if the present dividend rate of $2 a share per annum is to be continued. Other packing shares were heavy. Armour B lost nearly a point, while Swift & Co. and Swift International sold lower.

P. Edson White, President of Armour & Co., when asked if there was danger of the $2 A dividend being reduced or omitted, said: "No question of this sort has been under consideration."

COTTON PRICES HOLD WITHIN SMALL RANGE

Demand Offsets Favorable Weather and Losses Vary From 3 to 9 Points.

PRESSURE FOLLOWS RALLY

Houses With Mill Interests Report Need of Price Adjustment In May Position.

Over Sunday weather in the South proved the most favorable since the latter part of February, but liquidation diminished when compared with the volume of business at the close of the week and cotton prices lost 3 to 8 points yesterday. The fact that first notices on the May delivery will be circulated a week from today maintained active covering operations and quotations again failed to decline below the 18½ cents level. As the market has lost half a cent recently, demand developed on a scale to hold the list within an unusually narrow range. Several factors both within and outside the cotton industry exerted an unsettling influence on sentiment which brought selling pressure subsequent to a 10-point rally, closing the market at about low figures of the day.

Though May contracts in Liverpool sold at the same price as in New York, houses doing a mill business reported a substantial quantity of price fixing still to be done in the May position. Demand for July around 18 cents and for October at 17 cents furnished resistance throughout the session, but commission house buying was restricted by developments in the silk market, where a sharp decline in prices occurred. An lighter volume of new business is reported in textiles generally, with a disposition to avoid stock accumulation wherever possible.

Of 254 stations in the cotton belt, 127 reported maximum temperatures ranging from 80 to 90 degrees on Sunday and 112 stations reported 80 to 92 degrees yesterday. Though nights continued cool with temperatures below the seasonable average over a wide area, conditions proved more favorable for farming operations than for several weeks past.

CASH REGISTER CO. TACTICS ASSAILED

FEES OFFERED, ONE SAYS

Woman Declares Salesman Asked Her to "Knock" Remington Machine.

Four witnesses yesterday before the Federal Trade Commission, at 45 Broadway, which is investigating a charge of unfair trade competition by the National Cash Register Company, told of efforts by its ... agents to have them break contracts for purchase of Remington cash registers. But only one of these witnesses was able to recall names of the so-called agents or representatives of the National Cash Register Company in these transactions, and therefore all the rest of this testimony may be excluded ultimately if proof is not had of connection with the company of the supposed agents.

Irma Kaudelka, manager of a bakery at 1,320 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, testified that a man who represented himself as a salesman for the National Cash Register Company had offered to give her $10 to "knock the Remington machine." She said the name of the alleged agent was unknown to her. He had arrived at the store in an automobile, but she was unable to describe the car or the appearance of the alleged briber.

Antonio Pagelo, a jeweler, 662 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, told of an unidentified "salesman," who, he said, claimed to "come from the National Cash Register Company, in August, 1923, and had tried to have him break a contract with the Remington Arms Company, saying that the Remington machine would cost him a lot of trouble in the end. Similar testimony was given by Victor De Laville, a butcher, 243 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn.

Files an Objection.

Frank P. Dinsmore, chief counsel for the National Cash Register Company, filed a general objection to all of this testimony, contending that it was immaterial and irrelevant since there was no identity of the alleged salesman or agent. Edward M. Averill, trial master of the hearing, overruled the objection, with the stipulation that if this situation was not corrected in later testimony objection to it might be renewed.

The final witness of the session, Abraham Horwitz of 1,263 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, testified that after he had purchased a Remington machine in 1923 two agents of the National Cash Register Company visited his store and tried to induce him to repudiate his contract with the Remington Arms Company. "They told me the Remington machine was no good, and I ordered them to get out," said Horwitz.

He could not recall the first names of his visitors. One of them, he declared, was an agent named Poppenberg and the other Grill, manager of a Brooklyn agency of the National Company.

William A. Sweet, counsel for the commission, announced his intention to present evidence purporting to show that salesmen had made false and misleading statements to customers of the Remington Company, including allegations tending to make it appear that it was financially unsound; that its machines would rapidly get out of repair and that users of the machines would have difficulty in getting supplies and repairs.

ELECTRICAL EXPERTS HONORED AT DINNER

Thank New York for Hospitality as Session Ends—Walker Says City Was 'Proud' to Have Them.

The convention of the International Electrotechnical Committee, which brought to New York a group of the world's greatest electrical geniuses, came to an end at the Hotel Astor last night with a dinner given in honor of the delegates by the light and power companies of Greater New York.

Those who spoke, thanking New York for its hospitality during the past week, included Dr. John W. Lieb, Vice-President and General Manager of the New York Edison Company; Guido Semenza, President of the International Electrotechnical Committee, who spoke for Italy; Professor C. Feldmann, President of the Dutch Electrotechnical Committee, who represented the Teutonic and Scandinavian countries; E. Uytborck, Chairman of the Belgian delegation, who spoke for the Latin nations; Domingo Santa Maria, a Chilean, representing the Latin-Americans; E. Huber-Stockar, President of the Swiss Electrotechnical Committee, and Sir Richard Glazebrook, K. C. B., President of the British National Committee. Gano Dunn, Chairman of the National Research Council, presided.

Mayor Walker came in during the dinner to tell the delegates how "proud" New York had been in entertaining them during their conference. Professor Luigi Lombardi, President of the Italian Electrotechnical Committee, extended an invitation to the scientists to hold their next annual meeting in Rome.

The formulation of an international technical language for designating units and measurements for machinery and machine equipment was proposed yesterday at the session of the International Conference on Standardization, held in the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. Most of the members of the Electrotechnical Committee are also delegates to the standardization conference. The proposal was referred to special committees, which will report next Thursday.

TO SHOW SUMMER MODES.

Manufacturers Seek to Help Linen Trade by Advancing Fashions.

Retail merchants from 151 cities in various parts of the country are expected to attend a Summer season fashion promenade under the auspices of the National Garment Retailers' Association at the Hotel Commodore tonight.

The purpose of the promenade, as outlined by John W. Hahn, Secretary of the organization, is to bring out entirely new fashions during April, May and June, thereby increasing activity in the trade during what has been in the past a dull period.

Thirty-nine exhibitors will show 120 models. More than 2,000 retailers and manufacturers will be present. The creations were prepared by the outstanding producers in the garment trades.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—4¼ per cent. for the best names. Saturday—4¼ per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for six months' paper.

Silks Being Bought for Sales.

Buying of silks for sales purposes by retailers continued to be a feature of the business in the wholesale market here. The purchasing is still spread out over a number of weaves and buyers are shopping rather carefully for concessions. So far, the trade has been greatly disappointed in the way the later season business has shaped up, although there is a fair amount of confidence about the prospects during the next few weeks. Manufacturers are doing little to speed up the date of their Fall openings.

Floor Coverings Are Quiet Here.

With the Smith auction a thing of the past and no more important Fall openings due until the first of June, things have quieted down considerably in the local floor covering trade. Some house trading is being done from day to day by buyers located in the metropolitan district and in sections more or less adjacent to it, but even in the aggregate it does not amount to a great deal. Initial orders received from the men now on the road have been uneven, many of the jobbing buyers who bought heavily in the closing days of the Smith sale being more interested in disposing of their purchases of auction goods at present than in looking ahead to Fall. That the jobbers are having no small amount of success in this is shown by the way that rugs sold at the auction are already appearing in special sales staged by retailers in the Eastern half of the country. Indications are that a very large part of the sale merchandise will be in either retailers' or consumers' hands by the time the Fall season gets into full swing about six weeks hence.

Rayon Prices to Hold.

The statement made yesterday morning by S. A. Salvage of the Viscose Company that he could see no price reductions for an extended period to come sets at rest the rumors which have been circulated that prices were to be lowered with the quarter beginning in July. This anticipation of a reduction was most strong in the hosiery and knitwear trades and had created a rather unstable price situation in certain of that merchandise. Both hosiery and knitwear executives said yesterday that Mr. Salvage's statement is likely to have a good influence in firming values up, although there may be some disappointment in the elimination of the prospective reduction. Other factors in the rayon trade agreed with Mr. Salvage that rayon stocks on hand were small and that orders in hand were encouraging.

Cool Spring Has Hampered Sales.

Early reports from clothing salesmen on the road with Fall lines deal more with the lack of satisfactory turnover of Spring merchandise by retailers than any other one factor, it was said yesterday by clothing wholesalers. The road men report that the retailers, while not loaded with heavy stocks, have not had much of a demand for either Spring suits or topcoats yet, mainly owing to the poor selling weather in many sections. Retail sentiment, as outlined by the salesmen, was confident, however, and the belief was general that warmer weather would have greatly aided in adding to sales totals. It is not anticipated that there will be any serious carryover of Spring merchandise, although retailers are reported as placing only a restricted amount of advance business, with many of them buying on a strictly budget basis.

Plaids Are Helping Ginghams.

Predictions made in this market some time ago that the revival of interest in plaids for women's outer apparel—which is now manifesting itself here in the offerings of leading style shops—would stimulate the demand for ginghams gives evidence of being borne out. Although the business being done here on these fabrics at present is practically all for immediate delivery, the demand for them in both dress and staple patterns is slowly but steadily increasing. At least one large handler of ginghams has been obliged to turn down quite a little business because of the inability of the mills to make the desired deliveries. One line of ginghams handled by this commission house is sold up solidly until June. Gingham buying for Fall delivery at the moment is practically nil, and in well-posted quarters here the belief exists that not a great deal of activity in these goods for the new season will be seen until after Decoration Day.

Gray Goods Sales Not Large.

Business in gray goods was not very large here yesterday. With Fall River practically out of the market as a result of the Patriots' Day holiday in Massachusetts, trading proceeded under a handicap. Printcloth sales for the day were confined to spot and near-by deliveries, and they included 39-inch 68-72s at 8¾ cents, 39½-inch 64-60s at 7¾ cents and 38½-inch 60-48s at 6½ cents. Large sales of 36-inch 6.15-yard sheetings were made at 6 cents for delivery in May and June, with 6¼ cents asked for spots. Business in 36-inch 5-yard sheetings was put through at 7½ cents. In the heavier goods there were sales of 37-inch 3.95-yard drills at 9 cents, and of 2.75-yard drills of the same width at 12¾ cents. There was not much movement in the fine-yarn cloths or specialties.

Toy Buying Is Uneven.

Reports from the toy trade indicate that buying at the Chicago Toy Fair, which was said here yesterday to be in its third and final week, has so far run parallel with the local fairs in regard to its unevenness. As at those recently staged in this city most of the ordering has been done by the wholesalers. The best buying at Chicago has been by those jobbers from the Pacific Coast districts who did not come to New York during February. Retail buying at Chicago has not been heavy, from all accounts, and indications there have been, as in this market, that to get out big retail business by the fair route it may soon be necessary to stage special July events for this class of buyers. Although it is still too early to make a definite statement, a very interesting announcement will be made here soon in relation to the future of toy fairs in this city.

Were Nothing to Brag About.

Comments heard in the Duane Street shoe district these days regarding sales of Spring merchandise up to Easter are largely in the nature of post-mortems, for with most concerns in the trade these sales were nothing to brag about. Although in some instances the aggregate business booked between the beginning of the season and April 4 ran ahead of that of the previous Spring, most of the wholesalers and not a few of the manufacturers ran behind. One of the notable exceptions to this was supplied by several leading producers of the higher-grade footwear for men. Business with the local wholesalers at the moment is confined to merchandise wanted for "at once" deliveries, and, because of the continued low temperatures, it is none too active. For the most part retailers are buying only such footwear as is essential to keeping their stocks well balanced.

Uncertain About Fall Cloths.

The divided opinion among the mills as to the future for bolivias or needle-point cloths, at least with reference to their use for higher priced garments, has a counterpart in the garment trade. There are those in the latter industry who up to now have had confidence that these cloths, despite their spotting tendencies, were again headed for another active Fall season. In fact a number of cutters had placed a fair volume of business in these cloths for delivery in time for early Fall preparations. Recent developments, notably the abandoning of bolivias and needlepoints by a well known style mill, have caused these cutters to lose some of their confidence in the weaves, and there is general uncertainty about the cloths that will be leaders for formal wear next Fall. It is expected that much of this doubt will be cleared away in the next few days, when lines of formal fabrics are opened for the coming season.

Poor Season for Dress Worsteds.

Except for the demand that was brought about by the increased style interest in the suits in the women's wear trade, the Spring business in worsteds for that industry has not been either large or satisfactory. The demand was concentrated on one type of worsted, namely, the lustrous cloths of very fine twill weave. Ordinary twills had but little interest. The buying of lustrous twills for coats proved somewhat of a disappointment, as the sale of twill coats was held down by the concentrating of buyers' attention more on silk garments and those made of sports fabrics. Worsteds for Spring dresses had but a limited call, silks having practically everything their own way in this branch of the trade.

CHARGES RAILROADS RUIN SOFT COAL FIELDS

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP).—A railroad "conspiracy, headed by W. W. Atterbury, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is forcing the bituminous coal industry into bankruptcy," Philip Murray, Vice President of the United Mine Workers, declared today before the House Commerce Committee at a hearing on coal legislation.

Opposing arbitration proposals for the industry, Mr. Murray assailed "any plan for Government intrusion that would take from the miner his right of self-determination," and launched an attack against Mr. Atterbury.

"General Atterbury asserts that the railroads are going to force coal mine wages downward," he said, "and his plan is nothing short of the execution of a conspiracy that dictates coal prices. He is opposed to coal mine wages compatible with American living standards."

Success of the railroads in "dictating ruinous coal prices," was made possible, said Mr. Murray, by the 100 per cent. overdevelopment in the soft coal industry. He declared that bituminous operators, instead of accepting the challenge of the railroads, were asking labor to accept wage reductions. In the bituminous industry "cut-throat competition had developed, dissipating large pools of capital, wrecking mining communities and demoralizing the basic structure of the industry."

Union miners, he said, would not object to the creation of a Federal fact-finding commission provided miners had ample representation and "the facts gathered are to be used to eliminate uneconomic and unscientific freight rates, curb railroad conspiracies, ascertain operators' profits and show the exact relationship between producing companies and selling agencies."

Abrogation of the Jacksonville wage agreement with miners was charged by the witness to the Pittsburgh Coal Company, in which he said Secretary Mellon was financially interested.

STORE CAN'T EVEN GIVE HIGH SHOES AWAY

Dealer Cuts Price All Day, Puts Up Sign 'Help Yourself' and Still Only Laces Are Taken.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, N. J., April 19.—John W. Zanelli, a shoe dealer on East Washington Avenue, received corroboration today of his suspicion that high shoes were not in vogue here. Mr. Zanelli had 150 pair of high shoes for men and women which did not "move," so this morning he put them on a counter outside his shop with a sign which read: "$1 per pair."

Ten o'clock came with no purchasers, and Mr. Zanelli changed the sign to read: "Two pair for $1."

Twelve o'clock came with no purchasers, and Mr. Zanelli changed the sign again to "Three pair for $1."

Trade is dull anyway at the luncheon hour, but at 4 o'clock, after not a single purchaser for high shoes had appeared, Mr. Zanelli changed the sign once more to read: "Help Yourself."

"That'll make 'em move," he said as he went back into his shop.

Many persons stopped at the counter during the remainder of the afternoon, but when Mr. Zanelli came out at 6 o'clock to go home not a single pair of shoes had been carried away. The persons who stopped had merely removed the laces and taken them home, presumably to put them in low shoes.

WALSH ASKS SENATE TO ACT ON MERGERS

Submits Resolution Calling for Federal Trade Board Inquiry Into Big Combinations.

TO COVER LAST FOUR YEARS

Economic Effects of Consolidations and Means to Control Them Are Sought by Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Large business combinations of the last four years would be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission under the terms of a resolution introduced in the Senate today by Senator Walsh of Montana. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The commission would be required to inquire into all corporations "alleged to have organized in violation of the anti-trust laws, and into all other important combinations of like character founded during the last four years, and report to the Senate."

The inquiry would ascertain the nature of the combinations, whether they have lessened competition or created monopoly, whether they have stabilized production, and how they have affected economic conditions in several other respects.

This additional information would be required of the commission:

"What new form of Federal action, whether legislative or administrative, is recommended as most effective to regulate and control such corporate combinations, including legislation to prevent the issuance of securities which are not justified by the fair value of the property or earning power of the issuing corporation, or respecting which adequate disclosure is not made regarding such value or earning power, to prevent speculative banking control, and to prevent excessive profits?"

Preamble Mentions Combinations.

Several combinations were pointed to in the preamble to the resolution, which set forth in part:

"There have been formed in recent years numerous industrial and other combinations on the basis of of the acquisition either of shares of stock or of plants, or other assets, and in particular the following:

"The Kelvinator, Nizer and Grand Rapids Electric Refrigerator Corporations, the du Pont de Nemours and Viscoloid Companies, the Remington and Noiseless Typewriter Companies, the Corona and L. C. Smith Typewriter Companies, the Icy Hot and American Thermos Bottle Companies, the Congoleum and Nairn Companies, the Ginter, J. T. Connor and O'Keefe Chain Grocery Stores.

"The consolidation of Earle & Wilson and Cluett Peabody brought together two of the largest shirt and collar manufacturers of the United States.

"The National Dairy Products Company has been steadily engaged in acquiring ice cream plants in various portions of the United States.

Myers's Testimony Recalled.

"A series of mergers, combinations and consolidations has been going forward in the baking industry.

"The Kardex Company, formed by a combination of three companies, has acquired control of the Library Bureau and the Globe-Wernicke Company.

"The American Rayon Products Company, claimed to have combined mills representing 50 per cent. of the Rayon output, with the avowed purpose of aiding in stabilization through lessened competition."

The resolution pointed to the testimony last January before the House Committee on Appropriations of A. F. Myers, special assistant to the Attorney General, to the effect that "we are just on the threshold of the trust problem," and also that "companies buy not the stock of each other but the physical assets, and that, of course, takes the transaction out of Section 7 of the Clayton Act."

GOT AMERICAN FORTUNE LEFT TO HIS NAMESAKE

Swiss Living on Street in Thun on Which the Other Once Dwelt Must Face Trial Now.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, April 19.—Two men possessing the same name, Gottlieb Farny, but not related to each other, lived in the town of Thun in the same street, which caused much trouble to the postal authorities. Recenetly the elder Farny went to live as Basle, and was surprised to receive a letter from a relative in America asking why he had not acknowledged receipt of $5,000 inherited by him.

The inquiry revealed that the other Farny had received the money and kept it. When arrested he exclaimed indignantly:

"I stole no money; the postman gave it to me. How am I to know whether I have unknown relatives in America?"

The complicated case will soon come to trial.

PLANS SKYSCRAPER NEAR TIMES SQUARE

Syndicate Sells Corner at Eighth Av. and 42d St. to Builders for $1,500,000.

ONE OF SECTION'S TALLEST

Site Now Occupied by Six Three-Story Buildings, Stores and Lofts.

A skyscraper loft and office building, to be one of the tallest in the Times Square section, will be erected on the northeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street as the result of the sale of a large plot there yesterday by a syndicate of real estate operators. The price paid for the property was given as $1,500,00, but no estimate was made as to the cost of the proposed skyscraper.

The property is a landmark in the Times Square section and was sold by a syndicate of brothers, Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum and Fisher and Irving I. Lewine. It was sold to the Grened Corporation, Louis Golde, President, who will erect the new building. The sale was made by J. P. & L. A. Kissling as brokers.

Six three-story buildings occupied as stores and lofts, known as 662 to 668 Eighth Avenue and 261 to 265 West Forty-second Street, occupy the site, which has a frontage of 100 feet on Forty-second and 80 feet on Eighth Avenue. These old buildings have long been considered an eye-sore by merchants and property owners along Eighth Avenue. They were purchased by the present sellers a few months ago from the United Cigar Stores Company. The latter purchased the property from the Tracy estate, which held it for more than forty years.

The new owners paid a substantial amount of cash for the site and will obtain possession through the purchase of the leases which have a year and a half to run. Demolition of the present improvements and construction work on the new skyscraper will be started as soon as these leases have been bought up. The sale was made subject to the purchase of an easement for a subway station, as this corner has been proposed as an express station on the new Eighth Avenue subway.

The Grened Corporation is the owner of other large hoidings along Eighth Avenue, among them being the southeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, occupied by The Morning Telegraph. Although the corporation's plans for improving the Forty-second Street site are in the tentative stage, it has been definitely decided to us the ground floor for a large store. Negotiations are now under way with a department store concern to lease this store for a long term of years.

The corner is considered the choicest on Eighth Avenue, and its resale is understood to have brought a substantial profit to the selling syndicate. The Franklin Savings Bank recently built an addition to its building on the south corner of Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street, and the Chanin Construction Company announced a few weeks ago that it would proceed with the erection of a hotel and three theatres on the Eighth Avenue block front between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth, an old Astor holding.

CHANINS TO BUILD A $7,000,000 HOTEL

SITE HELD AT $2,500,000

A combination theatre and apartment hotel building estimated to cost $7,000,000 will be erected on the block front on the south side of West Seventy-fifth Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, by the Chanin Construction Company, which announced its purchase of the site yesterday. The property was purchased from Frederick Brown, the real estate operator, who was holding it at $2,500,000.

The property consists of 29,000 square feet, having a frontage of 157 feet on Broadway, with a frontage of 212 feet on Seventy-fifth Street and 150 feet on Amsterdam Avenue. It was sold through H. D. Baker and A. Robinson, brokers.

The buying company is a syndicate headed by Irwin S. and Henry I. Chanin, engineers and builders. They have already started the preparation of plans for improving the site with a motion picture theatre to have a seating capacity of 4,000 persons and a fifteen-story apartment hotel containing 500 rooms. The theatre will be in the rear of the plot, with an entrance from Broadway, it being planned to construct the hotel around the theatre. It is planned to incorporate the most modern improvements in the theatre and hotel features of the building.

The hotel will contain apartments in suites of one, two and three rooms. It will have a large roof garden and a ballroom and banquet hall large enough to accommodate 3,000 diners. There will be special dining rooms and provision made for an entrance on Seventy-fifth Street.

Possession of the site goes to the Chanins in ninety days, but the buyers will not begin to demolish the present improvements until September 1. It is planned to have the hotel part of the project ready for occupancy about May 1, 1927, and the whole project ready in the Fall of 1927. The estimated cost of the operation includes the cost of the land and building.

Frederick Brown took the site under a lease with option to purchase about two years ago and soon thereafter exercised his option. There are several apartment and store buildings on the site now.

This is the second theatre and hotel undertaking to be announced recently by the Chanins. They announced a few weeks ago that they would proceed with the plan to demolish the buildings on the block front on the easterly side of Eighth Avenue, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, and erect there a tail hotel to front on the avenue and three theatres in the rear. These buildings are estimated to cost about $7,500,000, including the cost of the land, which is a former holding of the William Waldorf Astor estate.

BOYS' MILITARY SCHOOL BUYS BOURNE MANSION

Famous Estate at Oakdale, L. I., Resold by Joseph P. Day Syndicate.

Indian Neck Hall, the country home of the late Commodore Frederick G. Bourne at Oakdale, L. I., has been sold to the Clason Point Military Academy of the Bronx.

The buyers will secure possession of the property on May 15, and it is understood that the present home of the academy, located in the old Ludlow mansion, is on the market.

The Bourne estate was purchased last October for about $1,000,000 by a syndicate headed by Joseph P. Day.

Just what will be done with the balance of the Bourne estate has not been decided upon, according to Mr. Day.

It is probable that it will be cut up into acreage and sold for small estates, as there has been an active market and a strong demand for developed acreage in this section of the island.

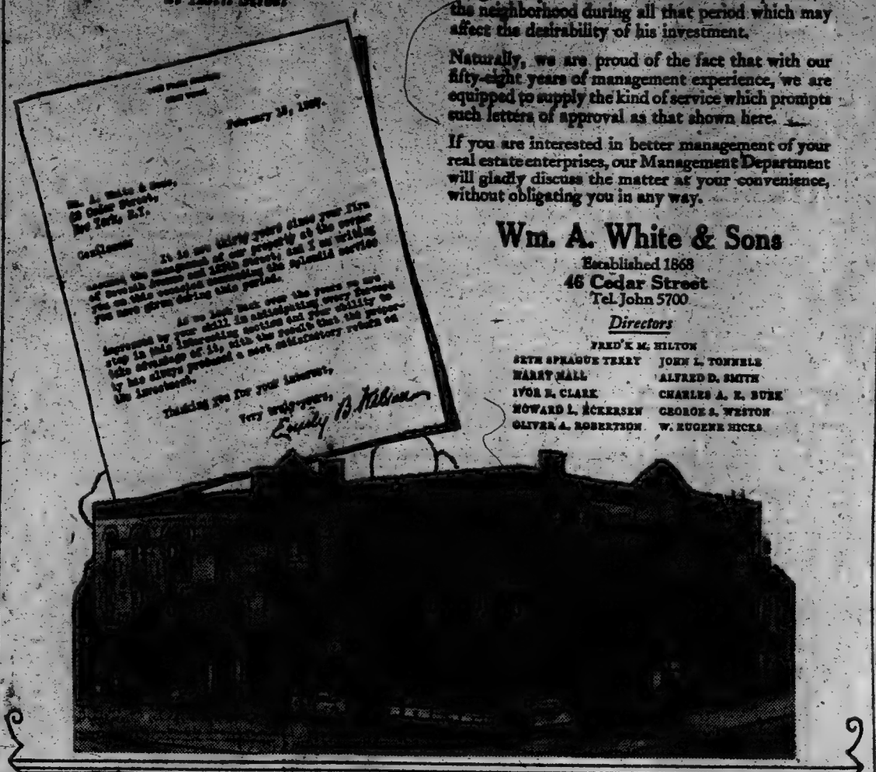
Seventh Avenue at 125th Street



IT is one thing to manage a property efficiently for the owner for thirty years, and quite another thing to keep the owner advised of developments in the neighborhood during all that period which may affect the desirability of his investment.

Naturally, we are proud of the fact that with our fifty-eight years of management experience, we are equipped to supply the kind of service which prompts such letters of approval as that shown here.

If you are interested in better management of your real estate enterprises, our Management Department will gladly discuss the matter at your convenience, without obligating you in any way.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19.—The disturbance that was over the Carolinas Sunday night is now moving northeastward between Bermuda and Cape Cod and it is probably increasing in intensity.

Pressure remains low over Alaska and it is low and falling from the Canadian Northwest southward to New Mexico. Battleford, Saskatchewan, reports the lowest barometer reading, 29.54 inches.

The area of high pressure and unseasonably cold weather from the Northwest has overspread practically all sections east of the Mississippi River, Louisville, Ky., reporting the highest pressure, 30.40 inches.

The temperature is now from ten to twenty degrees below normal in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the Atlantic and East Gulf States, except Florida.

The weather has become much warmer, however, in the Northwest and temperatures range from twenty to more than thirty degrees above normal in most of the Canadian Northwest, Montana, the Dakotas and Western Minnesota. Several stations in this area report a maximum of 82 degrees. The weather will be fair Tuesday and Wednesday east of the Mississippi River.

The temperature will rise Tuesday, except in the extreme South, and much warmer weather will prevail Wednesday in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, the Middle Atlantic and the interior of the North Atlantic States.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACT

To the Millions who will Buy Tires in the Next Few Weeks

When a great company knows within itself that it has accomplished something outstanding, it has a duty to the public, to its past customers, and to itself, to let that fact be known.

So we make this statement: there is more mileage in Goodrich Silvertown Cords this year than in any tires this company has ever built.

To have surpassed all previous standards of excellence is an accomplishment. For Silvertowns have always been the sum total of tire excellence.

This accomplishment is one of patience and careful attention to small things—small things which make a tremendous total. It is based, not on the introduction of any revolutionary new principle, but upon consistent improvement in the tire which has already proved itself "best in the long run."

With full realization that the word involves comparison, we pronounce the present Goodrich Silvertowns the finest tires ever made by Goodrich; finest in design and construction.

This statement is made with the knowledge that our files in Akron contain many letters from past users—motorists who have secured 15,000—25,000—35,000 miles from individual tires and sets of tires in previous years.

To you who are now considering the purchase of tires, we urge that you consult the Goodrich dealer and let him apply the Silvertowns best designed for your personal motoring requirements.
